Recent experience has made terribly clear that "science," as commonly understood, lends itself readily to increasing the efficiency of war, and, effectual as it has been in that direction, it has not met the often uttered expectation that this very efficiency would make war impossible. As for "wisdom," it seems to be about as much occupied as ever with the old, old task of getting victory, and peace only as the outcome of it. Disease, we are all agreed, is bad—something to be cured or avoided as much as possible, but there is no such unanimity as to war.

Why Should They Be "The Allies"?

That language is a curiously illogical thing is a fact that finds new illustration in the use we have all come to make of the word "Allies." For some truly mysterious reason we have come to mean by it, not the two nations that before the war were in a formal and explicit "alliance," and have since been "allied" in the full sense of the term as it has always been understood, but first the three, and now the four, countries, that had only an "entente" to start with, and even now are not as closely or even as truly "allied" as are Germany and Austria-Hungary.

The latter, indeed, we sometimes call "allies," but more often they are named as "the Central Powers," or "the Teutonic Powers," characterizations both clumsy and inaccurate, and never are they referred to as "Allies." That word, with a capital letter, is reserved for Great Britain, France, Russia, and Italy, wherever and whenever they act in conjunction.

Of course it is too late now to change the custom, and in language, if in nothing else, whatever is, is right, usage being supreme and etymology merely a humble and helpless commentator.

An Opinion Made in Germany.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some six or eight weeks ago reports were published in the newspapers to the effect that the German Emperor, addressing the prominent bankers of the empire, predicted peace in October.

Inasmuch as I doubted the veracity of this report, I sent an inquiry to one of my German correspondents, requesting a confirmation of the above statement, and just received a reply under date of Sept. 21, as follows:

> That the German Emperor expects the end of the war in October, and that he should have expressed himself to that effect, is not known to us. We do not consider a remark to that effect very probable, because, according to all appearances, the war is likely to continue for a number of months, inasmuch as our opponents, in their blindness and self-conceit, are not as yet willing to admit that they have lost the game.

I quote the above lines just as they have been transmitted to me, and leave it to your own judgment to publish the above, should you consider it of sufficient interest to your readers. WALTER SCHMIDT.

One of Belgium's Rich Exiles.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I note that the only thing that Professor McClellan condemns the Belgian people for is the lack of patriotism shown by the rich Belgians in not returning to their country. I recently belonged to this class and would be very glad to return to my native soil, dear to the heart of every Belgian, if I could be assured that I would not be sent to Germany, or be imprisoned, the fate that has befallen so many of my countrywomen. I have two homes in Belgium, one has been despoiled and stripped by the invaders, the other was seized and is now occupied by them. Would he have me be the guest of an enemy in my own home? When Children Play.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

So A. T. E. would coop up the kiddies and not allow them the use of the better paved streets for their roller skating! Doubtless when he was a boy (or girl) he roller skated. Or if he lived in the age before roller skates, he played games in the streets, and it was there that he most enjoyed himself in those gladsome days of youthful freedom.

But perhaps I have read him all wrong. He may have sat on the front stoop and twiddled his thumbs, or walked in the park with his hands clasped ministerially, and an almost angelic expression of meek submission on his countenance.

Life is too short and beautiful to take the harmless play of children so seriously, whether it be noisy or quiet.

Inconsistent.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Considering the fact that the antis claim that women are represented at the polls by their husbands, brothers, and fathers, it would appear rather inconsistent on their part to find comfort in the fact that a certain lady and her eminent husband-to-be disagree on a political issue.

TO THE MEMORY OF ARTHUR GREAVES.

I never met him, but no poet knew Better than I how kind and just he was;
He smoothed the feathers of my little muse
And taught its faltering wings to boldly spread
T'ward greater heights than I had ever hoped
It could have reached alone.
I am but one:—
How many, many more, ah, many more.
Must owe the thrilling sweetness of success
To his encouraging and guiding mind!
Would I could lay a fitting classic ode
Of deep Pindaric resonance and charm
Upon his honored tomb, instead of these
Unworthy lines, tear-stained and tremulous,
Yet (and for this virtue pardon their defects)
Straight from my heart where droops a mourning wreath.

PROFESSORIAL FREEDOM.

Columbia University, Oct. 11, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is doubtless fitting and natural that THE NEW YORK TIMES should find university professors "chartered libertines of speech," given to "too much foolish babbling," whenever the results of the investigations of university scholars lead them to question any features of the existing economic order. The position of THE TIMES in such matters is firmly established, and no one, I am sure, grudges economic interests such a competent organ.

Certain statements and implications of your editorial of Oct. 10, on academic freedom, entitled "The Philadelphia Martyr," seem, however, open to discussion. You apparently take the ground that a modern university is a personally conducted institution like a factory, and that if for any reason the utterances of any teacher, within or without the university walls, are objectionable to the Trustees, there is nothing more to be said. This view virtually makes the Trustees owners of a private undertaking. Perhaps I am mistaken in my understanding of the position of THE TIMES. I hope I am. But your statements that it was the "right" of the Trustees not to renew the appointment of Dr. Nearing; that many teachers profess views which set on edge the teeth of the sedate members of the corporation"; that "the Trustees are not obliged to give reasons for dismissal," give that impression.

In any case, a discussion by THE TIMES of whether modern universities should be conceived as privately owned and managed institutions, or as essentially public institutions, with responsibilities to the public, would be welcome.

Doubtless college professors are attached to their jobs and salaries. Even if they are as unique in that regard as THE TIMES would imply, I am quite sure that they will be satisfied with any adjustment of the difficulties connected with the control of universities which is based upon recognition that the modern university is in every respect, save its legal management, a public institution with public responsibilities. They are only too well aware that in many of our institutions of learning it is the legal right of a body of men (who are, educationally speaking, outsiders) to dismiss any teachers whose views set their teeth on edge, and give no reason. But they have been trained to think of the pursuit and expression of truth as a public function to be exercised in behalf of the interests of their moral employer—society as a whole. Consequently they regret, and are fast coming to resent, arbitrary exercises of a legal right based upon the conception of the relation of a factory employer to his employe. They ask for no special immunities or privileges for themselves. They will be content, for their own protection, with any system which protects the relation of the modern university to the public as a whole.

A PARENT'S OBSERVATION.

What May Happen to a Child in the Exciting Gary System.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to describe one parent's experience with the Gary system. My daughter had a term in a school where the principal has been quoted as saying that there are no complaints from parents and that every one is satisfied. I not only complained to this same principal, but I wrote to the Board of Education. At the time I made the complaints my main reasons were:

The system compels children to carry their clothing from one classroom to another. As departmental work is part of the plan, the children change rooms about every forty minutes. In her migrations from one end of the building to the other my daughter has lost a hat, an umbrella, a pair of gloves, fountain pen and numerous books. I found, too, that she was wearing her coat and rubbers all day to avoid losing them.

My objections to men teachers for girls, founded on excellent reasons, prompted me to request women teachers for my daughter. The principal met the situation by putting the child in classes where for several periods each day she was the only girl in the class.

As evidence that one parent, at least, is dissatisfied with the Gary system, I moved from that district to another, where the old system is still in operation. I find from my daughter's first monthly report that she is a term behind her class in all the essentials; so much so in arithmetic that I am compelled to engage a private instructor so that she may catch up with her class. A deficiency in grammar, spelling and history is a result of one term where an hour and forty minutes a day was spent taking photographs in vacant lots or in working in a mixed class of boys and girls in a laboratory with a science teacher; forty minutes in assembly, where the pupils listened to a phonograph; forty minutes in the gymnasium, where dancing was indulged in but never taught, and forty minutes in the zoological garden for nature study.

So much for the Gary system.

Stories of Arthur Greaves.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I should be sorry to have one chapter in the life of my old friend Arthur Greaves, late city editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES, pass unnoticed. He was one of the original members of the First Battalion, Naval Militia, State of New York. He enlisted, and served his term out, as a seaman, performing laborious, exacting, and even disagreeable duties with that spirit of unquenchable gayety which made all his acquaintances love him.

Furthermore, he was the first New York naval militiaman to score a hit at target practice at sea. This he did south of Fisher's Island, in the summer of 1891, with a shot fired from a six-pounder rapid-fire gun on the deck of the cruiser Newark. He was thereupon summoned to the bridge and congratulated by Capt. Silas W. Casey, commanding officer. Since Mr. Greaves never told of his own deeds, it remains for his sorrowing friends to recall some of them now.

W. J. HENDERSON.

New York, Oct. 20, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the death of Arthur Greaves the city loses a man of fine public spirit and of exceptional discernment where public opinion needed to be studied. When the Legislature of 1888 (I think) passed a law permitting a speedway for trotting horses through Central Park, and the City Reform Club protested, we got Arthur Greaves to tell us how to engineer the fight. He kept inventing new methods of warfare. I wish I could recall them all, but a few mass meetings and trainloads of irate citizens headed for Albany were mere humdrum details to his fertile mind. Members of the Legislature were pilloried and made to vote for repeal of the obnoxious act until, finally, the very same Legislature repealed its own act.

This fight is an inspiring tradition, and it was engineered by him.

Mr. McClellan's French.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a recent article on Belgium, George B. McClellan of Princeton University uses a plural verb with a noun in the singular: "Le monde chic sont les vrais coupables."

What authority in French grammar is there for such construction? Never have I, in the course of my reading, seen the expression "le monde sont," nor does the dictionary employ the word except in a singular form—that is, "le monde est."

WHY GRASS GROWS IN ANTWERP'S STREETS.

The Belgium That Was and the One That Is—Strange Efforts of the Conqueror to Conciliate a Captive People.

By J. L. BORGERHOFF,

Cleveland, Oct. 12, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your optimistic contributor, Mr. McClellan, writes that "the Germans are certainly doing their best to conciliate the Belgians." Yet those same Belgians are not allowed to move freely within the limits of their country, to cross the frontier, to send letters in or out of the country, despite the fact that the postal service is completely disorganized, all of which makes business on any scale impossible. They are not allowed to correspond at all with even their nearest relatives or friends abroad. I have tried repeatedly to communicate with my brother and sister, and had it not been for the kind efforts of our Minister in Brussels I should not now know whether those members of my family are dead or alive.

The report of the Rockefeller Foundation paints a picture strangely at variance with McClellan's, one from which the grazing cows, "as sleek and numerous as usual," are quite absent. That report states that the Germans have requisitioned grain, foodstuffs, cattle, and horses in all towns and villages; also stocks of cotton and wool, raw material as well as manufactured objects. And it adds: "In the course of our travels through Belgium we have seen no cattle, pigs, or horses." Did the Germans at least pay for what they took, as required by the laws of civilized warfare? An authentic report by the Antwerp Chamber of Commerce affirms that in March last 85,000,000 francs worth of goods had been seized in that city alone, 80 per cent. of which had not been paid for.

Those requisitions, contrary to international law, were not made for the use of the army, but were shipped to Germany, and comprised among all other conceivable articles, ivory, typewriters, and—toys. Do you wonder the grass is growing six inches high in the once so busy streets of Antwerp? At that time, as today, Belgium was paying a war indemnity, or fine, whatever you wish to call it, of $8,000,000 a month!

McClellan does not actually state that Belgium is happier under German rule than it was in its days of freedom, but any one reading his article might almost believe that such is the case. Those good and gentle soldiers throwing down lumps of coal from a railroad car to a smiling crowd—a picture much overworked by the apologists of the German perpetrators of Belgium's ruin—look so benign that one wonders how it is possible that ungrateful Belgians should call them sales Allemands, as Mr. McClellan admits they do. We read further: "The immediate result of the war was to increase the destitution which already existed, and the immorality and vice which always accompany great poverty." Where did the writer get his facts? Great destitution in Belgium before the war! And why, pray, are there so few Belgians to be found in prosperous America, when they have a very enterprising steamship line, the Red Star, constantly advertising for immigrants, and willing and eager to take them to the land of wealth and happiness any Saturday, all for $25? Immorality and vice! Does he know that divorce is almost unknown in Belgium, and totally unknown among the working classes? That at midnight practically every café or restaurant in Brussels is either closed or empty? That nowhere in Europe are churches better frequented, not only on Sundays but every day in the week? That there is nowhere in Brussels, Ghent, Antwerp, or Liége any display of immoral literature or pictures tolerated, and that it is unlawful to send immoral literature by mail or by any other public vehicle?

Extreme poverty and attendant immorality are generally the result of congested housing conditions. But did they exist in Belgium, this overpopulated country? Judge for yourself. There are no large landowners. Nowhere has the subdivision of the soil been carried on to such an extent, for one out of every ten is a landowner.

As to the overcrowding of cities, you will easily see how little there is of that if I state that nowhere are city rents so low as in Belgium. Towns like Bruges and Ghent have room to house 100,000 more people than they now number; the same might be said in varying proportions of numerous towns, including the capital, where apartments were up to very recently non-existing. Why is this so? Because the Belgian railroad system is so developed—30 kilometers per 100 against Germany's 12 kilometers per 100—and the rates of fare so low that the industrial laborers need nowhere live in the cities where they work, but can and do live miles away in the country, where they cultivate gardens in their leisure time, and where their wives keep poultry, a cow, or pigs, and thus make the small wages go a long way.

Belgian lacemaking was not a sweatshop affair, as your writer asserts. There are two or three large lace ateliers in Brussels; work there is carried on under tolerable conditions. In Malines, Bruges, and Ghent one could see any Summer's evening hundreds of women sitting outdoors weaving lace with their cobbins and cushions. It is true that they earned little, but this was due to lack of organization rather than through exploitation by middlemen. Hand-made Flemish lace edging could be bought in any store for 4 cents and upward a yard, according to width and complication of design. Again it must be stated that in but few cases was lace weaving the only source of income of the families engaged in it. Still, if the Germans have organized this industry so as to make it more profitable to the workers, they will have done at least one good thing in Belgium. Let me add that the general low scale of wages is due in part to the circumstance that Belgium was a late comer in the international field of commerce and industry, and that its only hope to compete successfully with England and low-selling Germany was to produce at a lower price, which could be achieved only at the expense of the laborer. But then living was cheap, rent, foodstuffs, clothing, building material were all considerably below what they are in other highly civilized countries.

Mr. McClellan attempts to minimize the destruction wrought so ruthlessly by the Germans. Dr. Bode, the Director of the Berlin Museum, states that no more than 26,000 buildings, affecting 150,000 people, were damaged. This estimate is probably too low. But, think of it, 26,000 houses in an area a little over a fourth of Ohio, or rather much smaller, for there are considerable parts of the country that have escaped the visitation of German Kultur altogether! Those 26,000 houses have been destroyed mainly between Visé and Termonde, and between Visé and the French frontier. Over the massacred civilians your contributor, charitably for his friends, throws the cloak of oblivion. In an article on Belgium under German rule, it would have been appropriate to make at least a passing mention of this effect of their benevolence. Nine hundred civilians killed at Dinant alone! Among them many men of 80, many women, and many little children. The names of all the victims are at present known, and may be had for the asking. We have had too much atrocity talk, it seems; we have heard more still about the wonderful achievements of the Germans. By the side of the latter it is useful sometimes to recall the former—lest we forget.

A DOLLAR FOR BELGIUM.

A Christmas Fund to Buy Shoes and Clothes for the Destitute.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Twelve months ago I made an appeal to Americans in behalf of the Dollar Christmas Fund for Belgians—one of the many efforts made here and in Europe to avert the threatened starvation of a nation. The response was prompt and generous.

To the American Commission for Relief in Belgium has been left the vital task of solving the food problem, and though the future of Belgium in 1916 is beyond prophecy and must apparently depend to a larger extent than ever upon American help, one may feel reasonably assured that the prospect of famine, for this year at least, has been definitely removed.

The task now undertaken by the Dollar Christmas Fund is to collect money for shoes, boots, and clothes which are most urgently needed, and for which special money must be provided. The necessity is appalling, because at the present time there are roughly 3,500,000 destitute people in Belgium and the number increases as the Winter approaches. The Belgians are unable to buy shoes, boots, and clothes themselves. Many even of the former wealthy are now in the daily bread line.

This year, as last, our fund has the warm approval and valued co-operation of a committee of representative citizens, including Colonel George Harvey, Dr. William T. Hornaday, Victor F. Lawson, Adolph S. Ochs, Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn, William C. Reick, Melville E. Stone, Oscar S. Straus, and George T. Wilson. All our workers are honorary, and all money collected will be expended by the American Commission for Relief in Belgium. No better guarantee can be given that every penny subscribed will be wisely spent. Percy Bullen of 66 Broadway, New York, has again undertaken the office of Secretary.

If, as many have forecast, Belgians have heights of sacrifice and martyrdom so far unattained to scale this Winter, we can, at least, insure that the old men, the frail women, the little children—many of them "orphans of war"—shall not be unshod and without your aid, as we know, the barefooted in Belgium this Winter will be the rule rather than the exception. I ask, therefore, with great earnestness that you send along your dollar bill—and send more if you can! All contributions should be addressed to HENRY CLEWS,
Treasurer Dollar Christmas Fund for Destitute Belgians.

An Example of Public Stupidity.

(From The World.)

George McAneny, in our opinion, is the ablest administrative expert in the public life of New York City or New York State. Neither the city nor the State, however, is able to find a way to employ his exceptional talents for public service. The best that municipal stupidity does with him is to make him President of the Board of Aldermen at an annual salary of $5,000.

Our neighbor THE TIMES has, therefore, engaged Mr. McAneny, who was once a member of The World's staff, as assistant to Mr. Ochs. THE TIMES may need Mr. McAneny very much, but New York City needs him a great deal more. THE TIMES, however, has enough intelligence to take him, and the city is stupid enough to let him go.

Yet New York is forever puzzled to understand why its public affairs are habitually mismanaged.

THE SERVILE STATE.

Is That Not What Mass Efficiency Tends to Bring About?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some of the opinions of notable men called forth by the present war have dealt with what seem to be fundamentals, and among such is a saying of Charles W. Eliot. He has pointed out that the war will be a supreme test of two kinds of efficiency, namely, what we have learned to know as German efficiency on one side and what we may call democratic efficiency on the other side. The first being produced by regulation, drill and authority, and the second by the individual initiative which is efficient even in the absence of regulation and authority. Of course the question of race has something to do with efficiency, and our own experience with slavery proved that as a slave the negro became very efficient and useful, and that he lost efficiency in gaining political freedom.

There is no question that before the present war both England and America had begun to copy German efficiency. Nothing succeeds like success, and Germany's sudden jump into industrial success and great wealth naturally led to a study of her methods. England had gone much further than had we in regulating, by law, the relations of labor and capital; she had embarked on a course which tended to give a legal status to labor, to bring it under legal control. In America we have not definitely decided on

FRIARS' CHEER RINGS TO SAN FRANCISCO

FAIR GIVES COHAN A MEDAL

The Friars laid the cornerstone of their new monastery at 108 and 110 West Forty-eighth Street yesterday with ceremonies the echoes of which were heard across the continent. Sounds improbable, doesn't it? But then the Friars do things that way. The echoes were carried over telephone wires from the old clubhouse in West Forty-fifth Street to the Administration Building of the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco. A battery of fifty or more receivers had been rigged up in the clubrooms, and when George McAneny, President of the Board of Aldermen, opened up the cross-country conversation with Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of the Western city, as many Friars were seated on long benches along the walls with the little black disks plastered to their ears, while several hundred more stood waiting for a chance to relieve them, so they could boast when they went home at night that they had heard the Mayor of San Francisco talking 3,000 miles away.

When Mr. McAneny had received the congratulations of San Francisco through Mayor Rolph, George M. Cohan, Abbot of the Friars, faced the transmitter. Thereupon the Panama-Pacific Exposition conferred its first long-distance medal, Frank L. Brown, a Director, figuratively pinning it on Abbot Cohan's cheek with a wreath of flowery words.

After that everybody who could think up any kind of an excuse to try his voice on the transmitter did so. James J. Corbett and Jack Gleason discovered acquaintances at the other end of the line; Irving Berlin sang some of the song that made him rich and famous, "Alexander's Rag Time Band"; Sam Harris exchanged repartee; the San Francisco crowd attached a phonograph, which played "Then You'll Remember Me," and many long lost brothers and cousins were reunited and asked all about the folks.

The telephone celebration lasted till after 12, and then the Friars piled into Forty-fifth Street, where a band was waiting. Any stranger could have told that Mr. Cohan had had a hand in the arrangements, for on emerging from the clubhouse, each Friar received an American flag to carry.

As the procession swung through Forty-fifth Street, up Seventh Avenue and into Forty-eighth, scores of touselled heads were poked out of four and fifth story windows, and on the pavements fronts that line the late Forties, and the parade might have been much longer passing several given points, had not there been important work ahead, for some of the visions at said points were most interesting.

Encouraged by the band, which kept reiterating Mr. Berlin's "When I Leave the World Behind," the marchers soon reached the new building, which was decked out in flags as giddy as a dreadnaught on parade. Negligees filled the windows up and down the block and perched on some scaffolding were batteries of camera and movie men shooting with the regularity of mitralleuse operators.

Again Mr. McAneny opened the meeting, telling in one of his neatest speeches how proud the city was of the Friars, and pinning on some verbal medals on Abbot Cohan, the cornerstone of the club. Then Daniel Frohman said a few words, the Rev. Father Joseph F. Delaney, Chaplain of the Catholic Actors' Guild, made a prayer, and Brother Cohan tapped the cornerstone with mallet and champagne bottle, proving again his versatility, while the movie men howled for him to face the camera.

"I am not a speechmaker," said Mr. Cohan with his usual modesty and bending the truth a bit, "so I will merely dedicate this building to Art, Literature, and Good Fellowship."

Cheers, the Friars' song, and a march back to the old home, where there was more speechmaking, led by the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, and a luncheon.

The new building, which is of steel construction, will be ready for occupancy early in the new year. It will be one of the finest and most commodious clubhouses in the city.

Burton Holmes's Travel Lectures.

Burton Holmes has announced a preliminary series of Fall travel lectures to be given in the Candler Theatre beginning Sunday night, Nov. 21. The Sunday lectures will be repeated the following Monday afternoons. The subjects will be "The Yellowstone Park," "England," "Scotland," "Rio de Janeiro and Brazil," and "Buenos Aires and Argentina."

A Dinner to Mary Austin.

Miss Elizabeth Jordan gave a dinner of twelve covers last night at the Cosmopolitan Club for Mary Austin, the author. The guests were Kate Douglas Wiggin, Ruth McEnery Stuart, Anne Crawford Flexner, Ruth Sawyer, Elizabeth Cutting, Ida Tarbell, Mrs. Samuel H. Ordway, Mrs. Charles M. Dewey, Miss Caroline K. Lowell, and Baroness de Seisitz of Petrograd.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mrs. John E. Alexandre has taken the house at 3 East Fifty-sixth Street for the season.

Mrs. George B. de Forest will chaperone a luncheon for her débutante niece, Miss Kate Wyman Griffin, to be given at Sherry's on Thursday, Dec. 9. Miss Griffin is a daughter of Dr. Henry A. Griffin of 91 Park Avenue.

Mrs. James R. Jesup, who has been at Lenox, has opened her house at 555 Fifth Avenue.

Mrs. Henry Clews, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Peabody, Mrs. Paul Morton and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Harriman are among those who have gone to the White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for the late Autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucius K. Wilmerding will be at 32 West Fifty-third Street for the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt plan to sail for Paris tomorrow, where Mrs. Vanderbilt will take up her work in the American Ambulance Hospital.

Mme. Menocal, wife of the President of Cuba, is sailing tomorrow for Havana. She came here in September to enter her sons at School. The Cuban Minister and Mme. de Cespedes have come from Washington, D. C., to be with Mme. Menocal until she sails.

Mrs. Samuel Riker, Jr., of 206 Madison Avenue, will introduce her daughter, Miss Frances T. Riker, and Miss Constance Chappell, daughter of Dr. Walter F. Chappell, at a reception on Saturday, Dec. 11. A dance for these débutantes will also be given at the Colony Club on Tuesday evening, Jan. 11.

A nation-wide movement has been begun to raise an endowment fund of a million dollars for the Actors' Fund of America. Offices have been established in the Hotel Astor, through the courtesy of William C. Muschenheim, to be known as the National Campaign Committee of the Actors' Fund of America, and from these headquarters the campaign will be carried on. Mrs. Florence O'Neil has been placed in charge of the committee, and associated with her will be William Charles O'Donnell, editor of Educational Foundations.

Before the outbreak of the European war the Actors' Fund was hard pressed for money to carry on its work, but the war increased the demands for help made upon it to such an extent that the treasury was depleted and its financial condition became precarious. A series of benefits was arranged by President Daniel Frohman and the Finance Committee, while considerable sums were realized from entertainments given in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago, the aggregate was not sufficient to place the organization on a sound financial basis.

The fund is spending nearly $70,000 a year in helping members of the theatrical profession, and the expenditure is increasing annually. As the income from benefits and similar sources can never be depended upon, the endowment fund is proposed as a means of freeing the charity from the constant danger of disintegration for lack of money. The committee has begun its work and has already addressed letters to many prominent persons throughout the country. The responses have been immediate and enthusiastic and have given rise to the hope that the project will meet with ultimate success.

The list of patrons will be headed by Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, and Governor Charles S. Whitman of New York. Responses have already been received from ex-President William H. Taft, Governor Dunne of Illinois, Governor Capper of Kansas, Governor Kendrick of Wyoming, Governor Craig of North Carolina, Governor Stevens of Montana, Governor Hunt of Arizona, Governor Hanna of North Dakota, Mrs. Clarence Burns, President of the Little Mothers' Aid Association, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, Jacob H. Schiff, Mrs. George J. Gould, Mrs. James Speyer, Miss Anne Morgan, Adolph Lewisohn, Mayor Mitchel, Paul D. Cravath, Henry Clews, Frank Tilford, Otto Kahn, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Frick, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Gary, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Flagler, Mrs. J. S. Bache, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Drexel, Jr.; Mrs. Helen Black Boswell, President Woman's Forum; Miss Anne Rhodes and Mrs. Jennie Grant, President New York Federation of Clubs.

The committee has been at work a week and some results will be announced shortly.

BISPHAM AS BEETHOVEN.

In the rôle of Beethoven, David Bispham, gave a praphic performance yesterday afternoon that had both dignity and pathos. The occasion was the presentation at the Harris Theatre of "Adelaide," an old-fashioned one-act play adapted by Mr. Bispham himself from the German of Hugo Miller. It is a romance played in the shadow of the cross the great musician bore.

The performance of "Adelaide" was preceded by a miscellaneous concert, of which the sundry numbers were somewhat dubiously embedded in a dark plot. The plot was rather more amusing than the book of the ordinary musical play, but it is difficult to escape the impression that this was quite unintentional.

Yesterday's matinée was the first of four. The others will be this afternoon, Monday, and Tuesday. It was this programme Mr. Bispham was warned he must not give on Sunday evenings, and the performance takes on an added interest from the light it casts on the Sunday theatre law, thus moving in mysterious ways its wonders to perform.

WAR BENEFIT IN MT. KISCO.

Society Women to Aid the American Ambulance in Paris.

An entertainment is to be given tomorrow night at Civic Hall, Mount Kisco, N. Y., by a group of society women, for the benefit of the American Ambulance in Paris.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF ARTHUR GREAVES

BODY TAKEN TO HARTFORD

Journalistic Associates and Men in Public Life Pay Respect to the Memory of Their Friend.

The funeral services for Arthur Greaves, city editor of THE TIMES for fifteen years, who died early Tuesday morning at his home at 220 West 107th Street, were held yesterday morning. Among those who attended the services at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, on Sixty-ninth Street between Broadway and Columbus Avenue, were present and former members of THE TIMES staff, newspaper men from other papers, officials and politicians who had become friends of Mr. Greaves during his career as a political writer, and men from many other callings who had come to know and respect him in his twenty-seven years as a New York newspaper man. Men were there who had been on the staff of THE TIMES since he first joined it in 1888, and young reporters whom he had hired only a few months before his death; men who had started their careers under him and had worked up, in many cases passing out from direct connection with him, but always retaining their friendship for the man whom they had learned to know as gentle and just in the exercise of authority.

At the altar, around a floral arch sent by a number of friends and arranged by Miss M. A. Taft of THE TIMES staff, were many other floral pieces from friends. Some of those who sent flowers were the staff of THE TIMES, the staff of The World, with which paper Mr. Greaves was connected from 1891 to 1900; the New York City News Association, of which he was President; the City Hall Reporters' Association, the Amen Corner, an organization of older political writers; Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of THE TIMES; Charles R. Miller, editor in chief; C. V. Van Anda, managing editor, and Louis Wiley, business manager, and the squad of day office boys who worked for Mr. Greaves.

The honorary pallbearers—Dr. Van Buren Thorne, Henry Loewenthal, W. Axel Warn, and T. W. Williams of THE TIMES staff; and Isaac D. White, Luther B. Little, Charles Steckler, Edward Rascovar, and Thomas Healy—met at the house at 9 o'clock with a few friends. Here the services began with a short prayer by the Rev. John C. Green of the First Congregational Church of Far Rockaway, an old friend of the family. The party then proceeded to St. Stephen's Church, where the Episcopal burial service was read by the Rev. Dr. Nathan A. Seagle, rector of the church, and the Rev. Mr. Green delivered a short eulogy of Mr. Greaves's character. The hymns, "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Abide With Me," were played by the church organist, Kendrick Lejeune.

Before 10 o'clock the funeral procession was on its way to the Grand Central Station to take a train for Hartford, Conn. It passed down Central Park West and Eighth Avenue to Forty-third Street and then turned east. As it passed THE TIMES Annex all work was suspended, and the employes of all departments formed on the sidewalk and stood bareheaded until the cortège had passed.

The body was accompanied to Hartford by Mrs. Greaves, Mr. and Mrs. James Greaves, a brother and sister-in-law; the honorary pallbearers, Mrs. Isaac D. White, Mrs. Van Buren Thorne, Miss Hunt, Mrs. Percy, and the Rev. Mr. Green, who conducted a brief service before the burial in Spring Grove Cemetery.

Practically all the members of the news and editorial staffs of THE TIMES were present at the church. Of the present staff of The World there were Albert E. Wood, Dr. E. P. Cohen, Isaac D. White, J. Angus Shaw, Herbert Bayard Swope, Reginald L. Foster, E. W. Osborn, and Arthur C. Clarke. The New York City News Association was represented by J. E. Hardenbergh and W. G. Henderson. Members of the Amen Corner were Tax Commissioner Charles T. White, Job E. Hedges, Secretary Thomas F. Smith of Tammany Hall, John W. McDonald, Charles Steckler, Luther B. Little, and Thomas O. McGill.

Among the former members of THE TIMES staff were Aimuth C. Vandiver, former Deputy Labor Commissioner Thomas F. Keith, Dr. Lyman Jones, John A. Moroso, Clerk William N. Penney of the Supreme Court, Supreme Court Justice Clarence J. Shearn, Dr. Raymond C. Ditmars of the Bronx Zoological Garden, George R. Miner, Professor Franklin Matthews of the Pulitzer School of Journalism, Louis Graves, Francis W. Halsey, and Secretary Louis W. Fehr of the Park Board.

Others present were Caleb Van Hamm of The Evening Journal, Thomas M. Dieuaide of The Evening Sun, Alfred A. Cook, Frank C. Perley, ex-Supreme Court Justice Alfred Steckler, Dr. John H. Girdner, Dr. Louis Livingston Seaman, George W. Wanmaker, Caleb Redfern, Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, Gustav Dorval, W. J. C. Meighan, Fire Commissioner Robert Adamson, ex-Fire Commissioner Joseph Johnson, Robert E. Livingston, George F. Lyons, Jacob Dreyfus, Raymond H. Hyde, William Raymond Sill, Louis Steckler, Ernest K. Coulter, C. Tracy Bronson, Harry Walker, John Messenger of The Washington Star, Patrick F. Roach, Harry Rascovar, Samuel C. Austin, James Rascovar, Frank Leroy Henry Allaway, and Mrs. Edward A. Dithmar.

ACTRESSES TO AID POLAND.

Will Sell Souvenirs at Paderewski's Talk and Recital.

A number of well-known actresses will sell souvenirs in Carnegie Hall tomorrow afternoon when Ignace Jan Paderewski talks on "Poland, Past and Present," at an entertainment to be given for the benefit of the Polish Victims' Relief Fund. After his address the pianist will give a recital.

Among the players who have offered their services are Lillian Albertson, Blanche Bates, Dorothy Donnelly, Blanche Duffield, Grace Elliston, Louise Closser Hale, Crystal Herne, Grace Heyer, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hunter, Mary Lawton, Florence Reed, Amelia Summerville, Charlotte Thompson, Josephine Victor, and Hattie Williams.

After the concert Mme. Paderewski will sell her Polish refugee dolls. The dolls were made by a colony of Polish refugee artists in Paris under the direction of Miss Mickiewicz, granddaughter of the great Polish poet, Adam Mickiewicz. The proceeds of the sale will go toward paying these men and women for their work and for buying milk for the starving babies of Poland. Mr. Paderewski has personally taken charge of the sale of boxes at his office in the Hotel Gotham.

Miss Keane Plays Before Royalty.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Doris Keane appeared today in "Romance" before Queens Mary and Alexandra at a Red Cross benefit performance.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

David Sapirstein, the pianist, will be included on next week's bill at the Palace. This will be his first appearance in vaudeville.

Arthur Hammerstein engaged by cable yesterday Henry Weldon for the bass role in the new Hauerbach-Friml operetta, "Katinka." When Oscar Hammerstein gave opera in London Mr. Weldon was one of his principals.

B. S. Moss has contracted with the Triangle Film Corporation to present their pictures in his theatres beginning Nov. 15. The program as given in the Knickerbocker will be shown in the Regent, Hamilton, Jefferson, and Eighty-sixth Street Theatres in conjunction with popular price vaudeville. The contract is for two years and involves $312,000.

S. L. Rothapfel, director of the Strand Theatre during the first year of its existence, left yesterday on a lecture tour which will take him to the Pacific Coast. He will lecture in twenty-five cities to the motion-picture producers, giving them the benefit of his experience. The Mutual Film Corporation arranged the tour.

ROB TIFFANY'S EXHIBIT AT SAN FRANCISCO FAIR

The fact that two big exhibits of precious metals at the San Francisco Fair had been robbed recently became known here yesterday. The first concern to suffer was Tiffany & Co., and the other Baker & Co. of Newark.

In the Baker & Co. robbery a thief eluded the guards in the Mines and Metallurgy Building, cut a panel from a glass case containing 300 gold and platinum pieces and got away with five of them, including one of the treasures of the exposition, a platinum nugget said to be the largest ever mined. The robbery was committed within a few feet of the exhibit of Tiffany & Co., which had been robbed in a similar way a short time before.

The articles taken were under Government supervision, but were insured against burglary and fire by Baker & Co. The lost nugget was more than two inches across and weighed twenty troy ounces. It had an intrinsic value of $1,200, but because of its size and rarity it had a much larger value to collectors.

Up to yesterday the only information received by the firm from the chief of the Department of Mines and Metallurgy was that the theft had been effected in a very Skillful manner at night, and that the other articles known to have been taken were a platinum nugget from a mine at Ecuador, a five-ounce bottle of platinum ore from a Russian mine; a bottle containing one and one-fourth ounces of refined gold, and one of pure gold, all valued at approximately $500.

"The large nugget was mined in Colombia in 1836," said A. M. Williams, Assistant Manager of Baker & Co. "It was sent with the other articles at the opening of the exposition. All were kept in a glass case secured with locks. We do not know how the robbery was effected, as we understood the entire building was patrolled day and night by watchmen."

None of the articles stolen from the Tiffany exhibit has been recovered. It is supposed both thefts were committed by the same persons, as the glass was cut out and replaced in the same way in both cases. Dr. George F. Kunz of Tiffany & Co. said the firm's exhibit was not a gem collection, but a metallurgical display.

MR. SPALDING'S RECITAL.

Young American Violinist Shows an Increase in Artistic Mastery.

It is now seven years since Albert Spalding first appeared before a New York audience as a violinist, and in the succeeding seasons he has made many appearances. It is hardly too much to say that every time he has played he has played better than he did the time before. That is something pregnant with significance for an artist's career.

He gave a concert yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall and showed himself to have gained a still greater power and to have reached a still higher stature as an artist. His progress has been not only in technical skill; it is still more significantly and potently shown in more elusive matters that make for an artist's distinction and power; in emotional feeling, in imagination, in maturity and fullness of expression, in the subtle differentiations of style.

Mr. Spalding, by his playing yesterday, read his title clear to a higher rank as an artist than he has ever before established for himself. It is this gain that comes from an inner growth, from the development of an individuality that keeps the highest ideals in view and yields in nothing to the temptations that beset the virtuoso. It has been a pleasure to note this young American artist's gain in the essentials of his art. The still finer refinement of his playing, in the certainty and accuracy of his technique, in the beauty of his tone, and especially in the intellectual and emotional insight of his readings.

Mr. Spalding played César Franck's sonata for piano and violin, with André Benoist, with much of the soaring imagination of the poetical feeling and with the touch of mystical rapture that belong to the music—an admirable performance. In the sarabande and its "double," in six-eight time, and the bourrée, from Bach's B minor sonata for violin unaccompanied, there was a fine strength and spirit, as well as a dexterous command of double stopping; and the sonata in D, by Handel, was played in a minner truly masterly in its breath and repose and fine taste, the feeling, and not too much feeling, that permeated the larghetto.

In Saint-Saëns's Havanaise Mr. Spalding displayed the more brilliant side of his powers, and especially some very clear harmonics, to advantage. He appeared also as a composer in a "plantation melody and dance," entitled "Alabama," in which he has made use of more or less familiar material, including the rhythm of "rag time," not without distinction.

BARNARD NEW STAGE ART.

No Need for Scenery for the Drama, Says Brander Matthews.

Professor Brander Matthews of Columbia addressed an open meeting of Wigs and Cues of Barnard College on "Dramatic Conventions" yesterday afternoon. Wigs and Cues has made a distinct departure this year, and for the first show, Dec. 12, will present three Irish plays, "Dierdre," "Jackdaws," and "The Pot o' Broth." In these the new draped scenery will be used. The new stage art will be discussed at later meetings.

"Just as grammar has its conventions," said Dr. Matthews, "just as sculptors cause a tree-trunk to grow up into the middle of a galloping horse to support it, so the drama, too, has its conventions. In Japanese tragedy each performer has a (supposedly) invisible attendant clad in black. They hand a fan, lift a cloak—and by the middle of the play you do not see them. The Mexicans always have the devil dressed in a United States Cavalry officer's uniform. Is this any more peculiar than, as I have seen in Irving's production, buildings coming down from the sky and settle down on the stage for a change of scene during an act. Certain conventions are necessary, but some are non-essential, and these the new scenery is trying to do away with. There are traditions of costume—it took Sir Walter Scott to remove the tall ostrich plumes from Kemble, playing Macbeth, and replace it by a single plume.

"There is really no need for scenery if you agree to it. To do a favor to the Commandant of Cadets at West Point Sir Henry Irving took Ellen Terry and the whole company up to West Point and played the 'Merchant of Venice,' in the messhall, draped with American Flags. Worse that that, Edwin Booth once played 'Hamlet' most successfully without costumes.

"But there are some inescapable conventions. You always expect to leave the theatre in two hours and a half. Playwrights, therefore, always condense. The characters say just the right things in the right order, which is absolutely untrue to life. Moreover, every one always understands everything the first time it is said. The convention of condensation leads to that of wit, where every one is as witty as the author. Take the convention of Shakespeare, where every character speaks blank verse. This would not be so in life—there was only one Shakespeare. But we are perfectly willing to make a bargain that all the characters shall partake of his imagination and brilliance. There are the conventions of opera and pantomime."

AMOS F. ENO DIES; PIONEER MERCHANT

NOTED FOR HIS HONESTY

He Paid Civil War Debts 36 Years Afterward—Gave Mechanics and Tradesmen Society $65,000.

Amos F. Eno, one of the pioneer merchants of this city and the owner of much real estate, died suddenly yesterday from acute indigestion, at his home, 32 Fifth Avenue, in his eighty-second year. He had been in good health until today when he was suddenly stricken. Owing to his objection to having a telephone in his home, the servants were unable to summon medical aid immediately, and were forced to go out to get a physician. When the doctor arrived, Mr. Eno was dead. On Wednesday he visited his office at 13 South William Street, as he had done for the last thirty years.

Mr. Eno was a son of the late Amos R. Eno, a business man of this city, and was born in Simsbury, Conn. He was the eldest of six children, two of whom, William P. Eno, and Mrs. C. B. Woods, survive him.

His career was remarkable for an example of old-fashioned honesty. When the civil war began, he was head of the firm of Eno, Van Buren & Valentine, with offices at 312 Broadway, doing business in silks and dress goods with South America and the Southern States of this country. The repudiation of its claims by the Southern merchants led to its bankruptcy, and it went into the hands of a receiver. A settlement was effected with the firm's creditors, and Mr. Eno went to war with the Seventh Regiment. Later he was promoted, and at the end of the war was a Colonel in the Union Army.

Mr. Eno returned to this city after the war and went into business, in which he was very successful. Thirty-six years after his firm had failed and settled with its creditors Mr. Eno personally paid off the debts of the firm, although not obligated in any way to do so. His old creditors received checks from him, and he expressed himself as very annoyed when the story became public.

On Oct. 7, two weeks ago, Mr. Eno gave the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen $25,000 and the property at 94-96 Thompson Street, or an equivalent of $65,000.

He was unmarried, and was a member of the Century, Union League, Manhattan, Downtown, and Turf and Field Clubs. Only his sister and brother survive him.

John Wells James.

John Wells James, for more than fifty years a spice merchant in this city and a brother of the late Darwin R. James a former Congressman and at one time Park Commissioner of the old City of Brooklyn, died on Tuesday at his home, 1,493 Pacific Street, Brooklyn, in his seventy-seventh year. Mr. James was born in Williamsburg, Mass., and was graduated from Williams College with the class of 1859 and from Bellevue Medical College in 1863. He never practiced the medical profession, and soon after his graduation he went into the spice business with his brother as a member of the firm of Darwin R. James & Brother. Mr. James was a Trustee of the East Brooklyn Savings Bank and for many years Treasurer of the Bushwick and East Brooklyn Dispensary. For more than half a century he was a member and the Treasurer of the Central Congregational Church. Mr. James is survived by his wife and four sons, William, John W., Warner, and Halstead James, all in the wholesale drug business and members of the firm of Towns & James of Brooklyn.

Eugene Thurston Bogert.

Eugene Thurston Bogert of 145 East Thirty-fifth Street and a former member of the New York Stock Exchange died yesterday at the Hotel Seymour, 50 West Forty-fifth Street, from heart disease. He had been ill for the last two years and returned yesterday from his Summer home at Saratoga.

He joined the Stock Exchange in the late sixties and for years was a prominent operator on the floor. Mr. Bogert was widely known in the financial district and retired from active business seven years ago. He was a member of the Manhattan Club. He is survived by his wife and daughter.

Mrs. Emily K. Baer.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Oct. 21.—Mrs. Emily K. Baer, 75 years old, widow of George F. Baer, late President of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, died at her residence, Hawthorne, at Reading, tonight, from heart disease. Mrs. Baer was stricken a week ago. She was born in Somerset, Penn., and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Kimmel, the former a prominent attorney. She was wedded to Mr. Baer in 1876. Until the death of her husband Mrs. Baer lived in Philadelphia, but since then had resided at Hawthorne, where the Baer estate at Reading, which was bequeathed to her by her husband. She left five daughters, all married.

Rear Admiral Joseph B. Parker.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—Rear Admiral Joseph Benson Parker, former Medical Director of the United States Navy, died at his home here today in his seventy-fifth year.

He was born in Carlisle, Penn., and received the degree of A. B. from Dickinson College, and three years later the degree of A. M. In 1862 he was graduated from the Bellevue Medical College in New York. Admiral Parker was appointed an assistant surgeon of the United States Navy in 1863 and was advanced through the various grades until retired in 1903 with the rank of Rear Admiral.

John T. Nolan, School Principal.

John T. Nolan, Principal of Public School 8 for the last nine years, died yesterday at his home, 1,917 Davidson Avenue, Bronx, in his sixty-second year.

He was born here and was a graduate of Cooper Union. Mr. Nolan commenced teaching twenty-eight years ago, and for several years taught under Evander Child, the noted educator. He was a former President of the Brownson Club and a member of the Emil Association. His wife, three sons, and a daughter survive him.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Unsettled barometric conditions in the Atlantic States caused a continuation of the local rains in that section, followed by clear weather over the northern districts. Over the remainder of the country the weather was fair, except in the North Pacific States, where there were rains and southerly gales, caused by a marked disturbance that is now over British Columbia. Temperatures are much above the seasonal average in the Atlantic States, the upper Mississippi and Ohio Valleys, and the interior West. With the exception of local rains Friday in the South Atlantic States, the weather will be fair during the next two days east of the Mississippi.

FORECASTS FOR TODAY AND SATURDAY

Eastern New York—Fair Friday; cooler east. Saturday fair.

Western Pennsylvania—Fair Friday and Saturday; warmer.

8 A. M.	57	63	4 P. M.	73	73
6 A. M.	60	62	8 P. M.	72	72
9 A. M.	62	62	9 P. M.	65	66
12 M.	71	68	11 P. M.	66	64

EDUCATION NOTES.

Shakespeare's "A Winter's Tale" will be given by students of the Washington Irving High School on Dec. 16 and 17 under the auspices of the Department of English.

The Board of Education will hold a meeting on next Wednesday.

The services of the following named persons in the School Buildings Bureau have been dispensed with for the reason that lack of work renders their further employment unnecessary: L. C. Denis, Albert D. Ohl, Jessie Edgar L. Messenger, and Edward G. McElroy, architectural draughtsmen, and William A. Farrell, Alexander Loewy, and James Quinn, inspectors of masonry and carpentry.

The report of the Commitee on Elementary Schools in reference to changing the regulations regarding kindergartens and kindergarten teachers will come up for consideration at next Wednesday's meeting of the Board of Education.

The absence of ten Principals and two teachers in Richmond Borough, caused by attendance at the funeral services of Darwin La Bardwell, has been allowed with pay.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

New Tops for War Specialties Made—Foreign Exchange Rates Off Further.

The stock market was very active and, through most of the day, strong yesterday, with no new influences to change its course. The gains which some of the war stocks showed at the end of the session were a reminder of the spectacular advance that was in progress when the sinking of the Lusitania caused a setback that has not been entirely forgotten even yet. There appears to be no level for the leaders in the war stock enthusiasm at which many well-informed people will not pronounce them cheap. This is particularly true of Bethlehem, which gains in strength as it climbs to new high records. Yesterday's performance in this issue was especially remarkable, even remembering the previous big gains, for it sold up to within a single eighth of $600 a share and closed at 588, with a net advance for the day of 59 points. The floating supply of this issue is so small that, if the larger holders wait the movement out, it is not difficult to imagine the stock selling at any price which its excited friends predict for it.

Bethlehem was, however, but one of the issues which spurted ahead yesterday. The automobile issues were uniformly strong under the leadership of Studebaker. That issue closed at 191, with a net advance of 15 points. General Motors gained 21, Willys Overland 5½ and Maxwell 4¼. Industrial Alcohol sold up 8% at the close, with Distillers up 5%. The action of these specialties gave the rest of the market an appearance of much greater strength than it had. As a matter of fact, many of the standard issues suffered fractional losses. Steel sold up to 87¾, a new high record for recent years, but retained only half of its gain at the close, made at 86¾.

War stocks were helped materially by the publication of the September foreign trade figures, although the reflection of increased activity at industrial centres which they furnish did not increase the popularity of the rails. The September merchandise exports were the largest on record, with the single exception of those for last February. They totaled $297,766,000, and made the favorable trade balance for the month $146,343,000. The same influence was probably at work under the foreign exchange market, for demand sterling sold down to $4.86⅞, the lowest price made in the last five weeks, and about 6 cents below the price made on the upturn following the beginning of credit negotiations. Bankers are becoming reconciled to these rates, and few of them are optimists enough to believe that even the establishing of large banking credits will do more than hold rates at about their present levels.

Foreign exchange men saw in yesterday's weakness not only the result of record-breaking export figures, but a lessening of foreign sales of American securities. It is quite plain that the credit arrangements so far made are not sufficient to care for the purchases being made here, and bankers are prepared to see this week's gold shipment of $25,000,000 repeated, not once but several times in the next few months. It is expected that the next consignment will reach this city next week.

LONDON MARKET IS ACTIVE.

War Loan a Feature of Exchange Dealings.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The efforts of the Bank of England to control the money market are meeting with success, and floating supplies are diminishing rapidly. Discount rates have advanced to 4⅞ per cent. for three months, and it is believed the quotation for Treasury bills will be raised to over 4½ per cent. And the war financed temporarily thereby. American exchange was weak, with few buyers, at $4.67⅛.

The war loan continued a buoyant feature on the Stock Exchange. A huge investment business was done, while holders of consols were buyers for conversion purposes. Colonial bonds, Brazilian and Japanese issues, and a few American shares were firm. Mexican rails and mines were in active demand.

American securities were quietly steady and featureless.

BREAK IN COTTON WROUGHT BY BULLS

Unable to Put Up Prices, They Attack Market to Better the Technical Condition.

DAY'S LOSS 23 TO 34 POINTS

About 50,000 Bales of December, January, and March Sold in First Two Hours—No Vital News.

Heavy liquidation took place in the cotton market yesterday, and as a result prices declined 23 to 34 points from the closing of Wednesday. There was no particular news to accompany the break. Some of the big bulls, including a prominent Texas operator, came to the conclusion that the market was in an overbought condition and that higher prices could not be brought about until the technical position had been readjusted.

Selling began immediately on the opening and prevented a response to a fairly good set of Liverpool cables. About 50,000 bales of December, January, and March were sold in the first two hours, and prices were hammered down about 20 points. There was a further decline of 10 points or so before the close.

Accompanying the selling was a rumor that F. M. Cordill, the well-known traveling crop expert, had issued a crop estimate of 13,000,000 bales. A Memphis wire received a little later in the day contained a denial of this rumor. In addition to the over-bought speculative position it was felt that too much cotton was being bought by speculative country merchants and that too little was reaching the legitimate trade channels.

It is only fair to state, however, that the chief sellers of yesterday are bullish for ultimate results and that they believe the market will be in a position for a sharp advance as soon as liquidation has relieved its present stale condition.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were easy, 7 to 15 points decline. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 25 points decline; 12.40c for middling. Futures closed easy.

PUTS WABASH ROAD IN CREDITORS' HANDS

Court Orders Equitable Trust to Turn It Over to Reorganization Committee.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 21.—Judge Elmer B. Adams of the Federal District Court today ordered the Equitable Trust Company of New York to turn over to the Reorganization Committee of the creditors of the Wabash Railroad the entire railroad and property which the trust company recently bought for $18,000,000 at a foreclosure sale. This, it is believed, will pave the way to a speedy termination of the receivership and the reorganization of the road.

Tonight Winslow S. Pierce, Chairman of the Reorganization Committee; Lawrence Greer, attorney for the company, and representatives of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., bankers, of New York, who are financing the reorganization plans, went to Indianapolis, and it was said that they would apply to the Secretary of State of Indiana for a charter for a new Wabash Railroad Company. It was learned that E. F. Kearney, President, and co-receiver of the present Wabash Company, would be President of the new company.

The new company, it is understood here, will take charge of the Wabash properties on Nov. 1. The present company is incorporated in Ohio. E. B. Pryor is co-receiver with Mr. Kearney. Receivers of the road and New York bankers who for more than a year have been attempting to finance the reorganization held a long conference here today with Judge Adams, under whose jurisdiction the receivers operate.

No formal announcement of what transpired at the conference was made, although it was understood that the details of the proposed plan of reorganization were being submitted to the Federal Court for approval.

Steps preliminary to the reorganization of the Wabash Railroad were completed two weeks ago, when the Reorganization Committee announced that a plan had been put into operation. Under the original scheme for putting the property on its feet an assessment of $30 a share on the stock was ordered by the committee. The shareholders did not take kindly to this, and after negotiations covering several months the bondholders consented to meet the assessment themselves. The figure was $300 upon each $1,000 bond, and the funds raised amounted to $27,300,000.

From this the Equitable Trust Company will be reimbursed to the amount of $18,000,000. The balance will be used as working capital for the new company and to pay for constructive operations.

New Carnegie Trust Co. Dividend.

If the Supreme Court permits, a 5 per cent. payment will shortly be made to the depositors of the defunct Carnegie Trust Company. The payment will aggregate about $300,000. The State Superintendent of Banks has about $780,000 on hand, and all of it would be paid but for the claim of Jacques Lebaudy, "the Emperor of Sahara," that he be made a preferred creditor for $237,000. Lebaudy lost his suit in the Supreme Court and the case is now pending in the Appellate Division. Enough of the money will have to be withheld to meet this claim if Lebaudy wins. An application for permission to make the payment of 5 per cent. will be argued next Thursday.

RAILROAD EARNINGS.

DENY NEW LOAN FOR ALLIES.

J. P. Morgan & Co. Admit There Will Be Banking Credits.

Publication of reports based on an interview with Lord Reading, Chairman of the Anglo-French financial mission, that Great Britain and France had other loans under contemplation was responsible yesterday for an official denial that any such new financing was in mind. The denial was made by J. P. Morgan & Co., and was accompanied by an explanation that the stories referred to were evidently due to a misunderstanding of Lord Reading's remarks regarding the proposed banking credits practically arranged before his departure. This is the statement:

Neither Great Britain nor France has any intention, so far as we are aware, of offering further loans to investors in this country in the near future. Their representatives have stated to us that with the $500,000,000 loan already arranged and now being steadily absorbed by investors, together with such supplemental banking credits as may be under way, they have no plan of taking steps toward a further loan.

An announcement is looked for early next week of the creation of bank credits here by the joint stock banks of London, to be used for exchange operations. It is not expected that the initial credit will be large.

OUTLOOK FOR COPPER STOCKS

Right through the present year our frequent analyses of the copper situation have proven absolutely correct. This is because our judgment is based on expert study and not on guesses. We have now issued a further analysis covering this situation, which should be of unusual interest to all holders of the standard issues, such as Utah, Ray, Inspiration, Chino, Miami, Tennessee, etc. Send for a copy while the reserve supply lasts.

SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION.

SAVE AND BE SAFE

For your savings the great consideration should be Safety First.

The old reliable Franklin Society for Home Building and Savings operates under New York's revised Banking Law, which provides the strictest known system of supervision. Thrifty thousands have found the Society a help and a blessing during more than a quarter of a century.

On sums of $10 or over (up to $5,000) the Society has always paid dividends as large, and usually larger, than are paid by the best savings banks. The usual rate has been 4½% per annum. Payments made before Nov. 1st earn from that date.

OGDEN MILLS FILES DENIAL.

Answers Suit of Sadie E. Hidden to Recover Rock Island Funds.

Ogden Mills filed his answer with the Supreme Court yesterday in the suit of Sadie E. Hidden, who wants him to return to the treasury of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, known as the Illinois Company, a large amount of money which she says he as a Director voted to expend in violation of law. She also accuses him of having countenanced various other unlawful transactions, such as the delivery of bonds of the company without consideration. Mr. Mills is sued as a Director. His co-defendants are the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company, known as the Iowa Company, the Illinois Company, and the Central Trust Company as trustee.

In his answer Mr. Mills denies practically all of the charges made against him, and as a defense he says the plaintiff was not a stockholder of the Illinois Company prior to Jan. 20 last; that prior to that date she was only the holder of a few bonds of the Iowa Company, and that as she made no objections to any of the transactions charged in her suit she should be barred from suing. In her complaint the plaintiff said she owned $3,000 worth of 4 per cent. bonds of the Illinois Company and that her action was brought for herself and in behalf of any others who cared to join her.

Concerning one transaction charged against him Mr. Mills admits that on Dec. 1, 1909, as a Director of the Illinois Company he voted to authorize or ratify a loan to the Iowa Company of $7,314,280, and that the latter company delivered to the Illinois Company "to represent the loan" unsecured debentures of the Iowa Company of the par value of $7,500,000. He also admits that $6,112,000 of the principal of these bonds has not been paid. As a defense to this transaction he says that the interest on the bonds, which matured on Sept. 1, 1913, had been punctually paid and that the bonds were refunded with a new issue of similar debentures of the Iowa Company due on Sept. 1, 1917.

Mr. Mills says that when these debentures were purchased the Iowa Company owned assets exceeding in value all of its debts, that it was solvent on Dec. 1, 1909, and continued so for several years thereafter.

EXCHANGE SEATS AT $72,000

Norman P. Ream Pays That Price to be a Stock Broker.

Notice of transfer of the Stock Exchange membership of Adolph H. Borman, deceased, to Norman P. Ream was posted in the Exchange yesterday. Mr. Ream is a son of Norman B. Ream, also deceased, who was one of the original Directors of the United States Steel Corporation and the National Biscuit Company. The price of the seat bought by Mr. Ream was $72,000, a new high record for the year.

Other seats to sell at this price and posted for transfer yesterday were those owned by Edward H. Bonbright, Franklyn L. Hutton and the late Frederic S. Rook. They were bought by Arnold L. Scheuer, Robert W. Morgan, and J. Upshur Moorehead.

The Committee on Admissions announced that these men had been elected to membership on the board: George P. Bissell, Frederick F. Ristine, Marshall Adams, and Charles S. Unterneyer.

DENIES SCHWAB IS BUYING.

Says He Is Not Seeking American and British Company.

Persistent rumors that Charles M. Schwab and his associates had bought control of the American and British Manufacturing Company were denied yesterday by J. H. Ward, Mr. Schwab's assistant in the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. Mr. Ward was told that confirmation of the story had been given in quarters of apparent authority.

"Well, this office is the place of highest authority," he replied, "and I can say that the rumor has no basis in fact. Neither Mr. Schwab nor the Bethlehem Steel Corporation has bought or is seeking control of the American and British Company."

The American and British shares were again active and strong on the Curb yesterday, the common selling as high as $65, a rise from the previous day's official close of $13, while the preferred advanced to $130, compared with $95 at the close Wednesday afternoon. The common sold a few years ago as low as 33 cents a share at auction, and sales at 10 cents a share have been reported. The company is working on contracts for ordnance and ammunition for the allied Governments.

State.

The State Civil Service Commission held its monthly meeting in the room of the Municipal Commission in the Municipal Building yesterday. Nothing but routine business was done. The application of the Municipal Civil Service Commission of Binghamton, which becomes a city of the second class Jan. 1, 1916, for permission to change its rules providing for the terms of office of the Commissioners came up and was reserved.

United States.

The commission announces for Nov. 2 an examination for senior electrical engineer, Grade 2, for men only, to fill vacancies as they may occur in the Interstate Commerce Commission until further notice. This is a new examination for the position of inspector of the valuation of the property of common carriers, at salaries ranging from $1,800 to $2,700 per annum, with necessary expenses when absent from headquarters in the discharge of official duties. Appointments to these positions will be almost entirely for duty in the field. Competitors will not be assembled for examination, but will be rated on general and technical education, and preliminary or apprenticeship training, and responsible experience and fitness. Applicants must have reached their twenty-fifth but not their forty-fifth birthday on the date of the examination. Further information may be obtained from the commission, Washington, D. C.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Adverse action was taken yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in protests by Richards, Atkinson & Haserick, Boston, claiming free entry for paper claimed to be parchment and vellum. The customs officials described the merchandise as parchment paper and took duty under the tariff at the rate of 25 per cent. ad valorem. Testimony of the Boston customs examiner convinced the board that the proper duty had been levied.

Sussfeld, Lorsch & Co. won their contention that telescopes imported by the firm were the kind of "telescopes" specified in the Tariff act and accordingly dutiable at 35 per cent. ad valorem. The Collector returned the articles at 35 per cent. as "toys." At the trial witnesses for the importing firm testified that the articles in dispute had never in the trade been known otherwise than as "telescopes." Judge Sullivan held that the evidence on this point was absolutely convincing, and that no justification existed for the Collector's classification. A reliquidation was ordered.

Hight & Page, Portland, Me., imported merchandise invoiced as "hardwood lumber." The Collector levied 15 per cent. duty as manufactures of wood, whereas the importers claimed free entry as sawed or rough lumber. The Collector reported to the board that the merchandise is not commercially bought and sold as lumber by the thousand feet, but is commercially known as "stair treads," and sold at 55 cents each as such. Judge McClelland, overruling the claim, held that the protestants failed to overcome by evidence the classification made by the Collector.

Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company, New Orleans, went before the board with the claim that so-called Nordica extract was non-alcoholic, and as such entitled to entry at 60 per cent. ad valorem. The Collector was reversed in returning the commodity at 40 cents a pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem as alcoholic perfumery.

The New York Merchandise Company lost in the claim that one-piece table knives and table forks with handles composed of aluminum were properly dutiable at 25 per cent. ad valorem as table utensils of aluminum, or at 30 per cent. as manufactures of metal. Judge Fischer, affirming the Collector's assessment of 30 per cent. ad valorem, pointed out that the paragraph under which duty was taken provided specifically for articles imported with handles.

The board upheld the claim of the American Express Company that extra or repair parts of sprocket chains are properly dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of metal not specially provided for. The Collector was reversed in levying 25 per cent. duty under the provision for "sprocket chains."

Hugo Cahn & Co. claimed that metal bottle caps were not decorated, and should be admitted at 30 per cent. ad valorem. It appeared that the caps were decorated with a design in the form of a bunch of grapes, crown, or similar design. On this account, the board affirmed the Collector in taking 40 per cent. duty.

Great Activity in Coke Region.

CONNELLSVILLE, Penn., Oct. 21.—The production of coke in this region last week amounted to 421,000 tons, an increase of nearly 4,000 tons over the previous week. Shipments amounted to 422,000 tons, an increase of about 5,000 tons. Ovens are being fired as fast as labor can be found for them, 330 being blown in last week.

NEW TOBACCO COMBINATION

Concerns with $1,500,000,000 Capital Unite for Protection.

The Tobacco Merchants' Association of the United States has been formed by the leading companies, representing active capital of $1,500,000,000. Headquarters will be established in this city in a few days to widen the interests of the tobacco trade in both the manufacturing and distributing departments.

Among the thirty Directors are George W. Hill of the American Tobacco Company, Edward Wise of the United Cigar Stores Company, George L. Storms of the Tobacco Products Company, Frederick Hirschhorn of the United Cigar Manufacturers Company, and Leon Schinasi of Schinasi Brothers.. One phase of the association's work will be to keep a watchful eye on legislation affecting the tobacco trade.

"The tobacco people have in the past expended their energies fighting one another," said a spokesman for the organization yesterday, "and the result has been that when the Government wanted to increase taxes it found the tobacco business easy prey. Because of its disorganized condition, unfair attacks made on it have not been met. All this association proposes to do is to see that the tobacco trade gets a square deal."

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

The market on the Consolidated Exchange, as a whole, reflected firmness early, but there were reactions in many stocks toward the close. It was among the railroad shares particularly that the recessions were noticeable. It was in United States Steel that trading interest particularly centred. The renewed display of strength by that stock attracted general attention and caused a general advance in all the properties allied to the steel and iron industry.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The wheat market was again dominated by the movement, and, while price changes during the day were irregular and more or less feverish, the tendency was downward and final quotations were 1⅝ to 1¾c net lower. In the local cash market No. 1 Northern Duluth was quoted at 1.06½, and No. 1 Northern at 1.08, cost, insurance, and freight Buffalo.

OATS.

The oats market was comparatively quiet, and after an early advance and a subsequent decline prices closed not unchanged for the day. Strong markets abroad were thought to assure a continued active export demand, and this had a tendency to check selling. The local cash market was steady at 41¼@42¼c; No. 4 white, 40@41c; ordinary to fancy clipped, 40@44c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was easy early, owing to a further sharp decline in the price of live hogs, but prices rallied on covering and more active outside buying. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 22,000; estimated for Friday, 14,000; Kansas City received 7,000, and Omaha 5,000.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Deal Reported Pending for the Sale of the Kennedy Property on West Fifty-seventh Street—Investor Buys Apartment House in Washington Square Section—Bronx and Suburban Trading.

Negotiations are reported pending for sale of the home of the late John S. Kennedy, at 6 West Fifty-seventh Street, and the adjoining property owned by the estate as a site for a commercial structure.

Besides the family at No. 6, a large house 40.6 feet wide, the plot includes the adjoining 25-foot house at No. 8 and the abutting parcel at 7 West Fifty-sixth Street, giving a total frontage of 65.6 feet on Fifty-seventh Street and 25 feet on Fifty-sixth Street.

Edward B. Bruch, who was reported as having acted as the broker in the transaction, declined to discuss the deal. The property is assessed at $557,000 and has been held lately at over $600,000. Adjoining the Kennedy holdings on Fifty-seventh Street is the Hecksher plot, at the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue, the former site of the Whitney mansion, and lately improved by August Hecksher with a two-story commercial building, while on the other side, at 10 and 12, is the new business building erected about two years ago by Michael Dreicer.

More Buying in Washington Square Section.

Another interesting deal in the Washington Square section, where several valuable parcels have changed owners during the past week or ten days, was reported yesterday by G. Reynolds Gibbons, who purchased for an investing client 20 and 22 West Tenth Street.

The property, which was sold by the Twenty West Tenth Street Corporation, of which Richard S. Elliott is Treasurer, consists of a five-story flat on a plot 42 by 92.3 feet, located between Fifth Avenue and Sixth Avenue.

The sellers purchased the property a couple of years ago from the estate of Francis Bacon. On the site was a four-story dwelling, which the new owners converted to apartment use, the operation representing the largest alteration undertaken in that district in recent years. The house proved a ready renter, many of the apartments having been leased during the construction stage.

On Tuesday the old Daniel B. Sickles home, on the corner of Ninth Street and Fifth Avenue, was purchased by William Lustgarten & Co. as a site for a twelve-story apartment house, and the private dwellings 52 and 54 West Ninth Street were sold to investors for occupancy.

Bronx Sales.

Charles B. Farwell sold for the Kouwenhoven Estates, Inc., 581 East 137th Street, a four-story and basement tenement on a plot 27 by 100, to an investor.

The Lewis H. May Company has sold for H. Breslin 1,091 Union Avenue, a three-family dwelling, to N. Brosman, who gave in part trade 37 Seneca Street, Far Rockaway, L. I., a dwelling on a plot 60 by 100.

The H. C. Jackson Building Company, Harry C. Jackson, President, sold to Isaac Hyman 1,904 Vyse Avenue, a five-story structure, containing twenty-five apartments, occupying a plot 72 by 72 by irregular, between Boston Road and Tremont Avenue. The new owner gave in part payment a vacant plot, 100 by 150, on the south side of Laramie Road, located 950 feet west of Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

Brooklyn.

I. Salzberg sold for J. Johnson to T. Rubin a plot 35 by 100 feet on the southeasterly side of Forty-fourth Street, 315 feet west of Thirteenth Avenue. Also, for M. Tosbell to L. Gold a plot 44 by 100 feet on New Utrecht Avenue, 100 feet from the southeasterly corner of Sixty-ninth Street.

Long Island.

A dwelling on the corner of Butler and Henry Streets, Westbury Manor, 80 by 100, has been sold by the Westbury Manor Company to Thomas Rayfield and a plot on Butler Street to W. J. Gochens.

Plots at Brightwater have been sold by the T. B. Ackerson Company to Robert Graves, Mrs. Jessie R. Dunn, and Mrs. Ethel Louise Petersen.

The Windsor Realty Company, Harvey B. Newins, President, has sold the Schwarting fruit farm north of Patchogue, L. I., to Harry Jaffe & Co. of Manhattan.

New Jersey.

The Simpson-Merritt Company has sold a residence on Lexington Avenue, Montclair, near the D., L. & W Railroad station, to Dr. J. T. Eddy of Newark.

F. M. Crawley & Brothers have sold to W. A. Barnaby a residence and garage at Essex Fells, on Roseland Avenue and Wooten Road, the plot fronting 500 feet. The property was held at $40,000.

Recent Buyers.

Margaret Gerard is the buyer of 1,323 Madison Avenue.

M. & L. Hess, Inc., have leased for Louis Stern, Benjamin Stern, and the estate of Isaac Stern the entire fifth floor at 28 and 30 West Twenty-third Street, extending through to 9 to 19 West Twenty-second Street, covering a floor area of about 21,000 square feet, for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $50,000. The lessees are book publishers.

This is the second book publisher who has leased floors in this building within the past few weeks, the top floor having been leased a few weeks ago to Barse & Hopkins. This completes the rental of this entire building, formerly occupied by Stern Brothers' Department Store, of over 275,000 square feet, and involves a total rental of $110,000 per annum.

John Wanamaker Leases Two Buildings.

The corporation of John Wanamaker has leased for a term of two years two entire buildings, approximately 120,000 square feet, at Twenty-seventh Street and Eleventh Avenue from the Terminal Warehouse Company.

The corporation of John Wanamaker had under lease one or more buildings of the Terminal Warehouse Company for the past seventeen years. The original lease was made through John N. Golding.

Advisory Council Elects Two New Members.

The Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests announced yesterday the election to the council of two new members, Robert Walton Goelet and Frederick H. Ecker. Mr. Goelet is one of the largest property holders in the City of New York, and will represent the interest of large owners upon the council; Mr. Ecker is the Treasurer of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and the Vice President of the Union Dime Savings Bank, and thus will represent life insurance companies and savings banks upon the council.

Dwellings Leased.

Pease & Elliman have leased for Philip Livingston to Mrs. John E. Alexandre the five-story dwelling at 3 East Fifty-sixth Street, one of the group of Astor houses forming the northeast corner of Fifty-sixth Street and Fifth Avenue.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. have leased for Mrs. F. R. Bain her residence at the northeast corner of Park Avenue and Ninety-fourth Street to Milton H. Kohn.

Olney B. Mairs of Briarcliff, N. Y. rented furnished for the Winter through William B. May & Co. the six-story American basement residence at 1,069 Fifth Avenue, south corner of Eighty-eighth Street. The house, whic is owned by Josepine F. V. B. R. Thomas, was held at an annual rental of $20,000.

Commercial Leases.

The E. Tanenbaum Realty Corporation has leased for estate of Eugene A. Hoffman to Hydeman & Lassner, importers of vellings and nettings, the store and basement 105 and 107 Fifth Avenue, southeast corner of Eighteenth Street, for a long term of years. This store has been vacant for three years, and has been formerly occupied by the woolen concern of Stein & Co., who paid $25,000 per annum therefor.

Pease & Elliman have leased for the Horn & Hardart Company at 250 and 252 West Forty-second Street the entire second floor, having an area of 5,000 square feet, to George Bothner, who after extensive alterations will conduct a physical culture school.

DIVISION FOR BABIES IN SUFFRAGE PARADE

Vote-Seeking Mothers Plan to Refute Antis' Argument Based on Cradle Robbery.

BIG DEMAND FOR TALL GIRLS

Statuesque Beauties to Carry Banners — Cavalry Scuad Will Show New Uniform.

A feature of tomorrow's suffrage parade will be children, although it was at first decided that no child should march. This later was thought a slap at the "antis," who said the suffragists robbed the cradle to feed their parades. It is meant to show the "antis" that the suffragists are mothers.

Mrs. John Rogers, Jr., was a most decided champion of the children. "My Betty shall march," said she, "if there is not another child in the parade. Betty is 9, and she and the children of her age have learned in school about Washington and his fight for liberty, and they are old enough to understand the women's fight for freedom."

The children will fall into line at Twenty-second Street and march to Fifty-eighth Street. Mrs. Benjamin Tilton will open her house, 14 East Fifty-sixth Street, to the little people, and mothers and nurses, if they have not matched with them, can get them and take them home.

"There is no more reason why children should not appear in the suffrage parade than at the Piping Rock Horse Show or at other social events," said Mrs Rogers. "They will be much safer in the parade with police protection than on the sidewalks watching with the crowds."

The little girls will wear a special parade costume, a white dress, white sweater, white felt parade hat, with a green cockade, and will carry little green pennants. Among the children will be the little Misses de Forest, Holland, Rogers, Borg, and Schieffelin. Little Miss Barbara Van Rensselaer is also expected to march.

The parade is expected to be so much bigger than any of its predecessors that the Women's Political Union is planning to take torches in the belief that it will be dark before the last marchers swing into the avenue.

The union will have a parade of its own on the east side, starting at Second Avenue and Houston Street, before it joins the main body. It will have a cavalry brigade of young horsewomen, led by Miss Leslie Johnson. Miss Johnson will carry an American flag, and the riders will wear, with cavalry costumes, black derby hats, sashed with purple, white, and green. Miss Alberta Hill on horseback will be Grand Marshal of the union's division, and Miss Marian Tomkins Assistant Marshal. Some will ride their own horses, and others will have livery steeds.

After the cavalry women will come Mrs. Marcus M. Marks, carrying the big silk banner of the union, assisted by Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain, Mrs. Sidney Borg, and Mrs. Evan Evans. Nahan Franko's Band will follow.

The W. P. U. van, "Winner," which helped to get about 125,000 votes for women in New Jersey driven by Miss Mildred Taylor, its official conductor, will be in the parade. There will be a Vassar group, a teachers' group, and the New Jersey group, headed by the leader of the W. P. U. in that State, Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle.

Arthur Levy will marshal a men's group, and among others there will be a theosophical group and a high school group.

Mrs. Philip Boileau, wife of the artist, is to be "Victory" on the float in the main division of the parade. There will be nine symbolical figures besides "Victory"—"Liberty," "Equality," and "Justice," and the Six Continents.

Lillian Russell was at the Woman Suffrage Headquarters yesterday getting regalia for herself and her two sisters for the parade. She will march in the International Alliance Division.

Tall handsome women to carry banners are in demand and when a fine-looking girl of 6 feet 2 came into the headquarters from Brooklyn yesterday she was held for a banner-bearer in the International Division. There will be seventy-eight banners in the division.

Miss Ethel Stebbins, wearing a white suit and a suffrage hat, will be Grand Marshal of the parade. She is the daughter of Henry G. Stebbins, an old New Yorker, who was Chairman of the Committee of Seventy in the days of the Tweed Ring. Mrs. Leonard Thomas will carry the flag of the International Alliance, representing twenty-six nations, and Mrs. John Minturn and Mrs. Malcolm Duncan have been chosen as distinguished beauties to carry the new banners, designed by Mrs. John Alexander, blue, yellow, and white, with the United States shield. They will walk back of Mrs. Thomas.

A new division is to be presented by Miss Hope FitzGerald. She has organized a group of women in domestic employments, housekeepers, chambermaids, parlor maids, ladies' maids, and nurses.

The Catholic women will be in a group and they urge others of their faith to join them as a protest against the result of the vote in New Jersey on Tuesday. The division has been assigned to East Ninth Street, at Broadway.

ANN SWINBURNE IN RECITAL.

Ann Swinburne, who has graced the boards of the light opera stage as a prima donna of personality and charm, made her first appearance last night as a singer of the concert platform in a recital she gave at Aeolian Hall. There was a large and what would be called "brilliant" audience, a profusion of flowers handed over the footlights, much friendly applause—in short, all the accessories which are customary and pleasant on an occasion of the kind. And into this setting Miss Swinburne fitted gracefully, adding just the touch necessary to complete the picture satisfactorily in her charming stage presence.

But Miss Swinburne did not by this one appearance demonstrate a mastery of the task she has undertaken. Once again it was proved that the concert stage is more exacting than the theatre stage. If she did show herself possessed of the qualities of sincerity and directness, taste, and even distinction in a certain sense, it is equally true that she has serious shortcomings. These are principally vocal. Her tone last night was conspicuously lacking in warmth, resonance and color, nor was her execution as flexible as it might have been. Her program, commendably restrained as to length and mood, called insistently for just the qualities that were lacking. Some of the difficulty may have been caused by nervousness, especially occasional singing off pitch or a slight hoarseness that began to show in the third group, where, however, she did some of her best singing. Richard Hageman played the accompaniments with distinction.

1,500 Freight Men Strike.

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—While a new wage scale was being discussed by representatives of both sides, 1,500 freight handlers in the Boston & Maine Railroad terminals, in Charlestown and Somerville, quit work today. President White and Secretary Ryan of the union, who were in conference with railroad officials, said they were much surprised when informed that the men had walked out.

Eagle Lock Co. Workers Return.

TERRYVILLE, Conn., Oct. 21.—The 1,200 striking employes of the Eagle Lock Company returned to work today under the agreement reached yesterday, by which they obtain a fifty-five hour week with sixty hours' pay.

Van Nostrand Estate Wins $25,880.

Before Supreme Court Justice Crane in Long Island City yesterday the estate of David L. Van Nostrand, who was County Clerk of Queens and a banker at Jamaica, recovered a judgment for $20,000 and interest of $5,880 against Edmund K. Stallo, H. F. Jennings, and Richard W. Jones, Jr., on notes. The defendants are well known in financial circles, and at one time had extensive interests in the Manhattan Securities Company.

TRIBUTES TO McANENY.

Speaker Hails Head of Aldermen as the Next Governor.

George McAneny, President of the Aldermen, heard himself referred to last night as "the next Governor of New York" at the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the establishment of the Reformed Church at Port Richmond, S. I. The celebration has been going on all this week, and last night was "civic night." Letters of regret were received from President Wilson, Governor Whitman, and Mayor Mitchel, who had been invited to attend.

The Rev. Otto Mohn, pastor of the church, in introducing Mr. McAneny, said the people of Staten Island had had but one opportunity to vote for him.

"But you will soon have a second opportunity to vote for him," said the pastor, amid applause.

Calvin D. Van Name, President of the Borough of Richmond, in a short address, made the reference to Mr. McAneny as "the next Governor of New York."

Mr. McAneny spoke of the good work that had been done for the greater city in the past, and said this Administration had planned many improvements for the future. In concluding, the speaker said his retirement as President of the Aldermen, which takes effect on Jan. 1, would not take him out of public life.

The Reformed Church was established on Staten Island in 1665, and the original building occupied the same site as the present church, which is the third in the history of the parish.

THREATENS GOV. SPRY.

If Hillstrom Dies, So Will Executive, Letter Writer Says.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 21.—A letter mailed at Salt Lake received today by Governor Spry threatens death to the Governor and destruction to the city if Joseph Hillstrom's sentence is not commuted. Intercession by President Wilson at the request of the Swedish Minister brought Hillstrom a reprieve, but recency he was re-sentenced to be shot on Nov. 18.

The latter was signed "K. O. D." and is the fourth of like nature received over the same signature in the last six weeks. Another letter, mailed at Kennet, Cal., and signed "J. F. Little," threatens a national revolution unless Hillstrom is released.

Hillstrom was convicted of the murder of J. G. Morrison here in 1914. Extra police precautions, established a month ago, have been maintained ever since and will continue until after the execution.

DEMAND FOR 'ALL WOOL.'

Jesse I. Straus Tells Skirtmakers How to Work in Good Faith.

An organization dinner of the National Association of Separate Skirt Manufacturers was held yesterday evening at the McAlpin "to secure co-operation and united effort in the creation of ideas and fashions, so as to maintain and stimulate the demand for separate skirts."

Jesse I. Straus of R. H. Macy & Co., and John R. Simpson of William Filene's Sons Company, Boston, made speeches. Mr. Straus said:

"We have frequently noticed a tendency to use expressions not strictly in accordance with facts. Let me give a concrete example. One time I noticed that the head of a department was preparing to advertise a garment as 'all wool.' I asked whether it was really all wool and he assured me that the manufacturer had said it was. I saw the manufacturer and he assured me that the cloth salesman had told him it was all wool. Later he came to me and said that the garment was 'commercially all wool.'

"The deduction is this. If you as manufacturers will insist that the cloth dealer tell you the whole truth, and will pass it on to us it will lead to better feeling and we will co-operate with you to the ultimate good of both sides, and the consumer as well."

The Lambs Re-elect Officers.

The Lambs held their annual election of officers yesterday. There was no contest, and last year's officers were re-elected without exception. Three new Directors—Paul Turner, William Farnum, and William Sampson—were elected to take the places of Directors whose terms had expired. The officers are William Courtenay, Shepherd; Dudley Field Malone, Boy; George V. Hobart, Corresponding Secretary; Percy G. Williams, Treasurer, and Walter Hale, Librarian.

EXECUTION A SHOCK HERE

Prominent Men and Women Denounce It—Washington Feels It Has Done Its Utmost.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—The British Foreign Office last evening made public the report of the Rev. H. S. T. Gahan, the British Chaplain in Brussels who visited Miss Edith Cavell just before her execution, and another letter from Minister Whitlock to Ambassador Page. In his letter Mr. Whitlock says he requested that the body of Miss Cavell be delivered to the School for Nurses, of which she was the directress, and that his request was referred to the Ministry of War in Berlin.

The Rev. Mr. Gahan in his report says:

"On Monday evening, the 11th of October, I was admitted by a special passport from the German authorities to the Prison of St. Gilles, where Miss Edith Cavell had been confined for ten weeks. The final sentence had been given early that afternoon.

"To my astonishment and relief I found my friend perfectly calm and resigned, but this could not lessen the tenderness and intensity of feeling on either part during that last interview of almost an hour.

"Her first words to me were upon a matter concerning herself personally, but the solemn asseveration which accompanied them was made expressly in the light of God and eternity. She then added that she wished all her friends to know that she willingly gave her life for her country, and said:

"'I have no fear nor shrinking. I have seen death so often that it is not strange or fearful to me.'

"She further said:

"'I thank God for this ten weeks of quiet before the end. My life has always been hurried and full of difficulties; this time the rest has been a great mercy. They have all been very kind to me here, but this I would say, standing as I do in view of God and eternity: I realize that patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness toward any one.'

"We partook of Holy Communion together, and she received the Gospel message of consolation with all her heart. At the close of the little service I began to repeat the words 'Abide with Me,' and she joined softly in the end.

"We sat quietly talking until it was time for me to go. She gave me parting messages for relations and friends. She spoke of her soul's needs at the moment, and she received the assurance of God's words as only a Christian can do.

"Then I said good-bye, and she smiled and said: 'We shall meet again.'

"A German military Chaplain was with her at the end and afterward gave her a Christian burial. He told me:

"'She was brave and bright to the last. She professed her Christian faith and said she was glad to die for her country. She died like a heroine.'"

Mr. Whitlock, in inclosing the letter he wrote to Baron von der Lancken, the German Governor, at the request of President Faider of the Court of Appeals in Brussels and the President of the Belgian School for Nurses, asking that Miss Cavell's body be delivered to the school, says:

"I have not received a written reply to my note to Baron Lancken on the subject, but he came to see me yesterday afternoon and stated that the body had been interred near the Prison of St. Gilles, where the execution took place, and that under the regulations governing such cases it was impossible to exhume the body without written permission from the Minister of War at Berlin. He added that he had no authority to ask for permission to exhume the body, but that immediately upon the return of the Governor General he would request him to take the matter up.

"I shall hope to be able to tell you that we have at least been able to accomplish this small service."

German Soldiers Fired Low at Miss Cavell; Then Officer Shot Her, Amsterdam Says

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 22, (Dispatch to The London Daily Mail.)—The Telegraaf states tonight that the Germans executed a French woman, Mlle. Louise Frenay, at Liege a fortnight ago. The firing party purposely aimed low, and she was hit in the legs. An officer then shot her through the head with his revolver.

The Telegraaf says the same thing happened in Miss Cavell's case. She was fired at by a party of twelve, but only one bullet touched her, and that did not kill her. It was after this that the officer of the firing party drew his revolver, and, putting it to her ear, fired. The priest who was present at the execution, overcome with horror, is now suffering from a nervous breakdown.

WIDE CONSPIRACY SEEN BY GERMANS

Miss Cavell Was Believed to Have Had Many Confederates.

PRINCE ALLEGED LEADER

"Underground Railway" Said to Have Been Operated With Hospital as Centre.

From a Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 22, (via The Hague.)—The Vossische Zeitung's Brussels correspondent telegraphs the first details received here of the sensational Brussels espionage case. He says:

"The trial, lasting three days, gave a clear picture of the methods employed by a regular organization to recruit men, subject to military service in the allied armies, who had been left behind in Belgium, and send them across the Dutch frontier. It also proved that the leading spirits of the enterprise must be sought in high Belgian and partly French aristocracy. I had occasion to be present at the first day's trial before the Court of War Justice.

"The leader of the band, which, of course, had many more members than the German police could arrest was Prince Reginald de Croy of Bellingnies, who was not apprehended, though his wife, Princess Marie de Croy, sat on the bench with the other accused.

"Besides the Prince, an Englishwoman, the head of a Brussels medical institution, was the principal moving spirit in the undertaking. Scattered English and French soldiers, hidden in the provinces, principally in the province of Hennegau, were spirited over the border by agents of the princely pair, who found in a French Countess, Jeanne de Belleville, a particularly zealous assistant. They had organized regular stations of an 'underground railway,' and trusty leaders accompanied those subject to military service or the soldiers, among them English and French officers, from station to station to Brussels, where they were hidden till the coast was clear and they could be hurried over the Dutch border.

"The central station was located in the house occupied by the English clinic in Brussels, whence in the dead of night they were escorted to a street car line in the heart of Brussels, at the Church of St. Marie, in the Rue Royale, going from the terminus of the street car line to the Dutch border by the narrow-gauge railway.

"During the trial in the Senate Chamber the accused, almost without exception, gave the impression of persons cleverly simulating naïve innocence. It was not a mere coincidence that two-thirds of the accused were women.

"The Englishwoman, Edith Cavell, who has already been executed, declared that she had believed as an Englishwoman that she ought to do her country service by giving lodgings in her house to soldiers and recruits who were in peril. She naturally denied that she had drawn other people into destruction by inducing them to harbor refugees when her own institute was overtaxed.

"Her principal agent was an architect, Philippe Bancq, who confessed that he was a good Belgian patriot who believed himself compelled to sacrifice himself for the fatherland. A provincial lawyer, condemned to imprisonment, admitted forging identification cards for travelers. A mining engineer, also condemned to imprisonment, did the same thing. A Brussels druggist who for months concealed recruits subject to military service pleaded his goodness of heart. He and his wife could not say no when asked to conceal compatriots from the German police.

"The Countess de Belleville admitted that she always made reports about her journeys to a French Abbé, who escaped the police. Every time she came to Brussels she met the Abbé in a different coffee house; but she tried to make the court believe that the priest interested himself only in her 'business trips.'

"From the patriotic feelings aforementioned a lawyer also admitted that he had concealed some of his protegés in a nunnery.

"From the proceedings one gathered the impression that the court had to do with a highly organized association which has been doing business regularly for months."

POPE MAKES PROTEST AGAINST KILLING WOMEN

SEES SEA RAIDER IN ZEALANDIA

CUSTOMS STARTS INQUIRY

Told That Escaped German Officers Would Join Ship—Name and U. S. Flag Painted Out.

The customs officials are investigating through the Law Department a remarkable statement made yesterday afternoon by E. W. Streeter, a ship broker of 17 South Street, regarding the American steamer Zealandia, which sailed from Pensacola, Fla., on Oct. 7 for Tampico, Mexico, to load with oil for Malmo, Sweden. He declared that the American flag on the side of the ship and her name had been painted out and that she had been fitted out as a commerce destroyer to fly the German flag.

Mr. Streeter also said the German officers who escaped from the auxiliary cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm at Newport News in a small yacht had arranged to meet the Zealandia at a point off the coast and had been taken on board. He said the information had come to him from a reliable member of the engine room department on the steamer who had refused to sail from Pensacola on the Zealandia when he found out for what purpose she was intended. Mr. Streeter declined to give the name of his informant, saying he did not wish to do him any injury by making it public.

When inquiry was made at the Custom House regarding the statement made by Mr. Streeter one of the officials said that a request had been sent to the customs officials at Tampico to investigate the matter when the Zealandia arrived there. She was expected at Tampico last night. The official added that although the Fiske Trading Company of 95 William Street was listed as the owner of the Zealandia, facts had come to their knowledge indicating that the vessel really was owned by German interests. The Zealandia left Pensacola under command of Captain Devantier, said to be a former Captain in the Hamburg-American Line service between New York and the West Indies.

H. V. Dixon, one of the members of the Fiske Trading Company, said that it was ridiculous to say that the Zealandia was owned by German interests or that she had been fitted out to be a commerce destroyer; her top speed, he said, was only 12 knots. He admitted that the steamer had been chartered for this voyage, but declined to give the name of the charter party. Mr. Dixon, who was at Pensacola, said the Zealandia was loading early this month, said that it was true that her name and the American flag had been painted out on her side, but it had been done by accident.

When asked by the Law Department of the Customs late in the afternoon if the Zealandia had arrived at Tampico, Mr. Dixon replied that he had received a cablegram that the steamer had arrived off the port but could not enter the river yet on account of a new sand bar which had been raised by the recent hurricane.

The Zealandia is a four-masted iron steamer of 5,000 gross tonnage. She was built in 1875 by John Elder & Co. for the Pacific trade, and for many years ran between San Francisco and Sydney, Australia. She is 377 feet long, 37 feet beam, and 18 feet 6 inches depth of hold.

THINK WRECKED YAWL BORE MISSING GERMANS

Vessel Like Eclipse Sighted Overturned Near Bermuda—Fugitives Drowned or Picked Up.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—A wreck which local shipping men believe to have been that of the auxiliary yawl Eclipse, upon which six of the German officers interned on the Kronprinz Wilhelm at Norfolk are supposed to have made their escape, was sighted last Sunday about seventy-five miles northeast of Bermuda by the officers and crew of the Italian steamship Labor, which arrived here today from Genoa. In a report to the Hydrographic Office Captain Monzali of the Labor said that he sighted an overturned white vessel in latitude 33.20 North and longitude 64.23 West, which answered in every way the description of the Eclipse.

The Italian ship passed the wreck at a distance of about six miles. As there was no sign of life to be seen about her, Captain Monzali proceeded to Norfolk. He had not then heard of the escape of the Germans, and he did not make a report at the Virginia port.

The theory is advanced in shipping circles here that the Eclipse was capsized and its occupants drowned, or the German officers abandoned their boat when picked up by a friendly ship.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—An official list of missing members of the crews of the two German auxiliary cruisers interned at Norfolk, Va., issued tonight by the Navy Department, shows that out of a total of 785 officers and men, one commissioned officer, two doctors and six warrant officers have broken parole. Not one bluejacket is missing. Following is the Department's statement:

GERMANY SHUTS OFF MEAT 2 DAYS A WEEK

On Two Other Days No Fats May Be Used in Cooking and on Another No Pork May Be Sold.

FOOD SITUATION CRITICAL

Rigid Card System Such as Is Applied to Bread to be Extended to Many Other Commodities.

From a Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—Germany's food supply has suddenly become the most important internal question of the day, the press devoting more space to butter, milk, eggs, and meat than to war news. Meanwhile the highest State and municipal authorities, aided by hundreds of experts, are hard at work trying to cut the Gordian knot of supply and demand with sharp socialistic measures for price regulation and distribution. This is likely to prove the supreme test of German genius for organization.

A beginning probably will be made next week to "stretch" the meat supply along the following novel lines: There will be two no-meat days each week on which dealers will be forbidden to sell any kind of meat or foods composed wholly or partly of meat ingredients. This applies not only to hotels and restaurants, but also to butchers' shops, delicatessen stores, &c. On these days banned goods may not even be displayed in show windows. On two other days restaurants may not serve food fried or otherwise prepared with any fats, including butter or lard. On one other day—making five in all—the sale of pork is forbidden. Heavy fines will be imposed for violation of the regulations. The police and commissions of experts have forgoing rights of entry and search of stores, restaurants, and other premises.

Maximum prices for meats are expected to be put in force next week, and if it is not possible to regulate the distribution there will be a system of meat cards similar to the bread cards which have been in use for the past thirty-five weeks. Milk cards for babies and sick persons are also coming, and if this works out milk cards may be extended to the whole population. Petroleum cards are also a possibility in the near future, so that life in Berlin may acquire the fascination of a card game.

The new food measures are being hailed with approval by all parties and classes, and many persons are criticising the Government for not having taken up the problem and put the measures in force long ago. The general belief is that there is food enough for all at reasonable prices if the speculators and cold storage can be eliminated as factors.

'CHANT OF THE SWORD' IS NEW HYMN OF HATE

Expresses Pride in Slaughter of Children, According to an English Version.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The Berne correspondent of The Pall Mall Gazette says Germany's "Hymn of Hate" has been supplanted by "The Chant of the German Sword,"—a composition brought out in Leipsic a week or so ago, which has already run into half a dozen editions.

"It is no duty of mine to be either just or compassionate; it suffices that I am sanctified by my exalted mission, and that I blind the eyes of my enemies with such streams of tears as shall make the proudest of them cringe in terror under the vault of heaven.

"I have slaughtered the old and the sorrowful; I have struck off the breasts of women; and I have run through the body of children who gazed at me with the eyes of the wounded lion.

"Day after day I ride aloft on the shadowy horse in the valley of Cypresses; and as I ride I draw forth the life blood from every enemy's son that dares to dispute my path.

"It is meet and right that I should cry aloud my pride, for am I not the flaming messenger of the Lord Almighty?

"Germany is so far above and beyond all the other nations that all the rest of the earth, be they who they may, should feel themselves well done by when they are allowed to fight with the dogs for the crumbs that fall from her table.

"When Germany the divine is happy, then the rest of the world basks in smiles; but when Germany suffers, God in person is rent with anguish, and, wrathful and avenging, He turns all the waters into rivers of blood."

CHINA ON VERGE OF A REVOLUTION

Arms Smuggled Into Three Provinces by Those Opposed to Establishment of a Monarchy.

MANILA, Oct. 22.—The Chinese provinces of Kwantung, Kwang-Si and Hunan are on the verge of a revolution prepared by those who are opposed to the establishment of a monarchy, according to information received from a private source which is believed to be reliable.

It is stated that many arms recently have been exported into Canton.

German Correspondents Say Invaders Are Mostly First Line Troops, Splendidly Equipped.

By WILHELM CONRAD GOMOLL.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[The Cologne Gazette Dispatches.]

HEADQUARTERS OF GENERAL GALLWITZ'S ARMY ON THE SERBIAN FRONT, Oct. 19, (via Cologne and London, Oct. 22.)—On the whole front from Moldawa Island to the frontier town of Obrenovatz, which lies southwest of Belgrade, there has been the severest fighting. In spite of the difficult mountain country an attack made on a broad front resulted in securing to us an important extension of the territory which we were occupying north of Belgrade. West of the Danube and south of Bosevac about forty square kilometers were occupied. The attack was pressed to a point behind Golubac and southeast of Semendria. The territory actually acquired was approximately 100 square kilometers, as in this region it was possible to force the enemy from their positions along the Danube west of Semendria.

"The Hungarian troops fought there bravely against the stubbornly resisting enemy, especially in the vicinity of Hills 254 and 202. South of the mountain village of Ripanj and about Grodska extremely severe fighting took place, the Teuton allied troops ultimately succeeding in establishing connections and closing their lines. In this section of the front there was a gain of nearly 200 square kilometers.

"Through the clearing of the heights on the Serbian shore of the Danube increased security has been gained for our reserves, as the enemy's artillery can no longer threaten them. Kolars and Malakrsna form supporting positions for the right wing of the army of General Gallwitz at Gobulac. Those of the left wing in the region of Luschitza and Bosevac form the centre over which the army is advancing toward Morovatale, the chief line of traffic in Serbia. The mountainous country of Gorndjak, Klissura, and the Zrna Gora still separate the allied armies, but their eventual union at Timok may be considered a certainty.

"The fighting abilities of the German Army in the Balkans have been proved magnificently. Against the stubborn resistance of the Serbian troops they fought their way inch by inch from one position to another. The Serbians stood their ground, rigidly obeying their orders, which were to defend their positions to the last man. They were finally brought to submission only by the use of bayonets and rifle butts.

While the Danube positions were defended by third-line reserves the defensive force in the latest battles consisted entirely of splendidly equipped troops of the first line. Even after the enemy had been driven from his positions there were constant severe rearguard actions and the extent of our success may be judged by the fact that along the entire front he was ultimately thrown out of carefully prepared and strongly fortified defenses.

The reserves now co-operating with the army give one the impression of active and entirely fresh troops. I myself saw them at Bazias and Palam during the crossing of the Danube. It may be asserted that all of the Prussians, Thuringians, Württembergers, Saxons, Bavarians, Hessians, and especially men of the mark of Brandenburg, have won the recognition of their officers. A high staff officer of the army of General Gallwitz said to me:

"You may call this army a triumph of Germany, both as regards its men and its equipment. Difficult obstructions lie at every road crossing in Serbia, but for these troops there is no difficulty which cannot be overcome."

Among other interesting details I learn that in the last battles the equipment of the Serbian troops was exceedingly varied. It is said that among the captured rifles were implements of all kinds, including even old flintlock guns and long Arabian rifles used in the desert. Among the cannon taken, aside from the French guns were chiefly guns of English make.

The Serbians destroy nothing more than is necessary in their conduct of the war and do not follow the example of their Russian tutors, who devastate occupied territory with fire and rapine. The inhabitants of the country have already accepted the fate of their land. In the conquered district of Posarevtas the majority of the residents are following the example of the Burgomaster, who stuck to his post.

George V., Appealing to Britons to Volunteer, Says More Men, and Yet More, Are Needed to Win

LONDON, Oct. 22.—King George has issued this appeal to his subjects to come forward voluntarily and aid Great Britain in her fight against the Germanic allies:

"To My People: At this grave moment in the struggle between my people and a highly organized enemy who has transgressed the laws of nations and changed the ordinance that binds civilized Europe together, I appeal to you.

"I rejoice in my empire's effort, and I feel pride in the voluntary response from my subjects all over the world who have sacrificed home and fortune and life itself in order that another may not inherit the free empire which their ancestors and mine have built. I ask you to make good these sacrifices.

"The end is not in sight. More men, and yet more, are wanted to keep my armies in the field, and through them to secure victory and an enduring peace. In ancient days the darkest moment has ever produced in men of our race the sternest resolve. I ask you, men of all classes, to come forward voluntarily and take your share in these fights.

"In freely responding to my appeal you will be giving your support to our brothers who for long months have nobly upheld Great Britain's past traditions and the glory of her arms."

ITALIANS LAUNCH TERRIFIC ATTACKS

Fifty-Hour Artillery Fire Paves Way for Great Drive in the Coastal Region.

ROME TELLS OF BIG GAINS

Official Vienna Report Says Attacks Were Repulsed with Great Loss to the Italians.

ROME, Oct. 22.—An official statement, issued tonight by the War Office, says that "the offensive, successfully begun in the Tyrol and Trentino, has been extended all along the line to the sea," and that "many Austrian positions have been taken." The statement adds:

"On the Carso the enemy's lines have been broken at several points and the enemy's forces annihilated. Twenty-five officers and 1,184 men have been made prisoners."

As expected, yesterday forenoon after an artillery preparation of more than fifty hours, the main forces of the Italian Army began generally to storm against our positions in the coastal district, the third attack since the war began.

An attack by Mobile Militia Regiment 119 against the Krn point of support miscarried under heavy losses. A second attack in this region after a short time was unsuccessful owing to our fire. The field before our position was covered with Italian corpses.

The Tolmino Bridgehead attacks were chiefly directed against Mrz Livrh (Monte Nero,) and the southern part of our defensive front. All the attacks were sanguinarily repulsed. The Italian losses were also very heavy here.

At Monte San Michele strong hostile forces in the afternoon penetrated the covers of our trenches, but were everywhere repulsed by our counter-attacks and our former positions are again in our possession. After several attacks the Italians also succeeded in penetrating trenches in a neighboring sector, but none of them returned.

The southwest plateau likewise was the scene of a sanguinary struggle. There were repeated hand-to-hand encounters and the losses were particularly heavy.

In the Carinthia, Hochweissztensteen, Monte Peralba, and Plocken regions and the Subach Valley weaker attacks were repulsed. There is continual violent artillery fighting on the Tyrolean front.

SWEDISH SUBMARINE SHELLED IN HOME WATERS

Hvalen Flying Own Flag and Weather Clear When Germans Fired, Says Captain.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 22.—The report of the Commander of the Swedish submarine Hvalen, which was attacked yesterday in the North Sea, says:

"The Hvalen was fired on by a German trawler in broad daylight at 7:30 o'clock in the morning. The weather was clear, but the sea rather rough. The shots were fired while the Hvalen was still in Swedish territorial waters and with the Swedish flag hoisted.

"From six to nine shots were fired, seriously wounding the man at the wheel. The submarine returned to port at full speed."

The Chief of the German Naval Staff has informed the Swedish Naval Attaché at Berlin that a searching inquiry into the affair has been instituted.

A telegram from the Swedish Minister in London says that Sir Edward Grey has assured him, in connection with the sinking by a British submarine of the German steamer Germania within Swedish waters, that any violation of Swedish territory by a British warship would be a matter of the greatest regret to the British Government. Sir Edward requested the Swedish Government to await further action in the case until the British Government received a report from the British officers concerned in the Germania incident.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE 15,000 IN 3 DAYS

Defeat the Austro-Germans on Galician Border, Taking 7,500 Prisoners and Guns.

HINDENBURG HELD AT RIGA

While Czar's Forces Win New Successes South of Dvinsk and in the Centre.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Russians, taking advantage of the removal of German troops from other points on the front to reinforce Field Marshal von Hindenburg for his drive at Riga, which seems to have been checked, have been delivering some fierce strokes at the German centre, on the Styr, and in Galicia. In all these they have had at least initial successes.

The most successful offensive by the Russians was assumed north of Tarnopol, just inside the Russian border, where the carrying of Austro-German positions gave the Russian soldiers nearly 8,000 prisoners, two howitzers, and a number of machine guns. These prisoners, added to those taken near Baranovichi and on the Styr make a total of more than 15,000 Austrians and Germans captured in three days.

The official Russian report on the southern operations says:

By an energetic surprise attack in the region of Novo Alexinetz, 30 versts (20 miles) north of Tarnapol, (Eastern Galicia,) we captured portions of the enemy's positions yesterday.

In the course of the day we made prisoners in these combats of 148 officers and about 7,500 soldiers. We captured two howitzers and numerous machine guns.

Tonight's official report from Petrograd shows fresh advances in the Baranovichi region and toward the Dvinsk-Vilna railroad. The Russians, after fierce fighting, have taken Postavy, only twenty-five miles from the railroad. They have stopped attacks toward Riga, and south of Dvinsk. The text of the report follows:

On the western front in the region of the village of Zalay and west of Olai, on the Mitau road, we yesterday repulsed a fresh violent attack by the enemy. In the regions of Friedrichstadt and Jacobstadt, and on the front in the region of Dvinsk, there is no change.

On the front south of Lake Boginskoie, our troops progressed at some points toward the West. German counter-attacks were launched several times, but in many cases they were repulsed with heavy losses, simply by the well-sustained fire of our troops.

A violent combat near the village of Douki, west of the village of Postavy, ended in the taking of this village by our troops.

Southeast of Baranovichi our troops, fighting, crossed to the west bank of the Upper Sczara and occupied the heights opposite the village of Mazourki, taking, in the course of the fighting, twenty officers and 1,568 men and three machine guns.

On the left bank of the Styr the fighting continues. According to later information, the number of prisoners made in the different districts in this region has increased to sixty-seven officers and 2,025 men.

On the remainder of the front more to the south, and in Galicia nothing of importance has occurred with the exception of fighting to our advantage near Novo Alexinetz and more to the north.

Austrians Admit Falling Back.

Where the Russians report the capture of 7,500 men, the following Vienna communication admits a forced retirement on a front of three miles:

In East Galicia calm prevails. Near Novo Alexinetz, the Russians continued their attack. We retired to our front before the pressure of superior forces over a length of five kilometers (3.11 miles) and a depth of 1,000 paces. All attacks against this new position were unsuccessful, as likewise were attacks against our front east of Zaloscz, owing to the crossfire of our batteries.

The fighting on the Styr has increased in violence. The Russians, employing strong forces, lately had driven a wedge into the German and Austro-Hungarian front west of Czartorysk. Yesterday, after reserves had been brought up, we counterattacked. Near Okonek the enemy was caught and thrown back on three sides.

The enemy's attempt to create a diversion in his favor by attacks northwest of Czartorysk and against Kolki was unsuccessful owing to the resistance of the German troops. The forces of General Count Herberstein, fighting south of Kolki, suddenly left the trenches and put the enemy to flight, capturing 2 officers and 600 men.

During the fighting between Kormyn and the Styr, which has not yet

STRONG GRIP ON RAILWAY

One Report Says That 100 Miles of Road Are Already in Their Hands.

Forces of Great Britain Have Already Reached Serbia

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—The Paris correspondent of The London Daily Telegraph says that he has the best authority for stating that British forces have entered Serbia.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—Greece has declined for the present the Allies' offer to her of Cyprus and other concessions, territorial and financial, in return for her adherence to the Serbo-Greek treaty of alliance, which would mean her military aid to assist in meeting the Bulgarian and Austro-German attacks against her former ally.

While the Cabinet at Athens was framing its answer the fleets of the Allies were shelling the Bulgarian coast from Dedeaghatch to Porto Lagos, a distance of thirty-eight miles. The bombardment which began on Thursday continued yesterday. Advices from Sofia assert that no damage was done to Dedeaghatch.

The reply of Greece to the offer, which reached the Foreign Office last night, is a lengthy one, and, while it has not been made public, there is reason to believe that the Hellenic Kingdom bases its decision not to join the Allies on the ground that the Anglo-French force landed at Saloniki is not, in the Greek Government's opinion, strong enough for the task allotted to it.

The refusal to accept the Allies' offer was not unexpected, as it has been often stated in official circles that both Rumania and Greece were withholding their assistance until the Allies either won a decisive victory or proved to the Greeks and Rumanians their ability to do so, or until the operations had reached a stage which would assure them that their countries would not be overrun by the forces of the central powers or their Turkish and Balkan Allies.

Big Army May Change Situation.

While Greece's refusal of the offers is definite so far as the present is concerned, it is felt by London commentators that a material strengthening of the Entente allied contingent at Saloniki would have a very material influence upon the attitude even of the Greek Government. It is also believed that Greece cannot persist in her present ambiguous position, and that public opinion, which is generally understood to favor the Entente Allies, will probably exercise its influence.

Negotiations with Rumania still continue. A dispatch from Budapest to the Giornale d'Italia of Rome yesterday said that the Rumanian Ministry was discussing a proposition of a military and political character made to the Government by one of the powers of the Quadruple Entente.

Teuton Campaign Plans.

Meanwhile there is no inclination here or in the capitals of the other members of the Quadruple Entente powers to minimize the seriousness of the situation of Serbia.

The Austro-German and Bulgarian campaign is developing slowly, but the plans are now fairly clear. The Austro-German centre is advancing down the Morava Valley from Semendria, while the Bulgarians have got across this valley to the south and command the Belgrade-Nish-Saloniki Railway. The Austro-Germans have three other forces engaged, one in the northwest, near Shabetz, one at Belgrade, and the third, which has not yet crossed the Danube, near Orsova.

The Bulgars also have other armies moving across the frontier, near Zaiocar, Pirot, and Nish, and further south, near Egri Palanka and Kohane, and claim to be already in Velege, on the Vandar River and Nish-Saloniki Railroad. It is this latter force the Anglo-French troops landed at Saloniki will probably first encounter. It is reported that Turkish cavalry is co-operating with the Bulgarians.

According to The Times, 100 miles of railway running from Saloniki to Nish are now in the hands of the forces invading Serbia, who, it adds, are threatening Uskub in strength.

A dispatch from Sofia to Geneva says that the Bulgarians have captured the town of Koprulu, on the railway line south of Uuskup.

Official Reports of Operations.

Koevess is holding the Arnayevo-Slatina line.

The army of General von Gallwitz has pushed forward as far as Selevac, Savinovac, and Trnovca in the region north of Ranovac.

Reports regarding other sections of the armies have not yet arrived.

Kumanovo has been occupied by other Bulgarian army divisions, Veleze has been taken.

The last paragraph in the official report may refer to the French troops which were reported in dispatches from Athens on Thursday as having crossed the Vardar River.

The allies' offensive in Serbia proceeded everywhere yesterday. The Austro-Hungarian troops under General Koevess stormed the height of Slatina, south of Raija, and advanced upon the Kosmaj position.

On both sides of the lowar Morava the German forces gained terrain north of Palanka and Petrovac.

Vranya, Kumanovo, and Veleze, in the Vardar Valley, are in the hands of the Bulgarians.

HELD BY FEAR OF GERMANY.

Position of Greece and Rumania as Viewed by London Press.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Morning Post says editorially:

"Our strength in the Balkans seems to have been in nerveless, incompetent hands. Meanwhile Serbia struggles desperately against great odds and the chances of saving her grow more remote. The desperate position in the Balkans is not the result of mere mistakes, but of inability to stand by our friends or to stand up to our enemies.

"There is a field here for courageous strategy and able diplomacy, but if strategy takes the form of driblets and diplomacy the shape of gifts, our natural advantages and superior resources will not suffice."

The Evening Standard says:

"The only way in which the Allies can induce Greece to comply with her treaty obligations is by pressure. If Greek intervention is necessary for us we must make Greece realize the unpleasant consequences of treaty breaking. Our command of the Mediterranean gives us a powerful weapon, and weapons are made to be used."

PARIS, Oct. 22.—The Athens correspondent of the Matin sends the following under date of Wednesday:

"The only way of inducing Greece to take military action is to send troops to Saloniki in sufficient numbers. Ministers Elliot and Demidoff (Sir F. E. H. Elliot and Prince Elim Demidoff, respectively British and Russian Ministers to Greece) have called on Premier Zaimis, but no collective action by the allied Ministers is probable at present, for it would have little chance of success.

TEUTON LOSSES 60,000.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—A dispatch from Nish says official announcement has been made at the Serbian capital that the losses of the Austro-German army of invasion have reached 60,000 dead, wounded, and prisoners. The Serbians are said to have repulsed the invaders.

The message was forwarded to the Exchange Telegraph Company yesterday from its Athens correspondent, who says this information was contained in an official telegram from Nish to the Serbian Legation at the Greek capital. It is stated that among the Austrian and German prisoners are many officers.

SERB FAITH IN ALLIES FIRM.

General Staff Officer Says Troops Will Fight Till They Die.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 22.—An officer of the Serbian General Staff, who is passing through Rome, gave some interesting particulars today of the Serbian point of view regarding the war in his country.

"Serbians have never had illusions regarding Bulgaria's aggressive intentions," he said. "We well knew that they would have attacked us a year ago, if instead of being defeated the Austrians had vanquished us. Serbian military circles knew that the Austro-German-Bulgarian attack depended on the progress against Russia. Therefore, we had to expected the attack since the beginning of September, and have been doing our utmost to prepare to meet it. What Serbians did not suspect was that the Greek Government would fail to respect its sacred treaty of alliance."

The officer pointed out that now, as before, the Serbian conflict was defensive with one important difference.

"Our duty," said he, "is now, not only to defend our fatherland, retiring to a favorable position in the interior of the country, but from dyke to dyke, so to speak, withstand the advancing flood of the central empires toward Constantinople. This we are prepared to do until every Serbian dies at his post. I believe firmly that the Serbians will be able to resist until the Entente Allies, in whom we have absolute faith, arrive in sufficient force to give victory to our side."

SERBS NOT DISCOURAGED.

And Their Line Is Absolutely Intact, Allied Officers Report.

SALONIKI, Oct. 20, (via Paris, Oct. 22.)—Officers of the French and British expeditionary force in the Balkans who returned today to Saloniki from the Serbian front assert that, notwithstanding the odds against which they are fighting, the Serbians are not discouraged.

"I would not advise you to bet 10 cents that Serbia will be crushed," said one of these officers. "Last Thursday we were north of Ralja, in the sector where the Austrians and Germans are making their principal attack. It took them nine days to gain eight miles on that front.

"We saw long lines of Prussian and Austrian prisoners going to the rear. The Serbian line is absolutely unbroken. The Serbians are fighting every inch of the way.

"Only five cannon of the Allies and eight of the Serbians were lost around Belgrade, notwithstanding German reports. Seven of these cannon were destroyed before the city was captured.

"The Bulgarians occupy Pirot on the route to Nish. They hope to effect a junction with the Germans. At the present rate of progress it will be next year before this can be done.

"We left Nish on Sunday. At that time the only interruption to railroad traffic was that occasioned by the passage of French troops from Saloniki northward. Bulgarian raids on the railroad were repulsed promptly. No Bulgarians were near the railway around Kumanovo.

[Since that time the Serbian War Office has acknowledged that the Bulgarians have cut the Saloniki-Nish Railroad in two places.]

"The Serbian troops who were dispatched to the eastern front to face the Bulgarians marched forward singing, being overjoyed at the chance to come to grips with their ancient enemy and confident of the outcome.

"Throughout Serbia there is a conspicuous sentiment of gratitude to America, on account of the assistance extended by the medical commissions, which are believed to have saved the people from annihilation by the typhus epidemic."

The French General Staff has issued a warning against rumors "either of bloody defeats or of brilliant victories." It points out that in many instances the same names are given to various localities, for instance of the confusion resulting from this fact the widespread report that the allied troops had captured the city of Strumitza, in southern Bulgaria, whereas in fact the skirmish occurred at Strumitza Station, far to the west of the city.

OUR ATTACHE OFF TO SERBIA.

With Other Neutral Officers Will Watch German Operations.

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—Lieut. Col. Joseph E. Kuhn, Military Attaché of the American Embassy here, will leave Saturday night for the Serbian front in company with the Military Attachés of the other neutral countries stationed in Berlin. The officers will make their headquarters in Belgrade, from which city trips to the various fronts will be made.

Lieut. Col. Kuhn has just returned from a two months' stay at the Western Grand Headquarters, where he was presented to Emperor William last Sunday. The Emperor chatted with the American officer for ten minutes and evinced particular interest when he learned that Lieut. Col. Kuhn belonged to the Engineer Division of the American Army.

An opportunity was given to the Military Attaché to see that part of the French and British offensive against the Germans which was directed against Prince Rupprecht's Sixth Army.

MUST USE FORCE ON GREECE.

Dr. Dillon Indicates Nothing Else Will Insure Her Aid.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—Dr. Dillon sends this dispatch to The Daily Telegraph:

"Significant movements of Greek troops are reported. One of my informants writes: 'I am inclined to interpret this as a good omen for the Allies,' but personally I am unable to share his optimism.

"Knowing the simple psychology of the Greek monarch and his firm resolve to redeem his plighted word to his imperial brother-in-law, even at the cost of the nation's plighted word to Serbia, I am disposed to regard Greece's spontaneous co-operation with the Allies as no longer to be hoped for.

"Constrained she may yet be, if indeed the allied nations in the desperate struggle for their lives are ready to employ any means more potent than argument and suasion."

KAISER'S CHRISTMAS IN CONSTANTINOPLE

Budapest Paper Predicts It—Hungary's Peace Hope Lies in Blow at Britain.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 23, (via London.)—The military experts on the newspapers here estimate that not more than six months more will be required to establish communications with the Turkish Army. The Pesti-Napolo, however, says:

The editorials in the newspapers dwell on the importance of the Balkan campaign as a means of establishing a basis for an early peace. The Pestihirlap says in this connection:

"The stroke through the Balkans will bring peace nearer, for it is a stroke aimed directly at England, which heretofore has stood safe and isolated, boasting of her ability to continue the war three years or more. England lately has been the only obstacle in the way of an early peace. As soon as her world power is threatened she will manifest a willingness to consider the question of peace."

The Azest says:

"The Balkan campaign is the easiest task ever intrusted to an army leader. If the present plan is carried out it will be impossible for the enemy to escape captivity or disaster, and the only real military task is to accomplish all this with the smallest possible loss to ourselves."

The newspaper adds that even with the greatest force the Anglo-French Governments can muster the German armies will outnumber them two to one, while the Austro-German artillery is in the proportion of five to one.

DEDEAGHATCH A STRONG PORT

Terminal of Two Railroads Under Fire of Allied Guns.

Dedeaghatch, which is being bombarded by the British fleet, is near the delta of the Maritza, which forms the lower part of the Bulgarian-Turkish frontier, and is the terminal of two railways—that from Saloniki coming from the west and the branch of the Nish-Sofia-Constantinople or Orient Express Railway, dropping from the north at Kuleli Burgas.

The former making a detour from the few coast towns of the Aegean—Rendina, Orfano, Kavala—which are connected with it by highways, is 250 miles long. The latter is sixty. The place is strongly fortified.

Enos, twelve miles southeast of Dedeaghatch, in Turkish territory, on the other side of the Delta, has been in the possession of the Allies since April 21.

Since the date of the Turkish territorial concession to Bulgaria, July 22, the Dedeaghatch-Kuleli Burgas line has run entirely through Bulgarian territory. About eight miles north of Dedeaghatch a single-track railway, running through Ferejik, forms the base of the triangle made by the two roads that have their termini at Dedeaghatch.

Dedeaghatch has a population of 3,000, which, before the Balkan wars of 1912-13 that drove the Turks to Bulgaria, was principally Greek, although under Turkish rule. Until 1871 the place was little more than a hamlet of fishermen's huts. It had begun to grow rapidly on account of the forests of valonia oak in the vicinity, when, in 1896, the railways were opened, which diverted much trade from Enos, which had only the river traffic north. Owing to the lack of shelter in its open harbor, the port has not become the commercial centre the railway connections qualified it to be.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE 15,000 IN THREE DAYS

ended, we have captured since Oct. 18 15 officers and 3,600 men and 1 gun and 8 machine guns.

The enemy several times attacked our forces in Lithuania, and succeeded in some places in entering our positions, but all his attacks were finally repulsed.

Germans Making Counterattacks.

The text of today's announcement by German Army Headquarters dealing with the eastern theatre of the war, is as follows:

Army group of Prince Leopold of Bavaria: The Russians attacked northeast, east and southeast of Baranovichi. They were repulsed during a successful counterattack. East of Baranovichi eight officers and 1,140 men were taken prisoners.

Army group of General von Linsingen: Our counterattack, begun on an extensive scale west of Czartorysk, was successful, the Russians being repulsed. We have begun pursuit of them. During the battles of the last few days 19 Russian officers, 3,500 men, one cannon, and eight machine guns were captured. The loss of some of our cannon which we reported yesterday was due to an attack by Russian divisions to the rear of our artillery lines. Six cannon have been lost.

"The Germans have informed the inhabitants of Mitau, Courland, that if they are unsuccessful in their attack on Riga and are compelled to retire they will raze all villages in the line of retreat.

"German reinforcements which have been sent to the Riga district include Landsturm called out in September, who have received little training.

"A German officer captured by the Russians at Czartorysk, in the Pripet region, spoke disparagingly of the Austrian troops."

GERMAN CHECK AT RIGA.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 22, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—The Riga region, where the Germans have based their latest hopes of success, is proving a new source of disappointment to them. The sudden intensity of their operations on this northern end of the line has not taken the Russians unawares.

On German prisoners have been found copies of orders urging them onward and saying: "If you wish to pass the Winter comfortably, not in trenches filled with snow, but in warm huts, it is necessary for you to hold the banks of the Dvina. Behind this cover, impregnable to the Russians, we should be absolutely safe."

Despite the use of a smoke screen, under cover of which the Germans conducted four attacks on the village of Plakanen, east of Olai and eight miles from the Dvina, they were unable to silence the Russian batteries, which showered shells on the enemy's assaulting columns, compelling them each time to retreat. Regarding the success gained in the region of Baranovichi, experts of the staff say the Germans will probably be compelled to evacuate the whole region, which is very important to them, as it serves to link the southern and northern fronts.

Further south, by means of counterattacks, near Kolki, the Austro-Germans are endeavoring at all costs to retain the left bank of the Styr. It is probable, however, they may be bound to retreat to Kovel in the face of the continuous stubborn pressure of the Russians.

2 ZEPPELINS, 17 PLANES GERMAN BALTIC LOSS

Petrograd Counts the Cost of Operations There to the Kaiser's Air Fleet.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 22, via London.—The Bourse Gazette says that the losses of the German air fleet in the Baltic region to date have been two Zeppelins, four albatross, and twelve Taube aeroplanes, and one seaplane.

STUDENTS TO AID POLES.

Marcella Sembrich, the singer, made a strong plea for Poland in a speech yesterday morning in the Horace Mann Auditorium. Mme. Arctowska, wife of the distinguished scientist from Poland, gave a history of the Polish nation, and added a stirring appeal for American assistance for the stricken country.

In response to the appeal made at the meeting, committees were formed from among the students and their parents to devise ways and means of receiving funds and otherwise aiding the Polish people now in the war zone.

RENNENKAMPFF RETIRED.

Russian General Was Reported Superseded Last December.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 22, (via London.)—General Rennenkampff has been placed on the retired list.

General Rennenkampff came into great prominence during the Russo-Japanese war, being regarded as one of the ablest of the Russian commanders. Early in the present war he led the Russian invasion of East Prussia. It was reported in December that he had been superseded because he was two days late in taking up a position through which the German armies advancing on Warsaw were to have been hemmed in. Little has been heard of him in recent months. The Tageblatt of Berlin said last June that he was a prisoner in Petrograd.

ALLIED GUNS HALT GERMAN ASSAULTS

Massed Fire Checks Threatened Attacks in Belgium and the Souchez Region.

GERMAN POST BLOWN UP

French Mine Works Destruction in the Argonne—Continuous Cannonade in Champagne.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Today's operations on the western front were almost entirely confined to the shelling of trenches by both antagonists. The French report that in Flanders their artillery prevented the organization of an infantry attack contemplated by the Germans, and that last night they destroyed an enemy post in the Argonne by a mine explosion. German cannonading in the last-named region and Champagne is said to have been mastered today by the French batteries.

The communication of the French War Office, issued tonight, says:

In Belgium, in the environs of Lombaertzyde, while the German artillery was shelling our trenches, we instantly stopped some preparations for an attack by scattering by our fire the enemy's forces which were concentrating in the neighborhood of our front.

Our artillery, on the other hand, has shelled very efficaciously during the day the German trenches and cantonments between the Avre and the Oise.

In Champagne and the Argonne we have mastered by the fire from our batteries the cannonade directed by the enemy against our positions in the neighborhood of Tahure, Massiges, La Harazée, and Le Four de Paris.

Nothing of importance has been reported on the remainder of the front.

The French afternoon bulletin says:

The enemy undertook yesterday evening, but quite without success, an attack against the salients to the east and to the southwest of the fort at Givenchy. They were very easily repulsed in the valley of the Souchez, where they endeavored to advance.

In the Champagne district the German bombardment has been going on with great violence to the west of Tahure; to the east of the butte de Mesnil, and in the vicinity of Ville-sur-Tourbe. Everywhere we answered this bombardment by a fire of repression directed against the German batteries and trenches, which apparently was very efficacious.

The explosion of one of our mines in the Argonne resulted in the complete destruction of a post of the enemy.

A group of French aeroplanes has bombarded the German aviation park at Ounel, between the Argonne and the Meuse.

The Belgian official communication made public today says that calm prevails along the line in Belgium.

Regarding the western theatre of war the official announcement from Berlin says:

"Nothing of special importance has occurred."

FRENCH DRIVE AIDED RUSSIANS

And Wrecked Plans to Reinforce Teuton Balkan Forces.

PARIS, Saturday, Oct. 23.—The Temps publishes an article concerning the recent Champagne drive and its effects, saying:

"The Germans expected the French thrust and hoped to parry it, for which purpose they withdrew from the eastern front two of their best corps, the Tenth and the Guard. When the action began the Seventeenth Corps also was dispatched westward. The direct effect of this was first to slacken and then to stop altogether the offensive against Russia and give the Russians a chance to take it their turn.

"Furthermore, before the Allies' offensive began, the eleventh German corps had been ordered to Serbia. One division had already gone there. Another, which was about to start, was rushed to France, and the renewed Russian activity forced the Austrians to hold back the 42d and 45th divisions, sent to Serbia on the 25th of September.

"There were 108 German battalions on the Artois front, and on the 15th of October 162 were counted. In Champagne there were seventy battalions at the beginning of the month, while on the 15th 193 were identified.

"The manner in which the troops were engaged shows that they were flung in anyhow to fill up the breaches. We found on one part of our front a battalion of infantry split into three unequal groups, general arrangements by no means in keeping with the famous methods of the German Staff which improvises nothing but foresees everything."

AMERICAN BATTALION TO GO FROM CANADA

New Force for the Front to be Composed of Former United States Citizens.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Oct. 22.—General Sir Sam Hughes issued authority today for the raising of a crack battalion of former citizens of the United States for service at the front. He has had repeated requests from former citizens of the United States to be allowed to fight together as a regiment for the glory of their new home.

"Hitherto," said General Hughes, "men who settled in Canada from the United States, Russia, and Italy have fought side by side with our own boys and those who came from England, Ireland, Scotland, and France, but now the Americans want a battalion of their own. Many gallant deeds have been performed at the front by former citizens of the United States, but now for the first time a regular battalion of these new citizens of Canada is to be formed, and it promises to be a crack regiment."

DETAINED SHIPS SUNK.

Germans Destroy British Steamers Berlin, Auk, and Iris.

GERMANS LOSE 4 SHIPS; SINK ONLY ONE IN WEEK

British Submarines Push Baltic Campaign While U-Boats Make Low Record.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 22.—The British submarine campaign against German shipping in the Baltic is being carried on actively.

The sinking of four more German steamships is reported: the Hernoesand, 1,182 tons gross; Plauen, 4,210 tons; Rendsburg, 4,639 tons and Electra, 1,261 tons.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—During the week ended Oct. 20 only one British steamer, the Salerno, was sunk by a German submarine. This is the lowest record in British ships sunk for months.

Since the German war zone decree went into effect in February, no week has passed without the sinking of at least one vessel, if only a British trawler. Since the week of Aug. 26, when twenty-one vessels were sunk, there has been a general falling off in the German submarine campaign. The record of the last three weeks, so far as the records are available, shows these vessels sunk: Sept. 30, three vessels; Oct. 7, one vessel; Oct. 14, two vessels. These totals may not include trawlers that have been sent to the bottom.

ATTACKS GERMAN WAR USURY

Cologne Gazette Also Says Farmers Are Holding Back Produce.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Cologne Gazette, as quoted by Reuter's correspondent at Amsterdam, says that the economic condition of Germany is endangered seriously by burdens imposed by war usurers.

"Exasperation festers in the people," the Gazette is quoted as saying, "because the task of holding out in the long war is rendered difficult by those who see in the present economic conditions a wonderful opportunity to make money. War usury remains an unsightly stain on the white shield of German honor, and war usurers incur the responsibility of gradually producing in a people who are self-sacrificing, enduring, and conscious of victory a gloomy and exasperated feeling."

The Gazette also attacks agricultural interests, asserting that farmers are holding back their produce for higher prices. It predicts that if an improvement in conditions is not effected immediately the Government will proceed to a general seizure of stocks.

BRITISH HAVE LOST 52,377 SINCE OCT. 1

LONDON, Oct. 22.—British casualties, published since Oct. 1, total 2,285 officers and 50,092 non-commissioned officers and men.

The foregoing figures show an average loss to the British Army of nearly 2,500 men a day. This is considerably in excess of the casualties earlier in the war, and indicates the heavy losses of the British in the recent severe fighting in Flanders. During the Summer the losses averaged about 1,500 daily. In April and May, when the heaviest fighting at the Dardanelles was in progress, the daily average was about 2,000.

TO CURB LANDLORDS' GREED

British Government to Introduce Bill Against Raising of Rents.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—As an outcome of the agitation against the action of landlords in raising rents, especially those of the dwellings of workmen in munitions areas, the Government intends to introduce a bill in Parliament to prohibit the raising of rents throughout the country during the war, according to The Daily Telegraph.

ENGLISHWOMEN'S WAGE EQUALITY IN WAR WORK

Skilled Munition Workers Receive Same Rates as Men, Lloyd George Says.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—In a statement issued today, David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, announces that women 18 years of age and over engaged in munition work receive a minimum wage of £1 weekly. When doing skilled work, on time or by piece, women get the same pay as men.

This official recognition of the right of women to receive the same pay as men for the same work is hailed as a great victory by militant suffragettes who have long been agitating the question.

DISCUSSION AIDS ZEPPELINS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Oct. 22, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—A Swiss airman assures me that the questions and answers in the English Parliament about the measures taken to foil the Zeppelin raids are very useful to the Germans, because they give the exact information about lights and other details, the knowledge of which is of the utmost importance to the enemy. This is especially true, because most of the Zeppelin pilots are men who for long periods resided in London.

In Berlin cafés, where English newspapers are taken, there has been a great rush to read accounts of the inquests on the Zeppelin victims.

Baltic's Name Read in Sky.

When the White Star liner Baltic came up to her pier yesterday afternoon from Liverpool, it was seen that she had a big black board on the front of the wheel house with her name painted in white letters. The officers said this had been done so that the British and French warships could read it at night with their searchlights. The Baltic is commanded by F. E. Beadnell, in place of Captain J. B. Ransom, who has been transferred to the Adriatic, due here next week. On the ship there were 56 first, 121 second, 108 third, class passengers, and 2,550 sacks of mail.

PRESS DRIVES HOME APPEAL OF THE KING

British Newspaper Emphasizes Grave Military Position With End Not in Sight.

IS NOW THE DARKEST HOUR.

Daily Telegraph Sees In It Also a Call to Stop Dangerous Attacks on the Government.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—The appeal issued yesterday by King George to aid the Earl of Derby's recruiting campaign [printed on the first page of THE TIMES this morning] as "a final effort to obtain the required men for military service without recourse to compulsion is framed in a tone bringing home to the nation the extreme gravity of its military position, and the frankness of the appeal in this respect is emphasized in the editorial columns of the newspapers today.

The Times, in an editorial on what it calls "The King's Stern, Stirring Appeal," says that "many conflicting ideas are current regarding the number of men really required."

It is variously estimated, The Times Adds, that between 25,000 and 35,000 men a week are required, and demands that the Government would put an end to this uncertainty by definitely prescribing some test number whereby the Earl of Derby's scheme must eventually be held to have succeeded or failed.

Most of the other London morning papers comment on the strikingly frank character of the King's appeal and the urgency of the situation which produced it.

Baron Wimborne, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, has placed himself at the head of the movement in Ireland by assuming the position of Director General for Recruiting and by appointing and organizing committees.

Appeal Applied to Politics.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—The Daily Telegraph, in an editorial on the King's appeal to the people, describes it as "a noble document inspired by a great and critical occasion," and expresses the hope that the King's words will be deeply pondered. The article proceeds:

"Those who pretend that they can assign a termination to hostilities are false and lying prophets. 'The end is not in sight,' and the impenetrable veil has grown blacker since events in the Balkans took their present turn.

"Let there be no illusions. The present is the darkest moment since the war began.

"We earnestly trust that the King's appeal will be answered by the manhood of Great Britain in such a way as to assure the success of the recruiting campaign at home and the triumph of the fiercer campaign of the field.

"But it is not only the recruitable men of military age who may be invited to consider what lies behind the King's emphatic declaration, 'the end is not in sight.' Cabals are afoot and under the cover of anxiety for the public good, politicians are plotting and intriguing. A semblance of unity is still left, but what was for months a firm and solid reality now shows signs of splintering before our eyes. While the coalition government endures the old strife of party is necessarily hushed, but something just as bad and dangerous seems to be fast taking its place. The malcontents are forming into groups.

"Factions are rising not merely around principles, but also around personal ambitions. Political activities are crystallizing into agitations directed against further continuance in office of certain leading Ministers. The general atmosphere at Westminster is in danger of becoming tainted, and if the rumor is true, the Cabinet itself is by no means free from the current infection.

"We frankly admit that the position is very perplexing and difficult. The British Government has made serious mistakes in these fourteen months of war. There are certain features in the conduct of Government departments which it is most exasperating to be required to watch in silence. Nevertheless we hold it to be the duty of every loyal Briton in these days loyally to support the Government, which is not merely a government of all parties, but the only government which could command a majority of the House of Commons in the present crisis of affairs, and when the Ministers make mistakes to help in their redemption.

"It is deplorable to think what harm has been done not only in this country but throughout Europe in the way of spreading needless discontent and a vague dissatisfaction. We hope that the King's earnest appeal to his people will at least lead to a temporary suspension of tactics which distract people at home and have a painful effect upon neutrals and friends abroad."

BOTHA WINS BIG VICTORY.

Nationalists Badly Defeated in South Africa Union Elections.

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 23.—The followers of the Premier, General Louis Botha, and the Unionists, who are supporting the Premier, are assured of a safe majority in the House of Assembly of the Union of South Africa.

The Nationalists, who opposed the military operations against German Southwest Africa and are attempting to defeat the plan of dispatching a contingent of the Union forces to Europe, have thus far obtained only twenty-one seats, mostly in the Free State. Their victories there were expected, as sentiment in that State is largely in favor of General Hertzog, one of the Premier's most bitter opponents. He is regarded as the most influential boer General, although in the uprising of last year he placed his services at the disposal of General Botha.

Contests for forty-two seats are still undecided. Returns from the rural districts, however, are overwhelmingly in favor of the Premier. At Witenhage Professor Hes Fremantle, a Lieutenant of General Hertzog, was defeated by 1,646 to 1,061. At Paarl, a Dutch centre, ex-Premier Merriam of Cape Colony, a supporter of General Botha, was elected by a majority of 2 to 1. At Losberg the Premier received 1,451 votes against 788.

Returns from the Free State indicate that the Nationalists have won all but one of the seventeen seats.

EXCHANGE WORRIES LONDON

Surprised That Weakness Doesn't Bring Out American Stocks.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—"There is much concern in financial circles about the renewed weakness in the American exchange," says the Economist. "Some sharp criticisms are being passed on the management of the exchange loan, which ought to be skillfully employed whenever weakness develops. It is also a matter of comment that Friday's weakness did not bring American shares into the London market."

The Times in discussing the financial situation declares that "a rather uncomfortable state of suspense reigns in the money market owing to the uncertainty about the policy of the Government as to the form which its next borrowings will take."

Continuing, The Times expresses the hope that next week will see the matter cleared up, for the Exchequer, it declares, is nearly at the end of its loan money, and there is nothing more dangerous than drifting.

"It is plain," The Times says, "that a fixed policy exists for keeping money rates up, but this has not prevented weakening the American exchange. We understand, however, that the official view is that this policy is really helping foreign exchange in a general way. There are rumors of an issue of Exchequer bonds on a popular basis."

ANSWER GERMAN PROTEST.

British Say Ship Flying Our Flag Was Transferred a Year Ago.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Foreign Office, in a statement tonight, says the German Government on July 28 complained to the American Ambassador at Berlin that the British steamer Buena Ventura, flying the United States flag, left Santa Rosalia, Mexico, for England on May 31 with a cargo of ammunition and rifles shipped from the United States, and requested the United States Government to be informed of this misuse of its flag.

The statement of the Foreign Office adds that the Buena Ventura was transferred from British to American registry on Sept. 9, 1914, and was purchased by the United States Steel Products Company.

"From the above," the statement continues, "it is clear that the German Government permits themselves to make complaints to neutral Governments without troubling to ascertain the real facts, even when they can be so easily verified as in the present incident."

GEN. HAMILTON IN LONDON.

Former Dardanelles Leader Returns as Successor Sails.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—General Sir Ian Hamilton, who was recently relieved of the command of the Dardanelles expeditionary force, returned to London from the Dardanelles last night.

General Sir Charles Carmichael Monro, who has been named to succeed General Hamilton, left London yesterday morning to assume command on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

On Oct. 19 the War Office announced the change in commanders of the Dardanelles Expedition. The announcement stated that General Sir Ian Hamilton, who would be relieved by General Sir C. C. Monro, had been ordered to return to England to make a report on the Gallipoli campaign. Pending the arrival of General Monro at Gallipoli, it was announced that Major General William Riddel Birdwood would temporarily command the troops.

SEEK AMERICAN'S RELEASE.

Friends Ask State Department Aid for Lish, Held in British Camp.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 22.—The State Department has been asked to endeavor to obtain the release of William Lish of St. Louis, an American by birth, who is held prisoner in an English camp because of his German name.

Lish left St. Louis three months ago with a trainload of mules destined for a European port. When the ship on which he was a muleteer reached English waters, Lish was made a prisoner. A copy of his birth certificate, on file at Edwards, Ill., and affidavits of residents of that city who knew him as a boy have been forwarded to Washington in substantiation of Lish's claim to American citizenship.

ITALY GOT OUR COTTON.

$6,000,000 Worth Intended for Germany Was Seized by Her.

Captain J. W. Batchelor of the Liverpool Salvage Association, who arrived yesterday on the White Star liner Baltic, said he had just come from Italy, where he heard of the sequestration of $6,000,000 worth of American cotton by the Italian Government.

The cotton had been intended for Germany, Mr. Batchelor said. Before war was declared by Italy Germany had sent cars through to Naples and Genoa to load the cotton, but the arrangements were made too late. Now Italy has the railroad cars and the cotton too, Mr. Batchelor added.

Says Serbia is Lost.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

[The Cologne Gazette Dispatches.]

GERMAN ARMY PRESS HEADQUARTERS IN SERBIA, Oct. 21, (via Cologne and London, Oct. 22.)—Owing to the success of the allied Teutonic armies, the future trend of developments in the Serbian seat of war is no longer dependent upon any powers.

In the north the Austro-Hungarian-German armies under command of General von Mackensen, after heavy fighting and breaking through what were supposed to be impregnable defenses to the south of the river, have secured two strong positions which they stormed with irresistible force.

Through this sudden extension of occupied territory the allied armies have already advanced inland far from the frontier, where, owing to the geographical nature of the country, communication between the different parts of the front is assured. Every gain of ground made by Austro-Hungarian-German armies now endangers adjacent parts of the enemy's lines, which must become untenable.

As the Bulgarian Army, which, superior both numerically and in military capacity, is cutting into the heart of the Serbian field operations and will soon cause a suspension of Serbian railway traffic, it may be safely assumed that any successful intervention in favor of Serbia has been made impossible.

Macedonians Deserting Serbs.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

[The Cologne Gazette Dispatches.]

SOFIA, Oct. 20.—Upon the entrance of the Bulgarians into Serbia enormous numbers of Macedonians deserted from the Serbian troops, fully 1,000 having already surrendered. Macedonia's population received the Bulgarians with jubilation as liberators. One Macedonian deliberately led a detachment of Serbians into Bulgarian territory, where they were captured.

It is reported from Saloniki that a fresh struggle has broken out there between Cretan gendarmes and English soldiers. A new violation of Greek neutrality by the protector of small States—England—is expected.

The Turks announce that in future hospital ships in the Dardanelles will be fired upon, as they are being used for the transport of troops. The wounded would better remain at their present stations in Turkey, where they have physicians and considerate treatment.

1,000 AIR PILOTS IN BRITISH SERVICE

The Twenty-third Squadron Is Being Formed in France, Says Lieut. Arbon.

HERE TO INSPECT MACHINES

Tells of a New German Anti-Aircraft Gun with an Accurate Range of 10,000 Feet.

Among the passengers who arrived yesterday from Liverpool on the White Star liner Baltic was Lieutenant Paul Sydney Harold Arbon of the British Army Aviation Corps, who was carried down the gangway to the pier on an invalid chair owing to an injury to his left leg that he received at Hendon two weeks ago. He said a machine fell with him and a piece of the skid, which had snapped, struck his leg and ripped it open from the ankle to the knee. He hoped to be able to walk about in a few days.

When the war began, Lieutenant Arbon said he joined the Navy Aviation Corps and remained in it four months. Since then he had been with the army in France, flying across to London and back with dispatches about once a week. He added:

"A great deal has been accomplished in aviation by the British Government since August, 1914. At that time there were only 300 pilots altogether. Now, without counting the number killed and wounded, there are 500 pilots in the navy and 500 in the army, and when I left France we were forming our twenty-third aviation squadron for the army. There are forty pilots in each squadron, and each pilot has three machines and three mechanics to a machine. James C. Porte is now the commander of the North Sea squadron of aeroplanes."

When asked about the attacks on German cities by the aircraft of the Allies, Lieutenant Arbon said one reason why none had been made recently was that the Germans had invented a new anti-aircraft gun, which had an accurate range of over 10,000 feet.

He said that Claude Grahame-White had resigned from the Naval Aviation Corps and was now making aeroplanes for the Government at his own factory at Hendon.

The lieutenant has come over to inspect some machines that are being constructed in this country and Canada and expects to be here two or three weeks.

F. S. Chanonhouse, a manufacturer of Hyde Park, Mass., who returned on the Baltic, said that he had seen one of the new French tri-planes at Issy-les-Moulineaux. It carried eleven persons and was driven by four motors of 200 horse power each. It had a wing spread of 120 feet, and the top of the planes was eighteen feet from the ground. The tri-plane carried a three-inch gun.

Mr. Chanonhouse said that when he was in Buc he saw a French bi-plane with four motors of 110 horse power each. The French Army would not use any aeroplane now unless it had two motors. The value of the two motors had been recently shown, he continued, when a bi-plane was attacked by a German anti-craft gun, which destroyed one motor and killed the aviator. The other aviator was able to return to the ground on the French side by using the remaining motor.

R. B. Foster, a Chicago business man who was a passenger on the Baltic, said that the German Zeppelins which raided London threw out clouds of steam behind their machines which hid them from the view of the anti-aircraft guns.

"I was at my house on the Hampstead Heath," he said, "on the night of Sept. 8, when a shell burst at 11 P.M. about 300 yards away, and shattered all my windows and knocked me down. I could see the Zeppelins afterward against the clear sky when the guns were firing at them. They suddenly disappeared from view in a sort of haze, apparently of their own creation. Powerful searchlights were being played on the aerial raiders, but the rays did not seem to be able to pierce the haze or fog which enveloped them, and they got away."

FIGHT WICKEDLY BEGUN ON US, SAYS KAISER

But He Confidently Trusts God, the Lord, Will Continue to Aid a Just Cause.

AMSTERDAM, (via London, Saturday, Oct. 23.)—Emperor William, replying to the congratulations extended by the King of Bavaria on the occasion of the five hundredth anniversary of the Hohenzollern dynasty, telegraphs:

"Although it is painful to me after my long reign of peace to be obliged to take up arms in defense of the freedom and honor of the Fatherland, I, with your Majesty and all the German Princes, confidently trust that God, the Lord, will continue in support of a just cause and grant us and our loyal allies a victorious issue of the fight wickedly begun against us."

SWOBODA IS OUT OF PRISON

But Is Detained Till French Determine His Nationality.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Raymond Swoboda has been discharged from prison, the charge of espionage, on which he was held, having been dropped recently. He has been detained by the Prefecture, however, pending the settlement of the question of his nationality.

Swoboda, who denies that he is a German, as has been charged, and claims American citizenship, was arrested in June on a charge of setting fire to the French Line steamer La Touraine. This accusation was dropped, but he was held on suspicion of espionage. On Oct. 11 it was announced that the French military authorities had decided that there was no evidence on which to hold him. It was reported at that time that he might be sent to a concentration camp.

ROME, Oct. 22.—The Messagero, which was first to give out the news of the Pope's appeal to the King of the Belgians for peace, maintains the truth of its assertions, giving proofs, although the Vatican organ denies their authenticity.

GERMANY SAYS SHE CANNOT STOP TURKS

Made Representations About Armenian Massacres, But Found Officials Uninterested.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Confidential advices received today by the State Department said the German Government had officially made efforts to alleviate alleged atrocities upon Armenians in Turkey, but that Turkish officials apparently displayed lack of interest in such endeavors.

Representations were made by the United States through Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople some time ago, warning Turkey that continued persecution of Armenians would alienate the friendship of the American people. A number of dispatches on the subject have been received from Mr. Morgenthau, but there has been no announcement of a definite answer from the Ottoman Government.

MAY ACQUIT CHARLTON OR FREE HIM QUICKLY

If Found Mentally Irresponsible, He Is Likely to Escape More Punishment.

COMO, Oct. 22.—The trial of Porter Charlton on the charge of having murdered his wife was resumed today. Micelli Picardi, Charlton's chief counsel, was present in court today, although he has not completely recovered from his illness. Charlton's physical condition has improved, and it is expected that there will be no further interruption of the trial. A verdict is looked for on Tuesday or Wednesday.

The court gave an opportunity to Signor Picardi to familiarize himself with the case. He asked many questions concerning the previous sessions.

Twenty witnesses were interrogated. Among them were hotel keepers, boatmen, porters, physicians, a druggist, a milkman, and the owner of the house in which the Charltons were living at the time Mrs. Charlton met her death. The witnesses gave contradictory testimony concerning the mode of life of the Charltons and their quarrels.

The reading of evidence taken in America produced an impression favorable to Charlton, especially the testimony of Drs. Alexander Hamilton, George King, William Arlitz, Edward Fisher, Arthur Hasking, and Alfred Herzog, agreeing as to the irresponsibility of Charlton. A deposition by William Croix to the effect that Mrs. Mary Scott Charlton had at one time attempted to shoot him, and another by John Glinteen, who testified that Mrs. Charlton considered her husband "an infant in her hands," were offered in evidence.

Under the Italian law a Judge submits to the jury a number of questions and pronounces sentence according to the answers. In Charlton's case the main questions will be: First, whether when he killed his wife he was mentally responsible; second, whether he was partially responsible; third, whether there were extenuating circumstances, such as provocation, intoxication, or jealousy.

If the first question is answered in the negative, Charlton will be acquitted; if in the affirmative, he may be condemned to serve about twenty years in prison, the Judge having certain discretionary powers.

If the second question is answered affirmatively the penalty may be reduced by half.

If an affirmative answer is given to the third question, Charlton may be sentenced to imprisonment for six years or less, which would probably mean that he would be released, since on Oct. 24 he will have been five years and four months in prison and would benefit by the year's reduction granted in fixing penalties for all offenses committed before Italy entered the war.

NEW ROOSEVELT MOTTO.

"To Hell with the Hyphen," He Suggests for National Use.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt expressed his sentiments regarding hyphenated citizens in a single phrase in a letter to Julius Chambers, a writer, of 214 West 140th Street, which was received yesterday.

In reply to a suggestion contained in a letter from Mr. Chambers, the Colonel said that he thought that the motto "E Pluribus Unum" on the coins and seals of the United States might well be changed into "language adapted to the needs and speech of the present day United States," and the motto ought to read "To Hell with the Hyphen."

NO SEAL PROSECUTION.

Secretary Redfield Sees No Reason for Changing His Decision.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—In response to an inquiry Secretary of Commerce Redfield has written Attorney General Gregory that he sees no reason to change the opinion formed some time ago that there is no ground for a Government suit against the lessees of the Alaska seal islands. The Attorney General will abide by the view of the Secretary of Commerce.

Repeated efforts have been made to have the Government enter suit on the showing made by a Congressional investigation. When the matter was brought to the attention of Secretary Redfield he went over the charges and came to the decision that there was no ground for interference by the Government with the present leases.

RICHMOND PLACES BLAME.

Ex-Convict's Love Affair Started Church Trouble, Rector Testifies.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—The Rev. George Chalmers Richmond, of St. John's Episcopal Church, took the stand in his own defense before the Ecclesiastical Board trying him on seventy-five charges today, and laid blame for his two years of warfare with the leaders of his congregation and with Bishop Philip M. Rhinelander and other dignitaries to the objections his lay reader, William T. Hamilton, had to the love affair of Mr. Hamilton's daughter with a young protégé of the rector, who had been a convict in Sing Sing Prison.

Mr. Richmond told the story of the ex-convict's attentions to Miss Hamilton, of his discovery that he loved another woman, whom he has since married, and said his faith in the former wrongdoer has been justified by the fact that he was now the secretary to the President of a big corporation and a good husband and citizen. The man is E. Howard Neumer. Yesterday he appeared before the triers in defense of Mr. Richmond.

"Mr. Hamilton objected to Mr. Neumer's attentions to his daughter," said the clergyman. "I thereupon advised Neumer to devote his time to re-establishing himself before the world, and to let girls alone for the present. He did so. Later he informed me that he had fallen in love with another girl, whom he has since married, and with whom he is very happy. When that news reached Mr. Hamilton he renewed his attacks on Neumer and went about the parish telling everybody that we had a convict among us. Then I threatened to depose Mr. Hamilton from the lay readership. He defied me and enlisted others."

TELLS LAST HOURS OF EDITH CAVELL

To estimate fully the significance of Dutch newspaper comments and to show to what temerity Dutch editors have been aroused by this execution, I need only remind you that one Dutch editor comes up for trial next week for having even dared to speak of the Germans as "conscienceless rascals."

The Nieuws van der Dag, a paper which so far has maintained a rather colorless neutrality, published today a whole-hearted condemnation. It says:

"This is news to make one shiver. War had so accustomed us to horrors that it needed a special horror to make us shudder anew; but this special horror is forthcoming in the action of the Germans against a woman who was executed, not for the debased crimes which fall under general condemnation, but merely for collusion with the enemy, who in this case was no more than her own country. We feel that on such an issue neutrals and all who try to hold the balance of judgment fairly between the two parties must not allow their words of protest to be smothered. There must be no quibbling about pro-German or anti-German, and no truckling to any side, no matter how powerful. Against such things one must rebel openly in the cause no less of humanity than of Germany herself.

Sees the Reign of Terror Outdone.

The Telegraaf says:

"Under the fatherly government of von Bissing the Belgians at present have cause to envy the Parisians of 1793, in the Reign of Terror. Not a person is sure of his life, and certainly not an honest and brave person, for the German Reign of Terror seeks by frightful examples to make the whole of Belgium a nation of traitors and cowards. Love of country, which the Germans themselves claim to honor as the highest virtue, they punish in the enemy as the most frightful crime. The sentence executed by them has caused the whole civilized world to shudder with horror. We wrote once in this journal: 'Holland is incapable of shuddering any more.' We were wrong: the death penalty on a brave woman has caused the whole of this country to freeze with horror. The German nation has now given up all make-believe of respect for the laws of nations. Openly and unashamed she makes herself a nation of outlaws against whom in future every possible measure of reprisal must be counted as warranted."

The Echo Belge, published at Amsterdam, says:

"This execution was simply and solely assassination."

CAN LOOK ONLY TO US.

Spectator Hopes We Will Press Inquiries in the Cavell Case.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—The Spectator says of the Cavell case:

"The American action is no stronger proof of the emotions which have been aroused in the United States than we should have expected. We sincerely hope the United States Government will press their inquiries further and be ready to inform Germany in the event of any similar episode that they are sensible of the enormous importance to the world of keeping military acts on a certain level of decency and chivalry. If the only great power outside the war does not do this, we do not know where to look for a champion of humane custom. We say this without any ulterior or mischievous thought whatever of embroiling the United States with Germany. Without coming into the war—a course of action which we have never urged and never shall urge on America—America could do much to recall Germany to forgotten standards.

"No man can say when the time may not come for America herself to profit by the principles of clemency in the conduct of affairs but apart from that we know enough of the American people to be sure that they will follow the steps of their Ambassador with the liveliest good wishes. Nothing will appeal to the American people more powerfully than what is in motive a mission of mercy."

WASHINGTON STIRRED BY EXECUTION STORY

Official Action Unlikely, But Case Makes Bad Impression in Official Circles.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—From what was said by officials today there is no likelihood that the United States Government will take any action with respect to the execution of Miss Edith Cavell by the German military authorities in Belgium, but the case will probably tend to revive the feeling that existed here over the reports of German atrocities.

There was a marked disposition among officials to avoid comment, but at the same time it was manifest that the execution had created a very bad impression. The opinion is widespread that the disciplinary and punitive effects of the treatment of Miss Cavell could have been gained as well by exiling her from Belgium or sending her to prison.

Military men, familiar with wartime law and practice, do not question the right of the German military authorities to execute Miss Cavell. They were entirely within their powers, it is said, in imposing the severest penalty, particularly if, as she is said to have done, Miss Cavell admitted the charge against her of having harbored British and Belgian subjects in violation of the German military code now in force in Belgium. But it is pointed out that all such codes are to be applied in accordance with the instincts of humanity and morality, and it is felt that there was a marked disposition to hurry Miss Cavell to her death.

The official reports in the case have taken away much of the feeling of satisfaction that prevailed in Washington over the news that the Kaiser had pardoned Countess Jeanne de Belleville and Mlle. Louise Thulier, two other women sentenced to death for harboring enemies of Germany in Belgium. They obtained clemency through the good offices of the United States, exercised in their behalf by James W. Gerard, the Ambassador in Berlin, in accordance with instructions from Secretary Lansing. The willingness of the Kaiser to annul the death sentence in these two cases has emphasized, in the minds of the people here, the anxiety of the German military authorities in Belgium to hasten Miss Cavell's death, apparently to prevent this Government and the Government of Spain, which acted with it in Miss Cavell's behalf, from appealing to Berlin.

High officials were asked today whether the United States would regard as a breach of good faith the manner in which the American Legation at Brussels had been kept in the dark as to the imposition of the death sentence on Miss Cavell after a promise had been given by a responsible German official that the legation should be notified of the action of the court, but no illuminating response was given. It was evident that the officials did not care to appear as parties in the affair. It was gathered from what was said at the State Department that no decision had been reached with reference to Miss Cavell's case for the reason that the official report of the American Legation in Brussels had not been received there.

The only satisfaction that Washington finds in the accounts of this distressing case comes from the story of the strenuous efforts made by Secretary

Gibson, acting in behalf of Minister Whitlock, to induce the German authorities in Brussels to postpone Miss Cavell's execution. The detailed story of the persistent importunities of Mr. Gibson and the Spanish Minister to bring the German authorities to a realization of the horror that would be created by the execution of a woman before any opportunity was given to make an appeal to the Imperial Government in Berlin, excited admiration here, where the opinion prevails that both Mr. Whitlock and Mr. Gibson did everything that was possible to save Miss Cavell's life.

The detailed report of his efforts made by Secretary Gibson to Minister Whitlock, and transmitted by the latter to Ambassador Page, has not been received at the State Department, where it was said today that the Ambassador and the Minister had an arrangement under which matters affecting British subjects in Belgian territory held by the Germans were to be reported directly by the Minister to the Ambassador in order that the latter might inform the British Government. The fact that the official reports of Mr. Gibson were made public before they were transmitted to the United States Government is not regarded as constituting any impropriety. Ambassador Page furnished the reports to the British Foreign Office and they were given to the press by the British Government. In giving the reports to the Foreign Office, Mr. Page acted as the medium of Minister Whitlock, who appeared in this case as the agent of the British Government in Belgium, just as Ambassador Gerard would have been acting with perfect propriety if he had made a report to the German Government concerning the execution of a German spy in England.

So far as official notice goes, it is not likely that the case of Miss Cavell will figure in the relations between the United States and Germany. This Government regards its efforts in behalf of enemies of Germany in Belgium or any other territory controlled by the Germans as entirely informal when these enemies have been convicted in accordance with German military law. In instructing Mr. Gerard to use his good offices with the German Government in behalf of the Countess de Belleville and Mlle. Thulier, Secretary Lansing informed the Ambassador that he was to act informally. This meant that the United States Government was not asking clemency for the two women as an act of right, but as an act of grace on the ground of humanity. The action of the United States exercised through Mr. Gerard did not question the right of the German military authorities to execute the women, but was intended to point out that if they were put to death a very painful impression would be created.

CHICAGO WOMEN SHOCKED.

But Mrs. Grace W. Trout Defends the Execution of Miss Cavell.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The execution of Miss Cavell is regarded by the leaders of the women's movement in Illinois as wanton and ruthless and without justification. There are some exceptions, but they are few.

Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, long prominent in the woman suffrage campaign in Illinois, frankly espouses the German side of the question. She says Miss Cavell was guilty of violating the laws imposed by the German Governor General of Belgium, and therefore the Germans were justified in putting her to death, regardless of sex.

This view, however, is not shared by the great majority of public-spirited women of Illinois. They condemn Miss Cavell's execution in unmeasured terms. Mrs. Robert W. Kohlhamer, one of the delegates to the International Woman's Peace Conference at The Hague, says:

"It is barbarism. Those are wickedly extreme measures to take in this age of the world's history."

A cruel and unnecessary taking out of the world of a wonderful spirit," is the verdict of Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley, President of the Chicago Women's Club. "Germany probably felt she had her justifiable reasons for doing this," said Mrs. Cooley, "but it must have been that there were no alleviating circumstances if Miss Cavell was considered an enemy by them. She had given aid to Belgians, English, and Germans alike. Her work was greatly merciful."

"If Miss Cavell was convicted of helping prisoners to escape she ought to be dealt with exactly as a man would be under similar conditions," said Mrs. Percy, President of the Illinois Equal Suffrage Association. "We, as women, regret her death exceedingly, but if she was guilty she was engaged in dangerous work, and she should pay the penalty exactly as would a man if caught. But my heart aches for a poor girl who is put to death in this manner. She was a victim of circumstances, she had no voice in bringing on the frightful war; but, as has always been the case in this world, the woman must pay the price just the same as the man who is responsible for the conditions. Her bravery in the face of death and her loyalty to her country compel our admiration and show to the world that, though merely a woman, she could go to the end with the same fortitude as a man."

CALL CAVELL KILLING A CROWNING ATROCITY

Oscar S. Straus and Others Denounce Germans; Suffragists Condemn War.

Condemnation of the execution of Miss Edith Cavell by the German military authorities in Belgium was general in this city yesterday. Herman Ridder, speaking for German sympathizers, said that not even their own people could support the officials at Brussels in their action. Oscar S. Straus and other men spoke of it in terms of horror and detestation. Woman suffrage leaders who expressed their views, however, were inclined to make the killing a text for the denunciation of war rather than of the Germans.

Oscar S. Straus, former United States Minister to Turkey, said:

"It is one of the most shocking and atrocious incidents of this war, and it is one of the most atrocious incidents that any war in modern times has disclosed. It is another evidence in line with the destruction of the Lusitania, that, amid the barbarities of this war, Germany has no appreciation of the public conscience of the world."

Wants Us to Act.

Maurice Léon, an authority on international law, said:

"How many more incidents of German frightfulness will be needed to make us realize what awaits us if Germany wins this war? Miss Cavell was not accused of espionage, but of helping fugitives to escape—an offense for which no woman has been put to death in modern times except with the authority of the German Emperor. The account of our representative in Brussels giving a minute statement of the manner in which this unfortunate woman was railroaded to death gives convincing proof that German officers derive a special pleasure in such human sacrifices. The suggestion has already come from certain quarters that we can do nothing about the matter. From that view I unhesitatingly dissent. Our Minister and his secretary were treated with flagrant discourtesy. They were lied to and rebuffed by people who expect us to look after their interests in the countries of their enemies.

"Are we to pocket that affront and call it another insult, and a light one? In the case of the Lusitania we undertook to act as the spokesman for humanity. Is the limit of that endeavor reached when we have sent two or three harmless notes containing demands that are promptly swept aside with contempt? How much longer must we remain neutral between crime and its victims?"

Hopes Americans Will Protest.

"As a minister of the Gospel and an American citizen," said the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, "I join with the rest of mankind in a profound sense of horror at the murder of a defenseless woman, with absolutely no extenuating circumstances so far as we can learn from the newspapers. I believe that the killing of Miss Cavell will do more harm to the German Empire than a long series of defeats on the field of battle. People in Germany, I am sure, share the feeling with the Christians in the rest of the world that the military powers have a hysteria of hate when they resort to cold-blooded assassination. It is the duty of every right-minded man to protest against this awful deed, and I hope American citizens will not be restrained by any considerations of money or policy from voicing their protests to the German nation."

Condemned by Herman Ridder.

"It is a terrible thing," said Herman Ridder. "It seems too awful that such things should have to happen. There should never be a necessity for the execution of a woman under any circumstances. Had Miss Cavell's case been taken before the Kaiser she would probably have been pardoned. There are times when German commanders may do things in the heat of war in which even their own people will not support them."

"The killing of Miss Cavell is all a piece of warfare," said Miss Mary Ware Dennett, chairman of the Committee on New Voters of the Henry George League and former Secretary of the National Suffrage Association. "I cannot see that it is much worse to kill an individual than to kill off an army. It only seems more despicable when we view it in cold blood. If the case of Miss Cavell, horrible as it was, would cure people of the idiotic idea that war ever settled anything, then it would have served a great purpose and have benefited humanity. Such incidents as the shooting of this English nurse always follow the trail of war. There is no such thing as a gentlemanly war. Nations no more than individuals can be expected to remain polite or moral when they are engaged in the business of killing each other."

"The execution of Miss Cavell is an outrageous thing," said Miss Olive Carpenter, who has been prominent in the women's peace movement. "No word can be too strong in condemning it. It shows the attitude toward women that developed in a militarist nation. It shows that a nation that resorts to force as its final court of appeal develops contempt for weakness and lack of respect for human life."

An Argument for Suffrage.

Mrs. Raymond Brown, President of the New York State Suffrage Association, said that, while she could not enter into the question of the justification for the killing of Miss Cavell, she did see in it an imperative reason why women should have the suffrage.

"The killing of Miss Cavell is only another of the many reasons why women should have the right equally with men to protect themselves," she said. "When it comes to the fit that women have to suffer and die just as do men. A woman is another human being, and men never could exempt her from paying the price that all must pay for the onward march of progress. Men die upon the field of battle armed, while women die unarmed. There is the full measure of suffering with the men and the woman none of the rights to shape events or defend herself. This is the great lesson that comes to us in the killing of Miss Cavell."

Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, President of the Women's Political Union, who has just returned from England and France, said:

"It is shocking, and I believe unjust, but there is no reason to become sympathetic because the victim was a woman any more than had a good man been done to death. There should be no distinction between men and women. People are being shot every day as spies, and if a woman chooses to act the spy's part she must expect the spy's reward. The Germans have shot many good men."

"When war so brutalizes a people," said Dr. Anna Shaw, "that they will take a woman like Miss Cavell—not because she is a woman, a nurse, a woman who has nursed their own men, and not one who has been found to be a spy, but who has assisted fugitives—when a brutalized people will take such a one out and kill her, then does not such action show the crime of preparedness for war?"

PRESS OF NEW YORK CONDEMNS THE KILLING

Miss Cavell's Offense Held Not to Have Justified the Extreme Penalty.

"Better Have Lost an Army Corps."

From The World.

Germans are forever complaining that Americans do not understand them. It is not worth while for any American to try to understand the mind and purposes that decree in cold blood the shooting of a woman for such an offense as that which Miss Cavell committed. Americans cannot understand it. Americans can never understand the mental processes of a people who are capable not only of tolerating such a military system but of exalting it and of deifying it. German psychology in the Cavell matter is as inexplicable to us as German psychology in the Lusitania matter. What everybody who is not a German knows is that the Germans might better have lost an army corps than to have shot this woman for the comparatively trivial offense that she committed. Her blood will blot the honor of the German Army and the German Government for generations to come. It is one of those stains that cannot be erased, and centuries hence German historians will be apologizing for the ruthlessness of a military commander who was unable to see that common sense is mightier than the letter of military law.

"Has Struck the World with Horror."

From The Sun.

In spite of the manifestations of "frightfulness" with which the record is already crowded, we are not willing to believe that chivalry to women is dead in the German Army. To the rank and file von Bissing can never be a hero. Doubtless the monstrous deed will be justified; nevertheless, it will sicken the soul of many an honest German officer. And the German women—for woman is true to her sex the world over—will deplore the fate imposed upon one who was a victim of her sympathies. Never has there been a war in which women have not played such a part as this Englishwoman did.

Indeed, to all Germans who have not been corrupted by Prussian militarism the hurried, stealthy shooting of hapless Edith Cavell in the dead of night behind prison walls will always be a bitter memory. More than all the counts in the Bryce report of atrocities in Belgium it will weigh in the scale of judgment, for it has struck the world with horror.

"According to German Military Law."

From The Herald.

For the consolation of those weaklings who object to the execution of Miss Cavell it is announced that the black act was done according to German military law, and therefore "legal."

So the slayings in Louvain, Dinant, and other bloodsoaked spots in Belgium were in accordance with German military law, and therefore "legal." The sinking of the Lusitania was, of course, in accordance with German military law and therefore "legal." The deportation of Armenia is, of course, in accordance with Turkish military law, and therefore "legal."

The order of Herod, if re-enacted by the military authorities of Germany, would be in accordance with German military law and therefore would be "legal," but the civilized world would denounce it just as it denounced the Belgian, Lusitania, and Armenian slaughters, and as it is denouncing the execution of Miss Cavell.

"Incomprehensible Stupidity."

From The Tribune.

Alive, Miss Cavell was but an offender against German military rules; dead, dead after summary conviction, dead under circumstances that gave the incident the character of a midnight assassination and the color of an atrocity, she becomes to all men of English blood a martyr and an inspiration to new patriotic devotion.

The killing is like the Zeppelin raids, it is like the Louvain slaughter, it is like the Lusitania massacre. The wrongs done to the women and children of a race do not terrify the men. They only serve to rouse the spirit, strengthen the arm, nerve the will. "Terrifulness" is an emptiest of threats and the weakest of weapons.

There is something almost pathetic in the German dullness to the things that move the world. It begs, whines, pleads for the good will and the approval of neutral mankind. It stands almost as a suppliant for the alms of approval of other races. But in the same moment, without warning, without reason, without anything but an incomprehensible stupidity and folly, it does something that shocks the moral sense, the humanity, of men and women the world over.

"Weighty Reasons" for the Deed.

From The German Herold.

The merits of the Cavell case may be discussed when the German Government publishes its version. We may point out that Miss Cavell confessed her guilt and that, according to a London dispatch, she had been suspected for a long time. Miss Cavell, occupying an official position, (on account of her connection with the Red Cross,) was in German eyes in a far worse position than the other defendants, because she used the prestige and the influence of her office for the benefit of the enemies of Germany.

It is probable, too, that she sent secret information to England or France. She was evidently an ardent patriot and there is no reason to suppose that she would restrict her activities to furnishing new men for the Allies' armies. We are sure that the execution would not have been ordered unless there were weighty reasons, and final judgment in this matter should not be pronounced till we have heard from the German Government.

Compared with Lusitania Horror.

From The Press.

This woman was sentenced to die and was killed because in the presence of the military court she defied it by iterating and reiterating her proud love of her country and her holy devotion to the duty of saving life, contrary to any military law. And the brutal butchers of such a woman under such circumstances will do more damage to the German name, will stamp the barbarism of German militarism more deeply into the memory of mankind, than any other thing, except the Lusitania horror, which that militarism has done to outrage civilization and to inflame with an irrepressible thirst for vengeance those nations and races which are at war with Germany.

VIEWS OF OUT-OF-TOWN PRESS

Offense Merited No Such Fate, According to General Opinion.

Following are comments of representative American newspapers on the execution of Miss Cavell:

Urges Punishment of von der Lancken.

From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The German Kaiser can remove a foul blot from the German escutcheon in one way, by removing General von der Lancken as Military Governor at Brussels and cashiering him as a soldier. And this course of action appears to be more obligatory upon him because of the evidence that von der Lancken, in unceremoniously and brutally hurrying the military execution of Miss Edith Cavell, the English nurse charged with aiding the escape of British, French, and Belgian prisoners, was seeking to forestall more merciful action by the Kaiser.

She had aided her friends without committing any act of downright hostility against the Germans. She had been guilty of a woman's indiscretion under the impulse of a woman's sentiment. Such an execution was an act of barbarous inhumanity, from responsibility for which the German ruler, acting for himself and his people, should free the German name in the degradation of von der Lancken.

A Warning to Our Pacifists.

From The Chicago Tribune.

The execution of Miss Edith Cavell has sent another thrill through this country. People who have taken little exception to Germany's determination to write new international and military law to suit her needs cannot but feel a shudder at this latest development.

Disobey the military dictator even by doing those things which have always been considered noble, and the penalty is death, death by shooting in the chill of the early morning hours—death to a woman alone and separated from relatives and countrymen. Short of torture, the mind can conceive of no more terrible penalty.

This should and may be the cause of mental awakening on the part of those who have hitherto remained obstinately secure in the face of a world of terrors. * * * Civilization is breaking faster and faster. How far the sword and torch will sweep no man can prophesy, but this we know—the American nation as a nation has given to the German Empire an offense greater than that furnished by Belgium, and has not as yet taken any step to protect itself from retribution.

"An Insult to the United States."

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The Administration has a duty in this matter, which it should not overlook. Miss Cavell, as a British subject, was under the protection of the American Legation. The American Minister made both an official and a personal request that her life be spared. This request was not only refused; it was treated with contempt. Mr. Gibson's report is scrupulously restrained in language, but his indignation may easily be read between the lines. The sentence of the court was carried out with a haste that emphasizes the insults to the United States; the procedure from the beginning was marked by insolence to its representatives. To let the matter drop here would be a confession that this country can neither protect its citizens' interests nor those of other nations whose interests it has undertaken to guard. Is the patience of even the President equal to this strain upon it.

Called a Crowning Atrocity.

From The Baltimore Sun.

It is difficult to speak in temperate language of the execution of Edith Cavell. * * * Coincidently with the publication of the details regarding her execution comes the report of the way in which a woman of German birth, Mrs. Louise Herbert, was treated by an English civil tribunal. She was engaged in a work quite as dangerous to England, to say the least, as Miss Cavell's work was to Germany. Miss Cavell was shot by a squad of soldiers, Mrs. Herbert was punished by six months' imprisonment.

The world will pronounce this one of the crowning atrocities of cold-blooded brutality. It is impossible to think of it without horror, to speak of it without execration.

MEMORIAL TO MISS CAVELL.

Shilling Fund Started in London—Frampton to Make Statue.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—The Daily Telegraph with a donation of 1,000s. ($250) has started a shilling fund to provide a memorial statue to Miss Edith Cavell. Sir George J. Frampton, the sculptor, has promised to execute the statue as "a labor of love."

There are many suggestions in the morning newspapers today that a national memorial be erected for Miss Cavell. The Daily Mail suggests the foundation of an institution for trained nurses. Mrs. Humphry Ward, the novelist, proposes that the Queen take the lead in the name of the women of England in the formation of a national committee to erect a memorial tablet to Miss Cavell in St. Paul's Cathedral or Westminster Abbey.

A memorial service for Miss Cavell will be held in St. Paul's next Monday.

GERMANS PUNISH MORE WOMEN OF BELGIUM

Many Imprisoned for Refusing Army Work—Food Supply Reported Stopped.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—A correspondent of the Havas News Agency, telegraphing from Hazebrouck yesterday, said that the town of Harlebeke, Belgium, near Courtrai, was being punished by the German Governor because the women of that locality refused to do military work for the Germans. Twenty-nine women, he said, have been sent to Germany as prisoners.

"The Belgian Food Committee has been forbidden to supply Harlebeke with food," the dispatch added. "All cafés are closed. No Belgian is allowed to go outdoors between 4 P. M. and 7 A. M.

"The town of Lessines has been compelled to pay a heavy fine because the women there declined to do work for the Germany Army."

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 22, (via London.)—The Telegraaf says it has received information from Brussels to the effect that ninety-four Belgians have been sentenced to terms of from two months to five years for refusing to work for the Germans.

GENEVA, Oct. 20, (via Paris, Oct. 22.)—The Strassburg Post describes the manner in which the Belgians received the news of the successes won by the Allies on the Western front last month.

"When the first news of the Allies' victory became known a feverish emotion took hold of Brussels," says the Post. "Boys in the streets shouted the news out. The number of German prisoners taken by the French and British was greatly exaggerated.

"With great effrontery the French and Belgian national anthems were whistled all day in the streets, but on the approach of German patrols there was silence.

"There was general joy at the victory over the 'enemy' among the Belgians. Many rich Belgians from the outskirts of the city went into the capital and ordered champagne. Many of them were accompanied by their women folk in splendid evening costumes.

"At the corners of the streets, where the German official reports were placarded, there were laughing, unbelieving crowds. Then an enemy aviator appeared above the city. The citizens rushed to the roofs of their houses, thinking it was the hour of their deliverance.

"We must educate Brussels and the Belgians."

HELD AS ZEPPELIN SPIES.

Two Men Said to Have Signaled Raiders from a London Roof.

LONDON Oct. 22.—Two men, whose names are not given, were delivered today by the civil authorities into the hands of the military for court-martial. They are charged with having given signals from the roof of a hotel at the time of a recent Zeppelin raid over the London area.

MANCHESTER A BANKRUPT.

Receiving Order Against the Duke on a Creditor's Petition.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—It was announced here tonight that an order for a receiver had been issued against the Duke of Manchester on the petition of a creditor.

The Duke of Manchester married in 1900 Miss Helena Zimmerman, daughter of the late Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati.

Financial difficulties of the Duke of Manchester in this country became acute in September, 1914, with the collapse of the International Social Service League, of which he was the President. Earlier in the Summer the Duke had become Vice President of the Church and School Social Service Bureau, an institution designed to provide moving pictures for school and religious work. Then it was suggested that the benefits of such a work ought to be extended to all mankind. The result was the incorporation of the International Social Service League with the Duke as the President.

While the concern was getting under way two events happened which had a disastrous effect on the business. The first was the death in an automobile accident of H. J. Hite, who was to be the practical moving-picture man of the concern, and the other was the outbreak of the war in Europe. In September the Duke went South, and shortly afterward creditors took over the furniture of the Forty-first Street offices.

KEENER ASKS A CHANCE.

Son of Late Judge Promises to Support Wife and Child.

A romance which began in the love of a college student for an actress had an anti-climax before Judge Crain in General Sessions yesterday when Ashley Nixon Keener, 33 years old, a civil engineer, pleaded guilty to abandonment and asked that he receive another chance. Keener is the son of the late William A. Keener, Professor of Law at Harvard, later dean of the Columbia Law School, from which place he was elevated by Governor Odell to fill an unexpired term on the Supreme Court bench.

The wife, who made the abandonment charge, said their six-year-old son, Ashley Nixon Keener, Jr., was in the Knickerbocker Hospital suffering from p

GOVERNMENT PUTS MORGAN IN COMBINE

NEW HAVEN GOT IT AT COST

Mellen Tells Court That Washboilers Brought About Purchase of Rival Road.

By means of the testimony of Charles S. Mellen, former President of the New Haven Railroad, and by records of the road's transactions, the Government yesterday unfolded in the Federal District Court, where eleven past and present New Haven directors are on trial for conspiracy to monopolize the traffic of New England, how the late J. P. Morgan and William Rockefeller, one of the defendants, helped the road to get its hold on New England traffic by buying control of the New York & New England's entrance into New York City—the Housatonic Line, jointly interested in the Wilson's Point route—and reselling it to the New Haven at cost. Mr. Mellen also showed how the rate on washboilers had to do with the purchase of the New England by the New Haven.

With the Wilson's Point line gone, the New England tried to retrieve its position by 'fiddling around' with the New York & Northern, the line which connected with the New York Central and is now its Putnam Division. The New York Central bought control of this company, and then it seemed the New England would get its long-desired entrance to New York by its connections with the New York Central, but here, according to the story as the Government will unfold it, it was shut out by the famous tripartite agreement. This was between the New York Central and the New Haven and the owners of the Grand Central Terminal, and divided between the two big companies the territory from which they might bring traffic into the Grand Central in such a way as to prohibit the New York Central from routing into the terminal traffic from New York and New England points.

New York Central's Role.

That everything was not proceeding as it ought to was, however, revealed to the New Haven by a letter written on Aug. 31 to Mr. Mellen as Second Vice President of the New Haven, by C. Peter Clark, General Freight Agent of the New Haven. He communicated the alarming intelligence that the New England was quoting an eighteen cents a hundred pounds rate on wash boilers in carload lots from Brooklyn to Providence by the Putnam route.

Mr. Lindabury of counsel for the defense objected, but Judge Hunt let Mr. Swacker of the Government counsel go on with his story, and after he had digressed allowed him to give further particulars of the taking over of the Housatonic by the New Haven through Mr. Morgan and Mr. Rockefeller.

Mr. Mellen stated that Mr. Clark, President of the New Haven had informed him "that the New York and Northern was not to be used in any way as a competitor of the New York & New Haven," but that he "found tariffs in effect that were indicative of its intention to become a competitor." So he told Mr. Clark, with the result that the New Haven Directors ordered certain technical alterations in the freight arrangements with the New York Central which might bring it to time.

Negotiations with the New York Central failed, and so in May, 1895, the New Haven Directors directed the purchase of the majority of the stock of the New England for a sum not to exceed $5,000,000.

"Mr. Mellen," asked Mr. Swacker, "did you take any steps to injure the New England?"

"I don't know whether I should call it injuring the New York & New England or helping the New Haven. My business was to look after the New Haven and not the New England."

"Did you order traffic going to or coming from the New England to be prepaid?"

"I don't know. I presume likely if it would add to the revenue of the New Haven it would be my duty to do so. I would not dispute it if any one said so," was the reply.

Mr. Swacker wanted to know if the negotiations with the New York Central concerning the New Haven's traffic grievances ceased when the latter had purchased the control of the New England, but Mr. Mellen replied that as he was at that time a Director he could not say.

The Corsair Agreement.

Then the Government brought up what was known as the "Corsair Agreement," which was made on Mr. Morgan's yacht, the Corsair, and covered the division of business interchanged between the New York Central and the New Haven by the Boston & Albany junctions.

Mr. Mellen said that he had written to Mr. Clark, the New Haven President, a letter concerning the traffic situation that that agreement covered which he had ordered to be printed, as he had been much impressed by it. Documents were put in evidence concerning the Corsair agreement and the effect on the traffic situation of the acquisition by the Boston & Maine of the Connecticut River line, but this line of testimony had not been developed when the trial was adjourned until Monday morning.

By the cumbersome method of reading long legal documents and formal Directors' minutes, the Government laid before the jury in the morning the beginnings of the schemes to monopolize the transportation facilities of New England. Mr. Mellen sat most of the day on the steps of the witness stand as Assistant Attorney General Robert Stephenson read the tedious documents, and so hard were the proceedings to follow that Delancey Nicoll suggested they were being held "in camera," and Judge Hunt himself said he found it difficult to hear.

The main document on which the Government laid stress was what was known as the Sound Lines Agreement, which regulated the traffic of the New England steamboats and was first drawn up in 1881. Its age gave the defense an opening, and R. V. Lindabury scoffed at the idea that it could possibly have any bearing upon the criminality of the Directors under an act not passed until after 1890. He was overruled, and Frank B. Swacker of counsel for the Government proceeded to show how it could affect the defendants.

Then the Sound Lines Agreement of Jan. 18, 1881, was read into the minutes. It was formed between the Boston & Providence Railroad, the Providence and Stonington Steamship Company, which constituted the Stonington and Providence Lines; the old Colony Railroad and Old Colony Steamship Company, the New York & New England Railroad Company, controlling the Norwich Line, the Metropolitan Steamship Company, and the New Haven. It was a traffic arrangement determining the rates for both passengers and freight carried by these lines and the territories each line might serve.

There was a penalty attached to any breach of the regulations, and all complaints under it were to be referred for settlement to Charles Francis Adams, Jr. If the agent of any line broke the bargain the company must either dismiss him or pay a $3,000 fine.

In 1891 the New York & New England Railroad Company, the capture of which by the New Haven the Government considers its first important step toward monopolization, proposed to establish its route to New York by way of Wilson's Point and the Long Island Railroad. This the New Haven Directors considered an infringement of the Sound lines agreement, and consequently began their fight with the New England, which ended in its absorption. Moreover, the Government contended that by the resolution of the Directors on April 11, 1891, recognizing the Sound lines agreement, the defendants laid themselves open to whatever of criminality there was in it.

Much of the morning's session was taken up with reading the documentary evidence afforded by the minutes of the Directors of the New Haven as to the purchase by that company of the New York, Providence & Boston Railroad, and the leasing to it of the Providence & Worcester Railroad about 1892. In 1894 it also acquired an interest in the Providence and Stonington Steamship Company, which had been connected with the Providence & Boston Railroad.

Nicoll Wants to Hear.

This was not done without the defense raising technical objections to the admission of the evidence and a protest from Mr. Nicoll concerning the difficulty of knowing what was going on.

"These proceedings," he said, "are almost conducted 'in camera,' except so far as the little group around the witness is concerned. I hear very little. I am certain those behind me hear almost nothing. The gentlemen of the press tell me this morning they hear nothing. If they are to report this trial it is only fair that they should know something about it."

"Well," said Judge Hunt, "it is very hard for me to hear. Long experience tells me it is very hard to hear in these court rooms, and where we have to have air it is still more difficult. Speak up, Mr. Stephenson; do the best you can."

"He's a good, strong, healthy young man," said Mr. Nicoll. "He should talk just as loud as I am talking."

"Mr. Nicoll," retorted Mr. Stephenson, "I don't depend on loudness."

Then the court settled down to listening to the minutes broken only by the formalities of the lawyer's technical objections. These came to a head when Mr. Swacker asked Mr. Mellen to look at the Sound lines agreement, which was drawn up in 1881 and amended in 1887.

Mr. Lindabury objected that it was not illegal, as it resembled the Hamburg-American Line agreement, which had recently been passed upon in that court. Moreover, he urged, the very core of the Government's case depended upon a conspiracy to combine certain concerns which were specifically named in the indictment. But these did not exist in 1881. Moreover, the Sound lines agreement lost all significance after the New Haven had acquired the Boston & Providence and the Old Colony, he said.

Judge Talks of Murder.

He also read a long objection on technical grounds drawn up by some of his colleagues, but Judge Hunt overruled all his arguments. None of the Government's counsel entered any argument, and so far in the trial the court has not seemed to expect counsel for the Government to reply to the objections of the defense. He has ruled directly on the arguments of the counsel for the defendants and has said down without any solicitation his view of the kind of evidence to be admitted.

In making his ruling Judge Hunt imagined the long continuing conspiracy to murder which was joined from time to time by other individuals, and he held that these might be convicted of murder provided it be proved that the conspiracy existed before they joined the association, that it continued, and that they were parties to it within the period of limitation, even though they did not know of the existence of the conspiracy until just before they became parties to it. Consequently the Government in this case might offer evidence which at first sight seemed isolated, in order to prove the existence of the conspiracy.

Mr. Lindabury brought out, however, that there was nothing secret about this agreement. It has been on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission for twenty-eight years, and Mr. Adams, the umpire, was the Chairman of the first Massachusetts Railroad Commission.

Mr. Swacker replied the Government contended that under the agreement the steamship lines gradually lost their independence and the fact that the agreement filed at Washington did not affect its legality under the Sherman law. Then to bring the participation of the defendants in it within the period of the Sherman law, he put in minutes of the New Haven directors on April 11, 1891, showing that when the New York & New England proposed to open up its Wilson's Point line it regarded it as a breach of the Sound lines agreement, and threatened in reprisal to withdraw all joint business with the New England, so far as it lawfully might.

It is expected that Mr. Mellen will be on the stand for another day to cover the first period of his connection with the New Haven as second Vice President. Then, if the Government can have its way, he will be temporarily excused after the defense has had an opportunity to cross-examine him.

50,000 ARE EXPECTED IN SUFFRAGE PARADE

Fifth Avenue to See Women's Biggest Plea for the Ballot This Afternoon.

GAY REGALIA ALL READY

The suffragists expect to have their greatest parade today with from 45,000 to 50,000 in line. The women will march up Fifth Avenue from Washington Square to Fifty-ninth Street and it is expected that the leading organizations will disband before the last have fallen into line.

By numbers the women hope to impress upon the voters that they want to take upon themselves the duties of citizenship. The marchers are instructed to keep their eyes to the front, to refrain from talking and laughing and to "Remember you are marching for a principle."

The parade will start from Washington Square at 3 o'clock sharp, the different divisions falling into line from the streets along Fifth Avenue. The last body in line will be the Women's Political Union which will have a parade on the east side before beginning the Avenue march.

The parade will take place, rain or shine.

The Women's Political Union, with five bands and a group of cavalry, will form at Houston Street and Second Avenue, and move at 3:30 up Second Avenue to Twenty-second Street which it will cross and join the main parade.

Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse says out last night the number of marchers as the enrollment figures in the different organizations indicated them to her as follows:

International Suffrage Alliance	350
National American Suffrage Association	200
New Jersey women	500
New Jersey State Association	100
Press and Publicity Council, Empire State Campaign Committee	50
Teachers	5,000
Private schools	200
New York State Suffrage Association	1,000
Borough of Manhattan	5,000
Women's Trades Union League	1,500
Germans	1,000
Brooklyn	10,000
Bronx	2,000
Queens	1,000
Patrolmen's Wives	500
Letter Carriers' Wives	200
Richmond	1,000
Equal Franchise Society	350
College Women's League	500
Men's League	10,000
Occupations and professions	1,500
Nurses	300
Civil service	500
Business women	500
Labor women	1,500
Women's Political Union	2,500
Total	47,230

No division will carry itself more proudly than the New Jersey women. Mrs. E. F. Feickert, President of the State Suffrage Association, will be preceded by the band, which the women will provide, and a banner on which will be the words: "New Jersey—Delayed but Not Defeated."

"We are proud of our success," she said yesterday. "We received 140,000 votes in a fight against a corrupt political machine. To have lost by only 25,000 votes is not a bad defeat for women with a small organization and little money to carry on their campaign."

Mrs. Mina Van Winkle will march with the Women's Political Union, whose fight she headed in New Jersey.

The Presidents or Chairmen of the different organizations will march at the front of their organizations with the officers. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw the veteran President of the National Woman Suffrage Association will be one of them. Dr. Shaw has always refused to ride in any of the parades, saying that she is too proud not to walk. She insisted this year that she must have a band of her own and proposed to hire one, but the National Association took the matter in hands and a very good band will march directly in front of her. She will wear her university cap and gown.

There will be many banners and costumes designed especially for this parade and much brilliant regalia. The women marchers are asked to wear white and the white parade hat which is sold for 50 cents, but they will be welcomed in any costume that may suit them.

Miss Leslie Johnson, who will lead the cavalry corps of the Women's Political Union has Titian hair and will ride a white horse. The Women's Political Union van, which helped the Jersey fight, will be drawn by two white horses in purple, green and white trappings. The Union's bands will play only one air, "Democracy," written for the occasion by Miss Agnes Stout.

All the headquarters were busy with visitors yesterday, and the stocks of buttons, banners, and regalia at the Empire State Campaign Committee headquarters were exhausted.

BUSES GIVE UP TO PARADE.

Fifth Avenue Lines Will Take Other Routes for an Afternoon.

The Fifth Avenue Coach Company, which operates the Fifth Avenue buses, announced last night that while traffic is stopped in Fifth Avenue during the suffrage parade this afternoon, the stages will temporarily take other routes.

The east side lines, embracing the Fifth Avenue, the Seventh Avenue, and the Manhattan and St. Nicholas Avenue lines, will take the following route: From Washington Arch along University Place to Fourteenth Street, to Broadway, to Seventeenth Street, to Fourth Avenue, to Twenty-third Street, to Madison Avenue, to Thirty-eighth Street, to Park Avenue, to Forty-second Street, to Vanderbilt Avenue, to Forty-fifth Street, to Park Avenue, to Sixty-fifth Street, to Fifth Avenue, continuing thence on the regular routes.

The west side line, known as the Riverside Drive line, will run as follows: From Washington Arch through West Fourth Street to Sixth Avenue, to Greenwich Avenue, to Eighth Avenue, to Fifty-ninth Street, to Columbus Circle, thence following the regular route.

8,000 MARCH IN PHILADELPHIA

Suffrage Parade to Welcome the Women's Justice Bell.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—This was woman suffrage night in Philadelphia. Eight thousand men and women advocates of the cause, bearing torches and lanterns and bedecked in a hundred varieties of uniforms, marched on Broad Street in what was called a Festival of Light. One hundred thousand persons witnessed the spectacle, which culminated in a mass meeting in the Academy of Music. Five thousand persons who could not gain admittance to the hall formed the audience in an overflow meeting outside.

The occasion was the arrival after its long tour of the "Women's Justice Bell," resting on a bank of flowers, completely hiding the wheels upon which it rolled, the bell was drawn over the streets by 100 young women dressed in white, flowing garments, garlanded with daffodils. The "Yellow Suffrage" automobile of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw also appeared in the procession.

Women representing every profession, trades union, college, and of course, suffrage organizations, as well as men from every line of endeavor were in line, and only the aged rode. Many costumes were striking and novel.

SUFFRAGE MAJORITY 157.

Ocean County Finishes Counting Tuesday's Vote.

Special to The New York Times.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., Oct. 22.—Ocean County has been prominently mentioned within the last few days, because it was the only one of the twenty-one counties of New Jersey carried by the Suffragists in their campaign for equal franchise.

The actual vote of Ocean County, with all the districts in, shows 1,450 votes for and 1,298 against the proposition to amend the Constitution in New Jersey to allow women to participate in elections. Thus the women carried Ocean County by 157 votes.

SUFFRAGE BILL TO GO IN DAY CONGRESS OPENS

Sutherland of Utah to Offer It in Senate and Mondell of Wyoming in House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage announced tonight that Senator Sutherland of Utah and Representative Mondell of Wyoming would offer the Susan B. Anthony Equal Suffrage amendment to the Federal Constitution to the Senate and the House on Dec. 6, the day Congress convenes. The amendment provides that the right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex.

The Congressional Union leaders, it was said today, were delighted over the strong support they were finding among new members of Congress and increased sentiment among those who were members of the last Congress.

"We shall urge on the Senate Committee on Suffrage, of which I am a member, to give a speedy hearing on the resolution which I will introduce," said Senator Sutherland today. "I shall press for action on a vote in the Senate. The matter should be disposed of as early as possible. The suffrage resolution received a majority vote in the last Congress. It will receive more the next time.

"It is just as absurd to debar the women from the ballot box as it would be to disfranchise all the red-headed or all the people beyond the certain line.

"It is urged that giving the ballot to woman will destroy her charm and femininity; that she will develop unattractive masculine traits. These are new words set to a very old tune. The same thing was urged against the new woman a hundred years ago when she demanded an equal opportunity for education.

"To my mind, the most convincing argument for the political enfranchisement of women is the absence of any really persuasive argument against it. If it be right to extend the voting privilege to all sorts and conditions of men, I am not quite able to see the justice of denying the same right to all sorts and conditions of women. If we have extended the privilege too broadly in the case of men, and wisdom demands that we should eliminate the unfit, the thriftless, and the illiterate, that is a good reason for denying the privilege to these classes of both sexes. It is no reason for denying it to the women who are fit and capable. In other words, the line which should separate the voters from the nonvoters is one of character and not one of sex."

Persons Examined Yesterday Were Assessed for $42,729,300.

Tax Commissioners examined yesterday 401 persons who are on the 1916 tentative personal tax assessment rolls. Their assessment amounted to $42,729,300. Out of the total number examined, sixty-two were held for a final assessment of $652,550. Of those exempted, thirty-five were excused because of nonresidence and six were reported dead.

Since the books were opened on Oct. 1, 3,322 persons have been examined on a total tentative assessment of $276,795,900. Five hundred and forty-three have been held for $4,022,891.

MAYOR NOW SURE SUFFRAGE WILL WIN

Pledges Himself Anew at Carnegie Hall Meeting to Vote For Amendment.

MALONE OPTIMISTIC, TOO

Urges That Women Be Allowed to Vote to Uphold President's Great Work for Peace.

Mayor Mitchel, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Senator Borah of Idaho, Dudley Field Malone and other speakers at Carnegie Hall last night predicted victory for woman suffrage in New York and drew encouragement from the recent defeat in New Jersey. Hundreds of suffragists, grouped under vari-colored banners, applauded Mayor Mitchel and again and again interrupted to cheer his remarks.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who presided, introduced the Mayor as the head of great city who believed women should vote.

At that there was a storm of applause that did not end until the Mayor smilingly begged for silence.

"I believe I can congratulate the women of this State tonight on their prospects for success. I recollect one year ago today upon this platform I had occasion to say that when enough women wanted the ballot they would get it. That statement was taken a little amiss, but so many women have declared themselves that legislators must listen and grant the franchise as a matter of justice. It seems to me tonight that it can be demonstrated that the predominant opinion of the people of this country is that the franchise should be extended to women, and it remains only to translate this statement into law. As I have frequently said before, I shall cast my vote for the suffrage amendment. I sincerely urge upon my fellow-citizens that they vote for this amendment."

In the words of a suffrage worker, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw was the life of the party, and her sallies kept the crowd in good humor. She, like every other speaker, was optimistic, but she did not go as far as Dudley Field Malone, who foresaw the women going to the polls next year to vote for a President.

Dr. Shaw recalled that she came here by way of Castle Garden sixty-four years ago, but that she had the true spirit of the democracy. "When I see the names of many of the men and women who sign anti-suffrage appeals, I think that though they were born here they have repudiated democracy," said Dr. Shaw. "I am reminded of early days in Lawrence when we recited much poetry. Among the lines that are fixed in my memory are: 'I would rather be a dog and bay the moon than such a Roman.' I paraphrase it thus: 'I would rather be a dog and bay the moon than such a woman.'"

She told how a week ago a clergyman had threatened to brand her from the public platform because she had charged that a man of low character in California had contributed to the anti's campaign.

"Bad men co-operate to get what they want," said Dr. Shaw, "and good men are sometimes so good that they are good for nothing. A clergyman only recently said that a woman with the vote was an offense to the Almighty. He said that her mental inferiority was shown by her apparel. At the time he was preaching he had on a gown that was as near a woman's as he could get. If a man is going to criticise women's clothes he ought to keep out of them.

"If we lose in this State we will still be the victors. We have discovered our power; we know now our force and know ourselves as never before. This campaign has done more to fit us for the vote than twenty years of voting."

Dr. Shaw read from anti-suffrage literature and raised many a laugh. She analyzed a circular sent out in Pennsylvania in which the antis gave "six reasons among ten thousand" why women should not vote. "They call upon the men to protect them," she added, "but they don't say to protect them from what. Well, I considered this and having no husband and no father, and a brother 3,000 miles away, I looked about to see what I was to be protected from and found a man."

Senator Borah declared it a mistake to say that women did not use the vote. "Those who say the women won't vote," he said, "cannot have lived in a State where they do vote. I have known women to travel miles to a political meeting. Politicians know they will vote and vote intelligently. There was a convention in our State, and the night before a slate was made up. Now nothing usually can break slates, but this slate was not like others. The day of the convention word came that the women objected to one of the candidates and the slate was smashed in fifteen minutes."

Dudley Field Malone declared that the right of suffrage involves the question of justice. The exercise of it raises the question to one of ethics.

"In one generation," he said, "eight million women and children have been compelled to leave their homes to earn enough to support their homes. In New York and New Jersey one-third of all the women of voting age go out to work; in Massachusetts forty out of every 100 women of voting age must work; in Pennsylvania, we find 30 per cent. of the women work.

"Because my ancestors landed not at Plymouth Rock but at Castle Garden I have always had a profound belief that men of all origins and all blood-relationships should be admitted to citizenship after remaining a given period under the influence of our institutions. But it is also desirable to place in the electorate every mature individual, male or female, of brains, character, intelligence, and love of country in order to perpetuate the American traditions and the American idea of democracy.

"If the men of New York will give the women the vote they will contribute a mighty element of moral force to sustain our great President in his unparalleled effort to keep America at peace and actively ready to be a compelling service to all mankind."

CURRAN STRONGLY BACKED.

Mitchel and McAneny Campaign for Republican Chairman.

Mayor Mitchel, George McAneny, and Park Commissioner Cabot Ward last evening urged the re-election of Alderman Henry H. Curran in the Twenty-sixth Aldermanic District at a meeting in the public forum of Public School 41, Greenwich Avenue, near Sixth Avenue. Mr. Curran and Robert McMarsh, candidate for the Assembly, who is running against J. G. Milburn, Jr., in the Twenty-fifth District, also spoke.

"We have had during the past two years a co-operative Board of Aldermen," said the Mayor, "and it is for our best interests that we should continue to have such. We have been conducting our municipal government not merely as a cold-blooded business proposition, but with a humanitarian spirit. In place of being a joke, as in former times, the board has become a real engine of efficiency. Nobody will regret the loss of Mr. McAneny's services more than myself, but if we must part with him I want a man like Mr. Curran to take his place."

Mr. McAneny said:

"We should elect a Board of Alderman that will conduct the affairs of the city along non-partisan lines. Although a Democrat, I am here to urge Mr. Curran's re-election. It will be my own bad fortune to retire from my present position shortly after Jan. 1, and if I could have my way, I would say, put Henry Curran in my place and I will feel well satisfied.

"I come as a Democrat who feels very strongly his party obligations, but as one who nevertheless believes that in choosing our city officials we should leave politics out."

INSTRUCTION.

It Is a School's Work That Counts

CONCENTRATION is the keynote of our work. Before a boy leaves here he has learned once for all to keep his mind on one thing at a time. It is not a cramming process. It is simply utilizing the moments a boy wastes if he lets his mind wander. These records are more than isolated cases. They are representative of the type of work we do. Names and indisputable records on request.

NEW NAVY SECRET TO BALK TORPEDOES

DANIELS READY FOR BIDS

Wilson Sounding Legislators on Army Increase—Navy to List Merchant and Private Craft.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Secretary Daniels announced today that bids would be opened on Nov. 19 for the construction of two new dreadnoughts, and it also became known that the vessels would be provided with the greatest defense against torpedo attack yet introduced into any American battleship. Several new ideas will be appended in the construction of the hulls to enable the ships better to withstand submarine torpedo blows.

What these innovations are cannot be obtained from Secretary Daniels or higher officials of the Navy Department at this time beyond the fact that they are the result of the caisson experiments which were conducted in the lower Chesapeake Bay last Summer. They consist of several thicknesses of hull, with a number of subdivisions and a provision for the placing of internal armor within the nulls of these vessels.

One lesson learned from the European war is the necessity for greater protection for huge warships against torpedo attacks. In the past this has been attempted, among other ways, by torpedo nets. Nets have not been used in the United States Navy, but Secretary Daniels is planning to use them on some of the new battleships. However it is not with nets but with a different method of hull construction that it is intended to render the new battleships safer against torpedo attacks.

These vessels are now officially known as battleships 43 and 44. After contracts have been awarded they will be named. The policy of the Navy Department for many years has been to name battleships and armored cruisers after States. The board thinks the navy should have forty-eight battleships in the first fighting line. This would enable the navy to have a fleet or fleets in which the name of each State would be represented. The only State not now represented by a ship in the navy is New Mexico.

The new dreadnoughts for which contracts will be awarded on Nov. 19 were authorized by the act of March 4, 1915. The contracts would have been awarded last Summer but for the fact that preliminary plans for the vessels were delayed by the desire to incorporate in the two new ships some lessons of the war in Europe, and also to better safeguard them against torpedo attack. It is understood that the displacements of the new ships will be about 32,500 tons each. They will be about 625 feet long over all, and about 90 feet beam. Their mean draught will be about 30 feet of water. They will carry a full supply of fuel oil, amounting to about 2,200 tons for each vessel, and will have a maximum stowage of 3,271 tons of fuel oil. The speed on trial is to be not less than 21 knots.

The armament of these vessels will be virtually the same as that of the California, Idaho, and Mississippi. In their main batteries each of the new dreadnoughts will carry twelve fourteen-inch guns, arranged in four turrets. There will be three big guns in each of the turrets. Each of the units will have four submerged torpedo tubes. The secondary batteries will consist of twenty-two five-inch rapid-fire guns, four three-pounder saluting guns, two one-pounders for boats, a three-inch field piece for landing parties, and two 30-calibre machine guns.

Wilson Continues Conferences.

Formal announcement of army plans in the national defense program to be laid before Congress by the Administration this Winter awaits word from President Wilson that he has concluded his conferences with Congressional leaders on the subject. While the President has approved the plan which calls for building up an army of more than 1,200,000 men in six years he has not yet had an opportunity to discuss it with all those members of the House and Senate whose views he wishes to obtain.

Senator Chamberlain, Chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, now is en route to Washington from Oregon.

It was learned tonight that, although it had been determined to recommend establishment of several new harbor defenses on both the Atlantic and Pacific, armed with 16-inch guns, final designs for these giant weapons had not been completed. Army ordnance experts say the 16-inch gun in no sense represents the biggest weapon that can be designed. If ships are built that can withstand the blow of a 16-inch projectile, it merely is a question of building a bigger gun. For that reason the new coast-defense guns will be designed only as they are authorized, so as to include latest ideas.

Listing Merchant Ships.

Organization of the naval districts of the United States and the insular possessions to aid the Bureau of Naval Intelligence in gathering information that will be of use to the department in war or peace times is included in plans upon which officers of the Navy Department are at work. There are thirteen of the districts in addition to those at Honolulu, Manila, and Panama, each under the supervision of the commandant of a navy yard in that region.

It is proposed to make this organization active in registering all American merchant vessels that might be of use in war times, including power boats and motor launches, to organize by these districts the various radio stations, public and private, as long-distance eavesdroppers to "listen in" on any wireless conversation at sea off the coasts, and also to make the proposed navy training camps correspond to the district organization.

A proposal has been made and probably will be presented to Congress that all pleasure power boats be required to carry registry by number in order that close track may be kept on them. It has been reported that Great Britain has a fleet of 2,000 armed trawlers and motor launches now patrolling her coasts, manned largely by civilian crews. An additional thousand power boats for this work, it is said, will be completed soon. Navy officers believe a similar organization could be formed among American power boat owners.

The boats would have considerable value as aids to the great fleet of coast defense submarines it is proposed to build up within five years.

CANAL SLIDES WORRY NAVY.

Cruiser Brooklyn, Going to China, Must Use Suez Route.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The gravity of the situation at Panama on account of the slides from the standpoint of national defense and military policy, was brought home to officials of the Navy Department today when they decided to send the cruiser Brooklyn to the Orient by way of the Suez Canal. The vessel is to be used as the flagship of Admiral Albert G. Winterhalter, the new Commander in Chief of the Asiatic fleet. His present flagship is the first class cruiser Saratoga, formerly the New York.

By reason of long service on the Asiatic station the Saratoga is greatly in need of repairs and overhauling and must be brought back to the United States. When Admiral Winterhalter was placed in command of the Asiatic fleet he picked the Brooklyn for his flagship, and this vessel has been thoroughly repaired and overhauled for a long tour of duty in the Orient. For several weeks the Brooklyn has been ready to proceed. She is to be sent direct to Shanghai, China.

Officials of the Navy Department had worked out an tinerary for the Brooklyn to Shanghai by way of the Panama Canal. When she was ready to proceed the slides came, closing the canal. The Navy Department waited patiently for the reopening, but as there is no prospect of this before the first of next year, another route for the voyage had to be chosen. This new route is from New York by way of Gibraltar, the Suez Canal, India and China.

The Brooklyn will leave New York on Oct. 5. The distance to be traveled over the Suez route will be 1,411 miles longer than by way of Panama. This is equivalent to five days of extra steaming by the Brooklyn.

Congress last Winter enacted a law which provided that the Atlantic battleship fleet should be sent through the canal to San Francisco to attend the fair and celebrate the opening of the waterway. Naval strategists objected to this when they learned from Governor Goethals that there was a prospect of more slides at Panama. An equally important reason was that it was believed to be wiser to keep the battleships in the Atlantic while there was a possibility that events growing out of the European war might involve the United States. The Administration withheld its decision until last July, when it announced that the cruise to the Pacific would be abandoned. Naval officers are now very glad that that decision was reached, as the fleet was now in the Pacific it could not return to the Atlantic coast except by way of the Straits of Magellen or the Suez Canal.

THE NEVADA LEAVES QUINCY.

New Dreadnought Coming Here to Begin Her Speed Trials.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The superdreadnought Nevada, which is soon to be added to the Atlantic battleship fleet with her sister ship, the Oklahoma, both of which will be the biggest vessels in the fighting line, left the Fore River Ship Yard, near Quincy, Mass., this morning for the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where she is due tomorrow. The Nevada is to be docked preliminary to her builder's speed trials, which are to be begun next Monday.

Keen interest is being manifested in naval circles in these coming speed performances of the Nevada. One reason is that she is the largest battleship provided with Curtis turbines yet brought to the trial stage for the American Navy. There has been considerable trouble experienced with Curtis turbines in the navy, and for this reason the experts of the department are eagerly awaiting the performances of the Nevada. The only other battleship thus far completed with Curtis turbines for the United States Navy is the North Dakota, which has occasioned the Navy Department much worry on account of her engines. The Navy Department will ask Congress to make an appropriation for an entire set of new engines for this ship.

The second reason for the interest in the trials of the Nevada grows out of the fact that the engineering experts of the navy are anxious to compare the performances by the Curtis turbines with those to be made by the reciprocating engines of the Oklahoma.

The displacement of the Nevada is 27,500 tons. She is 583 feet long, has a beam of 95 feet 2½ inches, and draws 28 feet 6 inches. The draught of the Nevada was so great that she was only able to leave Quincy this morning at high tide. The Nevada is 96.4 per cent. completed. Her sister ship, the Oklahoma, is 98.1 per cent. completed. The Pennsylvania, which is 88.2 per cent. completed and is being finished at the Newport News Shp Yard, will be ready to enter the fleeb next Spring. The Pennsylvania displaces 31,400 tons, and is more than 600 feet long.

Program for Home Nursing Course.

The subjects which will be covered in "The Home Nursing Course" at the Harlem Evening High School for Women, 114th Street, west of Seventh Avenue, are the nurse, the sick room, the patient, accidents and emergencies, first aid to the injured, special medical cases, new-born and sick children, physiology and descriptive anatomy and hygiene. There are still a few vacancies in the class.

ROOSEVELT GIVES HIS DEFENSE IDEAS

Navy Second in World, Army of 250,000, Centralized Control, and Joint Manoeuvres.

ATTACKS WILSON REGIME

Let Navy Run Down, He Says—Germany and Britain Criticised.

Attacks upon the Wilson Administration, Germany, hyphenated Americans, and the pacifists are made by Theodore Roosevelt an an article published today in the November Metropolitan Magazine. The Colonel couples these attacks with a severe criticism of Great Britain, alleging that Great Britain is not doing its full share in the war. Turning to the question of preparedness in this country, he gives suggestions for a constructive policy.

In opening his article, Colonel Roosevelt asserts that had we begun the work of preparation when the war started we should now be able to make our national voice felt effectively in helping to bring about peace with justice. This he follows with an attack on the German-American newspapers and adds:

"The professional German-Americans here, acting, as has been shown by President Wilson's ardent supporters in New York, with the connivance of the Administration and by the direct instigation of the German Government, have deliberately campaigned against the United States, have exulted in the German atrocities, and have openly stated that the support of the German-American vote was conditioned upon the Administration's attitude toward Germany, and that Germany would let President Wilson play a part in the peace negotiations only if he actively or passively helped Germany in the war."

After reviewing briefly the history of our army and navy after the civil war, and answering criticisms which he said had been made that he did not do enough in his Administration to build up our forces, the Colonel made this attack on the Wilson policies:

"During the years 1913 and 1914 our navy had deteriorated with frightful rapidity. This was partly due to the way it was handled in connection with our absurd and humiliating little make-believe war with Mexico. Our ships were not manoeuvred and were never trained in fleet or squadron gunnery during these two years; and in consequence of this, among other causes, our fleet now stands certainly not higher than fifth among the nations in point of efficiency, and is not fit at this moment to defend us from serious attack."

His Program for Defense.

Colonel Roosevelt asserts that a half year's military service would be a priceless boon to young men and would tend to social cohesion. We should, he wrote, make our military preparedness as complete as that of Switzerland, adding:

"This means that first of all we should deliberately enter upon the policy of making our navy the second in size and efficiency among the navies of the world. Every worthless navy yard should be abandoned and every worthless military post; and not a navy yard or a military post should be kept, save from military and naval considerations. The administration of the army and navy should be centralized; no individual Congressman or Senator should interfere in such matters as the posts and navy yards.

"To permit the navy to deteriorate as it deteriorated in 1913 and 1914 should be accepted as an impeachable offense. The fleet and the army alike should be manoeuvred every year in mass; that is, all the battleships should be manoeuvred together in company with all the auxiliaries of every kind for weeks at a time, and a mobile army of at least 100,000 men should be similarly manoeuvred for at least a month or two. Our professional army should be increased at least to 250,000 men—and unless some form of unuiversal military service is instituted it would have to be increased to a half million men, if our needs are adequately to be served."

In treating of the pacifists Colonel Roosevelt wrote:

"As for the woman who approves the song, 'I Did Not Raise My Boy to be a Soldier,' her place is in China—by preference, in a harem in China—and not in the United States. Every woman who has not raised her boy to be a soldier at need has in unwomanly fashion striven to put a double burden on some other boy whose mother had a patriotic soul.

"Every professional pacifist in America, every representative of commercialized greed, every apostle of timidity, every sinister creature who betrays his country by pandering to the anti-American feeling which masquerades under some species of hyphenated Americanism—all these men and women and their representatives in public life are at this moment working against democracy. A riot of unrestricted individualism in time of peace means impotence for sustained and universal national effort toward a common end in war time.",

Criticism of England.

Of England's position in the war the Colonel wrote:

"England at this moment affords a lamentable example of the punishment that will surely in the end befall any nation which fails to take its duties seriously. Her navy has done admirably—thanks to men like Lord Fisher, who built it up, and to Winston Churchill, and especially to Prince Louis of Battenberg, who mobilized it in the nick of time, with an efficiency comparable to that which marked the mobilization of the German Army. Her soldiers at the front have behaved splendidly. But the English people as a whole have appeared to very great disadvantage when compared, for instance, with the French. This is true of their capitalists. It is still more true of their workingmen—compare their striking workmen with the French workingmen, who toil night and day, and exchange brotherly greetings with the Generals at the front. It is most true of their demagogues in Parliament and the press who oppose universal military service.

"After a year of war, wealthy England—England, the home of industrialism, England with its great military past, its tradition of fighting men—has failed to do its duty, as Germany and Austria, as Russia, France, Serbia, Montenegro, and Italy have done theirs. Relatively to her population, she has put an army of utterly inadequate size into the field, compared to what the other powers have done. More lamentable still, she has utterly failed, even with a year during which to work, in the effort to produce the artillery and munitions of war which will make her able to be as effective as her German opponents or her French allies."

Then, turning his guns upon Germany, the Colonel wrote that we should avoid with horror the ruthlessness and brutality and the cynical indifference to international rights which the Government of Germany had shown during the last year.

"But," added the Colonel, "if we value the heritage bequeathed to us by Washington and saved for us by Lincoln, we will at once begin the effort to emulate the German efficiency which is not only military but also social and industrial."

NAVY TO HAVE DIVING SCHOOL

Daniels to Provide Training for Deep-Sea Work.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The successful use of deep-sea divers in the recovery of submarine F-4, which was lost outside of Honolulu Harbor, has convinced Secretary Daniels of the importance of extending and developing the diving service of the navy. With this in view he announced today that he had directed the establishment of a training school for divers at the Newport torpedo station.

The Inspector of Ordnance at the station will be in charge, and Gunner George D. Stillson will be Assistant Inspector of Diving. Stillson, who has been stationed at the New York Navy Yard, is considered the most experienced diver in the navy. He was in charge of the divers who were sent to Honolulu to assist in raising the F-4.

TAFT SAYS AMERICA CAN'T HAVE BIG ARMY

Doubts Half a Million Men Can Be Raised Without Conscription, Even Early in War.

THINKS COST PROHIBITIVE

Ex-President Advocates Large Navy and a Stronger Force for the Nation's Coast Defenses.

Ex-President Taft last night suggested a difficulty which might arise in the increasing of the army in the course of an address on "Our World Relationships," at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

"The danger of militarism," he said, "is very remote in this country. We couldn't maintain a large army if we wanted to. We pay our soldiers $15 a month, and we have all we can do in good times to get the 80,000 men we have. If we wish to raise an army of half a million men in time of peace we will have to raise the pay from $15 to $35 or $40 a month, and this would be prohibitive. Without conscription we could hardly raise half a million men in peace, or even in the first stages of a war; and how long would an Administration stay in power if it passed a conscription law?

"Militarism is a desire for territorial aggrandizement and a desire to go around trying to pick a quarrel to demonstrate your greatness. We can have a big navy, an adequate navy, without danger of militarism. We are better prepared at present than many enthusiasts will admit, but we do need reasonable preparedness, and the navy and coast defenses are short of men. We need a navy as large as the navy of any other nation which has a standing army big enough to spare 250,000 soldiers within a month for an attack on this country.

"We had a navy in 1902 that was as big as that of Germany, the nation with the biggest standing army, but now we need an increase of 30 per cent. to catch up with the Germans. We have the best coast defenses in the world, but we lack 10,000 men of the number required to man them. We should need a year to train an army for war, but by keeping our navy and coast defenses up to the proper strength we can make the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans the bulwarks against unjust aggression from either side. We Americans show our intelligence and ability in many lines of activity, but in matters of government we seem to think God will take care of us, and we shall not have to do anything ourselves."

Mr. Taft expressed his opinion that America certainly would take part in an international conference after the war, "even if some of the belligerents don't want us," and outlined the suggestions made by the League to Enforce Peace. In discussing Mexican relations he said:

"Now we have recognized Carranza, one of the warring contestants, and the question is, Can he establish a government capable of maintaining law and order? If not, our responsibility for Carranza and the further anarchy because of the part we have already played will increase the probability of our having to intervene to stop the persistent international nuisance that Mexico has become to all nations whose subjects or citizens live or have property within her borders."

Mr. Taft expressed the hope that Carranza could establish a stable government, but ventured no opinion on the probability of it.

Prices of Blue Fox Skins Soar.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Brer Blue Fox must lie low. The official report of returns at the Government sale held this week in St. Louis of all pelts gathered in Alaska shows that all fur prices have gone high and the blue fox is highest of all. The average price received by the Government for blue fox skins was $114.47. These skins sold last year at an average of $42.21.

APPEALS FOR PORTO RICANS.

Mohonk Conference Would Grant Them Full American Citizenship.

MOHONK LAKE, N. Y., Oct. 22.—That there is room for improvement in the Government Indian service was pointed out in a platform adopted here tonight at the closing session of the Lake Mohonk conference on the Indian and other dependent peoples.

In answer to an appeal by Governor Yager of Porto Rico and several other officers of the Porto Rican administration, who delivered addresses here, the conference recommended the immediate grant of full American citizenship to the people of that island.

The platform recommended, further, that a careful study be made of methods to improve the standard of living of the masses of the people, and to relieve the increasing congestion of population, which speakers from Porto Rica said was threatening the lower classes with slow starvation.

McGraw Indictment Dismissed.

GRAFTON, W. Va., Oct. 22.—The felony indictment against Colonel John T. McGraw, Democratic National Committeeman and Director of the Grafton Bank, recently closed, charging violation of the State banking laws, was dismissed in the Taylor County Circuit Court here today. Colonel McGraw was accused of having borrowed $5,000 more from the bank than the limit set by law to any one person.

STEEL CHIEFS URGE MILLS TO ADVERTISE

George H. Jones Advises Million-Dollar Campaign for More Trade and New Fields.

GARY FAVORS PUBLICITY

Tells American Iron and Steel Convention "Public-Be-Damned Policy" Is Out of Date.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 22.—A million-dollar advertising campaign, stimulating a demand for steel products and opening new selling fields, was urged as a cure for business depressions by George H. Jones of Chicago, before the American Iron and Steel Institute in session here today. He talked on "Underadvertising of the Steel Business."

His address and that of ex-Judge Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation and President of the institute, who spoke on "Publicity in Business Methods," were well received by the steel manufacturers present.

Mr. Jones also urged co-operation among the various steel manufacturers, declaring that the day when competition was the life of trade had passed, and that it was now necessary for men in the same line of business to "get together."

"There is no industry that is so lacking in progressiveness in the most modern method of stimulating trade as the steel business," he said. "More money is spent in advertising toothpaste in this country than in advertising steel products. Steel men can pave the way to make depressions less severe by stimulating a demand for steel products.

Competition Suicidal.

"The badge of sanity today is the ability to co-operate. Competition may have been the life of trade once, but it is no longer. Competition became suicidal when the inventive genius of America devised machines that would manufacture beyond present economic wants."

Judge Gary declared he did not agree with statements that this country might expect a prolonged continuance of the great prosperity now experienced. He said he believed, however, that American industries would recover more quickly from the effects of the war than those of any other nation. He characterized the steel industry at present as "very prosperous."

"The public and corporations have known too little of each other in the past for the good of both," he said.

"Publicity has never done as much harm as secrecy. The corporation with a disposition to publish whatever facts were proper to be known has, without many exceptions, been treated justly."

Judge Gary referred to the famous expression "the public be damned," saying: "Whatever the truth may be in regard to this well-advertised and much-discussed expression, it is no doubt true that the sentiment which it conveys has in days gone by existed in the minds and actuated the conduct of a considerable number of the leading business men of this country and other countries during various periods of their history. Included in this class are men of intelligence and influence in all the various departments of industrial activity."

Publicity Could Prevent War.

Referring to the right of the public to know what its officials were doing and what policies were being considered and enforced, Judge Gary said that proper publicity would have prevented the present situation in Europe.

"If the masses of the people of the different nations engaged in the terrible conflicts that are now waging in Europe," said he, "were fully informed of all the facts, is it to be supposed the wars would be much longer continued? If they and every one of them, in the armies or at home, knew, as now published in our newspapers, that the daily cost of the war is $35,000,000, or at the rate of $30,000,000,000 per year, an annual interest burden, at 5 per cent., of $1,500,000,000, and that the indirect loss is about as much more; if they were aware that, on the basis of the war being prolonged to next February, there will have been killed in battle at least 5,000,000 men, deaths from sickness 2,500,000, and permanently crippled 5,000,000 more and these the very best; if they could see that 75 per cent. of the men in the armies who survive will never fully recover, physically or morally, from the effects of their service and association; if they realized that their countries are drifting, nay, speeding, into bankruptcy and must necessarily hereafter and for many years be at a decided disadvantage in the race with other nations for progress and success; if they understood that on the present basis of pension payments in the United States the amount to be paid for this purpose in consequence of the war will approximate $1,000,000,000 per year; if the leaders, the monarchs, the few who plan and control and command and know in advance and in detail what has been and is being done and is intended for the future, were to communicate all the facts to the public, when it could be done without prejudice to the daily conduct of the war; if all these startling facts and figures were of universal knowledge, would not the masses of the people, including the soldiers in the ranks, rise up in such vigorous protest against a continuance of the conflict as to compel the men in control to find some way of bringing it to a satisfactory termination and for the establishment of a basis which would prevent future, prolonged wars?

"If, indeed, before the wars were started the masses of the people of the different countries had been informed that wars were to be started, and the reasons or lack of reasons for starting them, would they have submitted to their precipitation?"

Business Conditions Here.

Turning to business conditions in this country, the speaker said:

"The business men of this country, particularly those engaged in the iron and steel trade, have reason to be thankful for the present conditions, which are very prosperous. The furnaces and mills are generally operating to full capacity and prices received for many, if not most, of the commodities produced are larger than they have been during the last few years, and should result in profits.

"We are at peace with all the world, and it seems likely that the wise policy which has permitted this state of affairs will be continued. We sincerely hope and pray that the wars which are raging in Europe may soon be brought to a close and a basis reached for the prevention of prolonged wars in the future.

"Apparently we are to have a period of industrial peace in this country. Many of the antagonisms which have hitherto been so hurtful and which have prevented natural business growth have disappeared, and legitimate business will, therefore, have opportunity to progress in accordance with its deserts.

"No doubt the sudden and marked improvement in conditions during the last six months is due, in a large measure, directly or indirectly to the purchasing necessities growing out of the wars; but there are other reasons.

Our Wealth Increasing.

"The total wealth of the United States, according to the last published figures, is more than one-fourth of the aggregate of all the nations, and it is rapidly increasing. Many of us believe that we may become and remain the leading nation financially, commercially, and industrially, provided nothing unnecessary is done by our people to prevent. Personally I do not agree with the statements which have been made that, at the close of the wars, we may expect in this country a prolonged continuance of the great prosperity now experienced, especially if we do not have protection against the results of cheap labor and the impoverished conditions abroad, which are inevitable. I do think that, with wise administraton and with the co-operation of the State and National Governments, our industries will be able to recover from the injurious effects of the wars much more rapidly than those of any other country, and that within a few years we shall be more successful than ever before.

"The value of good crops we all understand and appreciate. Evidently the season's crops are, in most respects, excellent, and with a good market therefor the farming communities will be prosperous and the country at large will be benefited.

"The American Iron and Steel Institute is to be congratulated on the good work it is doing and the high reputation which it deserves and has secured, and particularly on the splendid services which are being rendered by the young men, including those who are producing at our meetings, for our benefit, most admirable discussions of various topics which directly affect our industry."

PREDICTS A TRADE INVASION.

C. W. Fairbanks Demands a Protective Tariff to Meet It.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 22.—Warning that the United States should prepare for "a commercial invasion" as well as for a military invasion was voiced by Charles Warren Fairbanks, former Vice President, in an address delivered at a political meeting here tonight.

"The present prosperity of certain industries based upon war orders is inherently temporary," he said. "Within the period of the next Administration our own national life and the markets of the world are going to be profoundly affected by the great conflict now raging abroad. We must meet that with a constructive pro-American program which consists of:

"First, the restoration of the protective tariff; second, adequate preparedness for national defense; third, the restoration of the American Flag to the oceans; fourth, organization to market our wares in the world markets.

"We must not only have our own ships; we must establish ample banking facilities at strategic points in both hemispheres so as to affect credits more and more through our own agencies and to extend credits. We must send young men to the different countries to learn the language of the people, to learn their wants, whims, and prejudices. If we are to win new trade we must do business as others desire rather than to try and force upon them our methods."

After the war, Mr. Fairbanks said, only one rich neutral market in the world will present itself, America.

"To our shores will roll a tide of commercial invasion which will be paralyzing under a free trade on a tariff for revenue only policy," he said. "We are even more unprepared to resist commercial than military invasion. The weapon of cheapness, wielded by our impoverished commercial rivals, will be irresistible."

STRONGER MEASURES TO PROTECT BORDER

Another Infantry Regiment and Squad of Secret Agents Sent to Stop Raids.

PRESIDENT WILSON ACTS

Troopers Kill Two More Mexicans While Trying to Escape Across the Rio Grande.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The Government took new steps today to put a stop to the Mexican border raids which, in the latest outbreak, caused the death of three American soldiers and the wounding of eight others. While Secretary Garrison ordered the Twenty-eighth Infantry to Harlingen, Texas, near Brownsville, from Galveston, the Department of Justice was called upon to find out the real cause and origin of the disturbances.

President Wilson conferred with Attorney General Gregory, who, it was announced, is preparing to send a large squad of agents of the Department of Justice to the scene.

Officials here are convinced that the Carranza authorities have no connection with the disturbances and are anxious to stop them. The belief prevails that influences on the American side of the line have had much to do with a conspiracy to cause trouble.

Eliseo Arredondo, who received the recognition of the United States and the Latin-American republics for the Carranza Government in Mexico, will leave here tomorrow for the Mexican border to present in person to his chief the communications handed him by Secretary Lansing and the Latin-American Ambassadors and Ministers last Tuesday. Mr. Arredondo has had long talks with Secretary Lansing and members of the Latin-American Diplomatic Corps on Mexican affairs generally, and will make a full report on the negotiations he has conducted here. It is understood that among the subjects he will discuss with General Carranza will be the situation on the border resulting from persistent raids by Mexican bandits into American territory.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Oct. 22.—A detachment of the Sixth Cavalry late today fired on and killed two supposed Mexican bandits who were crossing the Rio Grande at the San Pedro ranch, twelve miles up the river from Brownsville. Both were armed. The bodies were not recovered. Lieutenant T. R. Van Natta of Troop L, Sixth Cavalry, was in command of the detachment.

WARNS CARRANZA OF FOES.

Obregon Says Enemies Lie in Wait in Mexico City.

Special to The New York Times.

TORREON, Oct. 22.—General Obregon, in a speech welcoming General Carranza to Torreon, Headquarters of the Army of the Northwest, said:

"On the battlefields they cannot vanquish us, but the enemy lies in wait for you. There, in the city where the mountains are dressed in white snow, you will find the enemy under another form. There reaction will try to drag us down to the ignominy of the times of the tyrant Diaz. But go we will. Be tranquil, even though you are there in that centre of corruption, because you are incorruptible.

"We are going to the north of the republic to annihilate completely the reaction. Should there arise another traitor we shall always be with you."

YAQUIS AMBUSH MEXICANS.

Forty-four Soldiers Reported Killed and Their Bodies Burned.

TOPOLOBAMPO, Mexico, Oct. 21, (by Wireless to San Diego, Oct. 22.)—A detachment of troops has been ambushed by Yaqui Indians between the plantation of the United Sugar Company at Los Mochis and San Blas, Sinaloa, according to reports received here today, and forty-four of the forty-six soldiers were killed.

The Indians then piled the bodies on a railroad bridge and, setting fire to the latter, destroyed all. The band consisted of 150 Indians.

The Indians are now reported crossing the Fuerte River and moving toward one of the United Sugar Company plantations at Aguila, about nine miles from Los Mochis. Carranza troops have been sent from Los Mochis garrison against the Yaquis. Latest reports state that conditions are quiet at Los Mochis.

HUERTA'S ASSOCIATES FREE.

Grand Jury Fails to Find Indictments for Conspiracy.

EL PASO, Oct. 22. — No indictments were returned by the Federal Grand Jury against Frank and Ike Alderete, General Marcelo Caraveo and José Zezaya for the alleged conspiracy of General Huerta.

The Grand Jury was dismissed today and the Alderetes and their associated defendants were released of their bond obligations.

General Huerta, who was arrested at the border for conspiring with the men named in the above dispatch and General Pascual Orozco, is still a prisoner of the United States Army at Fort Bliss. Orozco escaped from his guards in El Paso, fled to Mexico and forfeited his bond. He was later killed by Texas authorities when he led a raid across the border.

FELIX DIAZ WITH ZAPATA?

El Paso Hears Former Is Leading March on Mexico City.

EL PASO, Oct. 22.—A message, said here to have been received in Juarez today, is quoted as stating that Felix Diaz had joined the Zapata forces and was now at the head of 40,000 men with whom he is menacing Mexico City.

Receipt of the message was reported from two different sources.

CARRANZA FAVORS BASEBALL.

Will Encourage American Game and Stop Bullfights and Racing.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22.—Venustiano Carranza, head of the de facto Government in Mexico, is going to encourage the American game of baseball in the republic as a substitute for bullfights and other diversions along the border, according to Adolfo Carillo, his Consular agent here.

Carranza, Mr. Carillo said, would shut down on border iniquities as practiced at Juarez, Mexcali, Tiajuana, and other border towns, and would not recognize race tracks or Monte Carlos, or concessions therefor.

TAX DRIVES MINING OFFICES FROM LONDON

Several Companies Remove to New York, Which May Become World's Mining Capital.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The new budget, which provides for a supertax of 50 per cent. on the profits of all British companies, has already caused the removal to the United States of the headquarters of several companies representing South and Central American gold mines. Mining men here assert that unless the tax is reduced this movement will become so great that New York, instead of London, will become the mining capital of the world.

Mines whose production is just beginning are particularly hard hit. Unlike tea and rubber companies, mining companies have not been enabled by the war to raise their prices. The excess of profits is determined under the new ruling by subtracting from the income for the current year the average income for any two of the last preceding three years. Mining companies just coming into the field have no such opportunity, and will be compelled to pay 50 per cent. of their total profits for the year.

The tendency to remove headquarters to the United States is becoming so pronounced that mining interests here are bringing pressure to bear on the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Reginald McKenna, to have the supertax modified in favor of gold mines.

Directs Sale of Rock Island.

Judge Mayer in the Federal District Court yesterday confirmed the report of Bronson Winthrop, Special Master in the foreclosure suit brought by the Central Trust Company against the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company. He directed the Special Master to retain on deposit to his credit $85,988 out of the proceeds of the sale of the property for the purposes specified in the decree.

TOO MANY POLICE, CHINATOWN PLAINT

Bluecoats Spill Fan-Tan Beans and Spoil Big Domino Games.

APPEAL MADE TO MAYOR

Realty Owners Say Tenants Move to Jersey to Get More Liberty.

Playing dominoes in Chinatown has become such a rough-and-tumble indoor sport that the Real Estate Owners' Protective Association of the Sixth Ward has made a complaint to Police Headquarters about the practice.

Nearly always now when visiting Chinese business men go behind a red curtain and sit down to a sociable game property damage results. Doors are smashed, partitions are splintered, windows fall in, and furniture is strewn all about the place, the complaint says. The association says that everything would go quietly enough if Inspector Dwyer's men would stop molesting the Celestial tenants. Even a little innocent pastime with beans in a bowl, which some persons call fan-tan, generally results in the chaos of the furnishings, for the police come in and spill the beans.

The association consists of thirty owners of real estate in Mott, Pell, and Doyers Streets, that little tangle of thoroughfares known as Chinatown. It controls about sixty houses, largely tenanted by Chinese at first, but now meagrely so. The Chinese are disappearing rapidly from the quarter, the owners say, because of the activity of the police, and for that reason they made a formal protest to the Mayor. The City Hall referred the complaint to Police Headquarters, and yesterday Third Deputy Police Commissioner Dunham said that he was making an investigation of the matter. There was a hearing Wednesday, at which the association was represented by John F. McIntyre. The attorney declared that acts of oppression against his clients had become intolerable. Unoffending Chinese who were going about their business were often beaten in the streets, and if they sat down to a quiet game of dominoes there was likely to be a swarm of policemen upon them, who would break up the surroundings, he said. He filed another complaint yesterday about the presence of a policeman in full uniform in front of 11 Mott Street, who forbade any one to go into the house unless he lived on the premises. Mr. McIntyre declared that if any charge of gambling or other misconduct were made against his clients, it could easily be met, but there was no definite accusation, but merely destruction. He will, therefore, try to get what redress he can at Police Headquarters before entering upon legal proceedings. He declared that one firm alone, which had been doing a business of $1,500,000 a year, had lost half of its trade through the tactics of the police, which were not only driving the Chinese from Chinatown, but the visitors who bought goods in the quarter.

A. J. Porges, Secretary of the association, said that he did not know whether the tenants were gambling or not when they played dominoes. If they were, he declared that it would be more satisfactory to arrest such as were suspected instead of having the police continually walking in and out and disturbing well-meaning Celestials.

Mr. Dunham observed that there seemed to be a feeling in certain quarters, although not in Broome Street, that the Chinese were more or less privileged in the matter of games of chance and lotteries. He has asked the association for specific cases of alleged police oppression.

Mine Unionists Accuse a Leader.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 22.—William Stinson, District Board member, was found guilty today of accepting a bribe for signing the permissible powder contract with the operators, when the special convention of District No. 11, United Mine Workers of America, voted 163 to 106 to sustain the charges against him. Stinson accuses district officials of conspiracy to corrupt the last election of mine workers.

Hops

—On hop quality depends beer flavor

Those remarkable qualities of Budweiser and Michelob which distinguish them as being superior to other beers are their deliciously refreshing, never varying taste and exquisite bouquet—due to the exclusive use of the very best Saazar (Bohemian) Hops.

And there's no danger of our supply of these vitally important hops failing.

For years it has been an established rule to keep on hand a two-year in advance supply.

During the summer of 1914 our president, while on his annual hop buying trip abroad, selected and purchased 775,000 pounds (1550 bales) of the choicest Saazar Hops—and was fortunate in having them shipped to this country before the embargo was rigidly enforced in March, this year. Add this to the 500,000 pounds on hand and you'll see how secure is our position.

This foresight enables us to give to our millions of friends exactly the same beer, flavored with exactly the same hops that have helped to make Budweiser quality and Michelob goodness known and liked the world over. Our supply is sufficient to last at least until the closing days of 1917.

HOSPITAL MENACED BY BARREN ISLAND

NEPONSIT, L. I., COMPLAINS

Dr. Emerson Says Modern Equipment, Though Expensive, Would Do Away with the Odors.

Definite steps to put an end to the nuisance caused in the vicinity of Barren Island by the disposal plant there are being considered by the Health Department. Dr. Haven G. Emerson, Sanitary Superintendent, said yesterday that the Department probably would bring a suit against the contractors, charging them with maintaining a public nuisance.

"It would be premature to go into details regarding the Department's plans in this matter at the present time," Dr. Emerson said, "but it can be said that this and the problem of the fumes which come across to Riverside Drive from the Jersey shore are two of the most important problems with which the Department is dealing."

The fumes from Barren Island have long been complained of by residents of Neponsit, L. I., which is just across from the island, but in the past year, since the removal of the old Sea Beach Hospital from Coney Island to Neponsit, where it is known as the Neponsit Beach Hospital, they have become a matter of grave concern to the medical authorities. Persons who have had to inhale the fumes say they are not only highly objectionable, but actually a menace to health, and the Health Department officials say that they are by no means a necessary feature of the work done on Barren Island and could be easily done away with by the expenditure of the amount of money needed to make the disposal equipment modern.

"I took a house in Neponsit during the Summer of 1914, but I certainly would not go back this season," said D. A. Frank, a lawyer with offices at 15 Dey Street, yesterday. "Why the smells were so bad when the wind was blowing across Barren Island toward Neponsit that they sickened a great many people, and naturally disgusted them with the place.

"One evening when my wife and I returned late from a theatre party in Manhattan the wind was blowing directly from Barren Island. Mrs. Frank was actually overcome by the noxious fumes and had to be assisted home. There was one woman living near us for a while who was so seriously affected by the fumes that she had to have medical treatment to get over the effects. The Neponsit Beach Hospital was being built there at that time. There is no wonder invalids in the hospital find life an ordeal with those fumes to contend with; they are as much as the average man in perfect health can stand.

"Needless to say, the foul odors from Barren Island have a very depressing effect on real estate values in the community. Much of the land there no doubt would be readily salable at twice its present price if it were not for the smells. Agents complained often of losing sales because the wind veered around; and if I had bought a $10,000 place there instead of merely renting I would feel that I was 'sticking' a man by selling it to him for $5,000."

The contractors at Barren Island are the New York Sanitary Disposal Corporation, Dr. Emerson said.

"It would all be a very simple matter if the city would take charge of this disposal work," Dr. Emerson said. "Then the city could construct a modern incinerating plant such as the plants used in Europe, which are absolutely odorless.

"The great difficulty has always lain in the fact that this Barren Island work has been let out on short-time contracts, and the contractors complain that to install the new equipment needed to stop the fumes would be too expensive for such short contracts. I believe the contracts have generally been for three years. They should be for at least five years in order to justify the contractor in the outlay of funds for the needed improvements.

"The contractors have spent considerable money on the plants on Barren Island and have continually promised to have the conditions remedied by certain dates, but have always failed in this. We started to bring suit against them last December, but it was finally agreed to postpone any prosecution until they had installed certain equipment they were then ready to put in. The last of the new equipment was installed on Sept. 20 last, but the fumes were still there.

"We sent inspectors to Neponsit and the hospital on Sept. 22, and have been sending inspectors there ever since to gather evidence. We are now trying to collect all of the evidence in the case that we can."

FINLAND ON OLD ROUTE.

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt Among Those Sailing Tomorrow.

The Finland, which sails at noon tomorrow for London by way of Falmouth, will be the first vessel of the American Line to leave New York for that port and the first to carry three classes of passengers to London since the Monarch Line went out of business twenty-seven years ago. The steamers Manchuria, Mongolia, Korea, and Siberia, recently purchased from the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, will also be placed on this service when they arrive from San Francisco by way of the Straits of Magellan.

Among the sixty first-class passengers booked on the Finland are Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Alexander Kirk, Assistant Secretary to the United States Embassy in Berlin; Don Luis Enrique Bonilla, Minister from Colombia to Great Britain; Mr. and Mrs. W. Reed Williams, C. F. Valentine, and Mrs. Vernon Hull. The Finland has 75 second-cabin and 150 steerage passengers.

Captain H. Candy, former chief officer of the Philadelphia, will command the Finland, in place of Captain R. Prager, who was born in Schleswig-Holstein, and might be objected to by the British Admiralty officials at Falmouth.

DISLIKE OF FASSLER IS NO FLAW IN WILL

Appellate Division Holds Mrs. Oakley Must Abide by Father's Wishes.

FEARED SHE WOULD WED

Egbert B. Seaman Provided That in Certain Contingencies Daughter Should Receive Income Only.

The Appellate Division yesterday affirmed the ruling of Surrogate Cohalan in admitting to probate the will of Egbert B. Seaman, who was a Director in the Mason-Seaman Transportation Company when he died, and who left his entire estate in trust for the life benefit of his widow, Mrs. Maria F. Seaman.

Upon the death of Mrs. Seaman the estate was to be divided into three equal shares. One share each was to be paid to the son, Egbert B. Seaman, Jr., and another share to the daughter, Mrs. Carrie L. Midlitz.

"The third share," the will reads, "I give, devise, and bequeath unto my daughter, Frances B. Oakley, widow of John B. M. Oakley, provided, however, that at the time of my decease my said daughter shall be married to some person other than one Leo Fassler, who now resides in New York and is there engaged in the practice of law, or provided that at the time of my death the said Leo Fassler is dead."

The case went to the Appellate Court after Mrs. Oakley had objected to the validity of the will, and the Surrogate had ruled against her.

The will also contained provisions for various contingencies. If Mrs. Oakley was unmarried and Mr. Fassler living, or Mrs. Oakley married to Mr. Fassler, the trustees must pay her only the income from her third during her lifetime. If she married Mr. Fassler and predeceased him, her share was to be given to her brother and sister. If Mrs. Oakley, however, married Mr. Fassler, and he predeceased her, the third was to be given to her outright.

FILE THOMAS HUNTER'S WILL.

Educator Divided $23,000 Equally Among His Three Daughters.

The will of Thomas Hunter, the educator for whom Hunter's College was named, was filed for probate yesterday. It leaves $20,000 in realty and about $3,000 in personal property in equal shares to his three daughters, the Misses Anna, Jenny, and Margaret Hunter of 2,079 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn.

Loving cups presented to Mr. Hunter by the classes of Grammar School 35 and the Normal School of New York City are to be kept, under the provisions of the will, by the daughters as family relics. The proceeds of the sale of a narrative history of the United States and of a book on plane geometry are to be divided equally among the daughters.

Epidemic Stops Milk Supply.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Oct. 22.—More than 400 families in Hackensack, Englewood, Bogota, Leonia, and Maywood had to do without milk this morning, for State Inspector D. C. Bowen of Trenton ordered the Hackensack Board of Health to forbid a dairy company of Hackensack to distribute its usual 3,000 quarts of milk. He asserted that an epidemic of scarlet fever in these places was traceable to the milk supply of a creamery company in West Town, Orange County, N. Y. In fairness to the dairy company it was announced that pasteurized milk would be delivered to all customers tomorrow.

TWO BOMBS FOUND IN LOT.

Fifty Children Were Playing Near Deadly Explosive Machinery.

Detective Barberi of the Second Branch was walking through a vacant lot adjoining the six-story tenement house at 402 East Twelfth Street yesterday afternoon when he noticed a bundle with newspaper wrappings. He kicked it aside and two bombs fell out.

Barberi called Policeman Healey of the Fifth Street Station and they soaked the bombs in water and notified Inspector Owen Egan of the Bureau of Combustibles.

The bombs were in steel cylinders, ten inches long and six inches in diameter. Each contained three sticks of dynamite joined by fuses and several railroad spikes. They were done up in an Italian newspaper dated April 3 and an American newspaper dated Oct. 17. Egan said they contained about nine pounds of dynamite.

About fifty children were playing in the lot when the bombs were found. There have been several bomb explosions in the neighborhood recently, but the police have not been able to learn the name of any one who has received threatening letters.

WILL TRY TO OUTBID SCHWAB

Cambria Steel Interests Enter Field for Pennsylvania Steel Company.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—Negotiations for the sale of the Pennsylvania Steel Company to Charles M. Schwab have come to a sudden halt. An eleventh-hour decision on the part of William H. Donner, President of Cambria Steel Company, and his associates, that they were prepared to exercise their option of Pennsylvania Steel stock, held by the Pennsylvania and Reading Railroad Companies, to the extent of outbidding Schwab, promises a titanic struggle to prevent this company from falling into the hands of the Bethlehem interests.

Mr. Schwab had virtually completed arrangements for acquiring the property. A few days ago, however, on the very eve of the consummation of the deal, the Donner group made use of its option to be the preferred purchaser, providing its offer was not beaten by Mr. Schwab.

It is understood that the Donner group is not acting in its own behalf in fighting for control of the Pennsylvania Steel. According to good authority these interests are representing a third party which recently appeared in the transaction.

The identity of this new interest cannot be learned, but it is freely predicted that the ultimate ownership of the Pennsylvania Steel Company will be preceded by the straining of the purse-strings of the parties involved.

TIGER CONSTITUTION IS TAMMANY'S HOPE

Fights New Document on Belief That Wilson Will Lift Wigwam Into Power in 1916.

WANTS ITS OWN BASIC LAW

Friends Seek Source of Funds Used to Carry on Broad Propaganda of Opposition.

Tammany Hall is counting on President Wilson's candidacy for re-election to make next year a Democratic year, on the consequent ability of New York Democrats to pass the referendum in 1916 providing for another Constitutional Convention in 1917, and on the Wigwam's getting control of that convention, and thereby to deliver to up-State Republicans the chastisement put into storage by the Republican victory in the 1914 campaign, which gave that party control of the 1915 convention.

This was the construction put by Republican leaders yesterday on the repudiation of the Constitution on Thursday night by Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith, candidate for Sheriff, and Senators Robert F. Wagner and James A. Foley, all of whom voted for the Constitution in the convention, but spoke against it in a Tammany Hall meeting and got much applause.

"It all goes to show that the whip has been cracked," said former Attorney General George W. Wickersham, one of the Republican leaders of the Constitutional Convention, last night. "Smith, Wagner, and Foley know the proposed Constitution is a good thing—they all voted for it—but, of course, their personal opinions count for nothing at times, and this is one of the times. I am particularly surprised at the action of 'Al' Smith, who gave us such intelligent help at Albany from the store of his ability. I thought he would stand by his vote."

Tammany Sees Better Chance.

"But Smith hit the nail on the head when he said that Tammany would have a better chance next time. Under the provisions of the present Constitution, if the proposed Constitution fails of adoption, the question of having another Constitutional Convention must be submitted in 1916. Now, Tammany is betting on Wilson's candidacy making it a Democratic year and the ability of the Democrats to order another Constitutional Convention in 1917. Tammany believes it can control that convention, just as it thought it could control the convention this year. It will be remembered that Tammany did not control it, however.

"But this scheme which has brought Tammany Hall out against the Constitution, over the vote of its representatives who endorsed it in convention, is a mere will o' the wisp. In the first place, next year may not be a Democratic year. But if it is, I am confident that if the proposed Constitution is beaten on Nov. 2, the people will not vote for another convention in 1916. A vote against the Constitution would mean that the people had enough of Constitutional conventions.

"Tammany's opposition to the proposed Constitution will not hinder its ratification—quite the contrary."

Republican leaders showed no chagrin at Tammany's open opposition to the Constitution. They pointed out that in their belief it would solidify the Republican vote and mean a great gain for the Constitution up-State, where party lines often fade away when the issue is Tammany Hall. They expressed their confidence that the Republican vote and that of independents and independent Democrats would pass the proposed Constitution. They said they knew all along that Tammany would fight the Constitution in subtle ways, and that the open opposition clarified the situation.

Tammany Opposition a Help.

Frederick C. Tanner, Republican State Chairman, said he was not surprised, and did not think the cause of the Constitution had been injured.

Joseph M. Price, Fusionist, said the open opposition of Tammany would win votes for the Constitution instead of hurting it.

"Tammany is playing a political game and is blind to the economic benefits of the new Constitution," he said. "And the thinking people will gauge their opposition by that standard. The proposed Constitution is nothing less than a charter of liberty for New York City, although it doesn't give the Fourteenth Street organization all it might have gotten if it had controlled the convention.

"If thinking Democrats would study the Constitution—its introduction of business methods into the conduct of State business, its fixing of responsibility in State government, its tax, and many other reforms—they would vote for it, regardless of Tammany. It isn't a partisan proposition, Democrats and Republicans alike voted for the Constitution in convention, and it is an insult to the people of New York to allow politicians to bring in the vagaries of partisanship. I believe the good sense of the people will prevail and that the Constitution will be accepted."

Despite the expressed confidence of the Constitution's friends, it is known that they are perturbed over the activity of its opponents and are planning greater efforts for its adoption. They are trying to find the source of funds which are being used lavishly to defeat the Constitution. Hundreds of thousands of circulars are being sent through the State, especially in up-State counties, setting forth opposition arguments. This propaganda bears the names of many organizations, but appears to be backed by a well-devised system, and advocates of the Constitution do not conceal their belief that much of the money comes from a headquarters they have not been able to locate.

Attack on Conservation.

Among the pamphlets sent out is one which attacks the conservation article as an open sesame to the lumber interests and water-power interests for an entrance into the State forest preserves. Another tells farmers that if the Constitution is adopted they will have to furnish a sworn list of all their possessions, from the family dog to the parlor organ, and be prepared to prove that nothing is undervalued. The "listing system" which aroused so much opposition among farmers in Ohio, is offered as an example of what will follow in New York if the proposed Constitution wins.

Another pamphlet says that raising legislators' salaries from $1,500 to $2,500 and allowing weekly railroad expenses will keep them at Albany the year round to enact laws to vex business men and farmers. These criticisms spread faster than the advocates of the Constitution can contradict them.

Louis Marshall, a delegate to the convention, yesterday challenged President Lawyer of the New York State Forest and Game League to prove his alleged statement in a meeting of the league at Watertown recently that $50,000 was at his disposal to defeat the Constitution. Mr. Marshall says he wants to know just who is putting up this money.

Mr. Wickersham said last night that he was much interested in Mr. Marshall's effort to find where the opposition's money was coming from.

Might Lose Special Favors.

"I don't know the source of it," said Mr. Wickersham, "but one may have his suspicions. It is not hard to make a list of those interests which will be affected by the adoption of the Constitution. Who are the people who have been going to Albany every year for 'pork' and concessions? Who are the people who have representatives in Albany every year working for some special favor? List them and you will probably find those who do not want to lose their old-time unjust privileges through which they preyed upon the taxpayers of the State.

"From reports from all parts of the State, I am convinced that the Constitution will win a substantial victory on Nov. 2."

There was no further declaration from Tammany yesterday, but word will be sent along the line to beat this Constitution and wait until Tammany calls a convention.

GIBBONEY WOULD REJECT IT.

Democratic Lawyer Says Work Should Be Done Again in 1917.

Stuart G. Gibboney, Democrat, issued a statement last night in which he advocated the defeat of the proposed Constitution and another convention in 1917 by "delegates of the people." The statement says in part:

"If the voters do their duty and the Constitution is defeated this Fall, delegates truly representative of the people can be elected to a new convention in 1917, which will draft an entirely different Constitution, both in purpose and provisions—a Constitution which will provide for the good of the many rather than favor the powerful few, and the great State of New York may start life anew with a Constitution which is progressive and forward-looking, fulfilling the needs of the present day, rather than with one which at its best is ten years behind the times.

"The convention, having betrayed the trust reposed in it by the people, should be rebuked by an overwhelming defeat at the polls.

A Critical Examination.

"Fortunately, the proposed Constitution is now being intelligently discussed in every section of the State. This aroused public interest was not expected by the Elder Statesmen of the Republican Party. They would have builded far differently if they could have foreseen the critical examination to which their handiwork is now being subjected. The reactionary spirit of the makers of this Constitution is reflected in all its important provisions.

"An evident distrust of the people to govern themselves through their chosen legislators is apparent throughout, and the most fatal objection to the Constitution as a whole is that it is not in fact a Constitution at all, but a conglomeration of undigested statutory provisions dealing with the details of government with which the fundamental law of the land should have nothing to do. The United States Constitution as originally adopted covers but eight pages; the proposed Constitution covers sixty-nine.

No Objection to Lawyers.

"The convention had no mind to leave anything to legislation. It seeks to copper-rivet upon the people commissions and offices which cannot be altered to meet changed conditions by future Legislatures, but which shall continue without change for twenty years.

"The fact that 134 of the 168 delegates were lawyers is not necessarily a reason for voting against the Constitution, but that the lawyers representing privilege were in control of the convention is evidenced by their scrupulous desire to safeguard great corporate interests. Nor was it strange that a convention under such influences should have turned a deaf ear to labor's plea.

"For a long time the farce was kept up that the proposed Constitution was non-partisan, but the Republican Party, made desperate by the fear of defeat, has now been forced into the open, and the Republican State Committee has been hurriedly called together and made to indorse the work of its delegates. It is a partisan Constitution, placing the interests of the Republican Party above that of the people at large.

Ballot Could Be Shorter.

"Though the convention was in a confused way aware of the necessity of catering in some degree to the spirit of the times, as was evidenced by the brave talk of the President of the convention about our 'Venezuelan' form of Government, of which he had been so prominent a pillar, yet it made itself ridiculous in the sop it has thrown to the populace in the form of the so-called short ballot.

"For it does not provide for a short ballot at all, but only attempts to deceive the people by abolishing as Constitutional elective officers the Secretary of State, State Treasurer, and State Engineer. There was an ostentatious attempt at one time to make the State Controller an appointive officer, but when the present incumbent, a good Republican, showed his teeth, the convention readily capitulated. If the delegates had really meant to adopt the short ballot, it would have followed the Federal system and have made only the Governor and Lieutenant Governor elective officers, and thus have created a centralized responsible Government.

Contains Some Improvements.

"The deeper you dig into this mass of undigested enactments, the more you are convinced that every dictate of reason demands that the citizen without regard to party, who has the true welfare of the State at heart, should vote to defeat a Constitution which has manifestly ignored the true needs of the State and, instead, seeks to serve the privileged few.

"That the proposed Constitution contains some improvements over the present one, it would be foolish to deny. This is particularly true of the new budget system, which is a marked improvement. But the unwise and harmful provisions far outweigh the good."

A. E. SMITH INDORSED BY CITIZENS' UNION

Says Tammany Man Will Improve Conditions in the Sheriff's Office.

THIS ANGERS GRIFENHAGEN

Demands to be Told Where and How His Office Can Be Better Administered.

The Campaign Committee of the Citizens' Union yesterday indorsed Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith, Tammany candidate for Sheriff. The committee said there was no question of his qualification for the office, and that the service he rendered to the State in the Constitutional Convention entitled him to special consideration.

The committee also indorsed Charles A. Perkins, Republican candidate for District Attorney of New York County, and James C. Cropsey, Republican candidate for District Attorney of Kings, as well as several other local candidates.

Regarding Mr. Smith, the committee said:

"In giving this high praise of Mr. Smith we are neither unmindful of his political connection or his record during his earlier career as a member of the Assembly when we repeatedly had occasion to criticise his activities as representing a desire to serve his party's interest rather than the public interest. Although a party leader, Mr. Smith has in recent years been instrumental in obtaining much desirable and important legislation.

Will Improve Sheriff's Office.

"We are indorsing Mr. Smith in the expectation that he will improve the conditions in the Sheriff's office."

Philip C. Samuels is indorsed to fill the only vacancy in the City Court. The committee said:

"By temperament and training he is well fitted for the office. The election of either Mr. Samuels or Charles E. Manierre, the Prohibition candidate, would be far preferable to that of Lorens Zeller, the nominee of the Democratic and Republican Parties, who is clearly not fitted for the office. His record on the bench should have prevented his securing the nomination. His election would be an unfortunate reflection on the intelligence of the voters. The Citizens' Union will urge the united support for Mr. Samuels as the only opportunity to prevent the re-election of Judge Zeller."

George Medalie is indorsed for the Eighth District Municipal Court and Edgar J. Lauer for the Ninth District, the Bronx. Medalie has been in the District Attorney's office since 1910 and Lauer is a candidate for re-election.

Stephen Callaghan is indorsed for Justice of the Supreme Court and John McCrate for Register in Kings County. For County Judges in Kings Robert H. Roy, Harry D. Lewis, and George Friefeld are indorsed. The committee also puts its approval on Lucius S. Bayliss, Edgar M. Doughty, and Charles H. Fuller, candidates for the Sixth District Municipal Court in Brooklyn.

Grifenhagen Is Indignant.

When Sheriff Max Grifenhagen learned that the Citizens' Union had said it was supporting Mr. Smith in the expectation that he would "improve conditions in the Sheriff's office," the Sheriff was indignant and said:

"It is outrageous and contemptible for any officer connected with the Citizens' Union, which is supposed to represent something in our civic life, to make such unfounded representations as were given to the public in that statement. I demand of the Citizens' Union that it as a body or any of its officers indicate to me how and where this office can better be made to serve the interests of the public.

"It is due the people that the Citizens' Union point out any element in this administration which is not for the public good, and which has not been for the public good since we took office. This is due me as well from the Citizens' Union, which has indorsed me for every public office I have held, and which was responsible originally for bringing me into public life."

FORESTS WELL PROTECTED.

Adirondacks Association Indorses Conservation Article.

The Association for the Protection of the Adirondacks, of which John G. Agar is President, has issued an additional statement indorsing the conservation article of the proposed Constitution. The statement says in part:

"The Association believes that the proposed Conservation Commission of nine members, one from each judicial district of the State, serving without compensation and for long terms, with the powers given in the amendment, promises a disinterested administration whose recommendations will be received without suspicion of sinister motives and will be carried into practice without fear of consequences. The amendment will take from the Legislature much of its power to interfere with the management of the forest, fish, game and other natural resources. The commission will have ample power to protect faithful employes from political interference.

"The power to remove dead timber, but not to sell it, and to construct fire trails, the Association believes will conduce greatly to the safety of the forests. The section of the present Constitution, which allows the use of 3 per cent. of the area of the Forest Preserve for water storage, remains with its careful safeguards, unchanged, and is regarded as adequate to meet the requirments of water conservation, while the general powers of the Conservation Commission are ample for the development and protection of the natural resources.

"The association regards the amendment as a whole a safe one. It excludes the most dngerous and most radical of the propositions which have been mooted for the past twenty years for invading the forests, is elastic enough to allow a progressive conservation policy, and at the same time is hedged about with safeguards sufficient to warrant confidence in its operation and to justify popular indorsement at the polls."

SEES FEDERALISM IN LAW.

Realty Owners Say No State or City Men Made Constitution.

The United Real Estate Owners' Association yesterday issued a long analysis of the proposed Constitution, the conclusion of which was:

"As a result of all the above, we most earnestly and urgently advise the people to vote against its adoption for the following reasons:

"Apart from politicians, the people of this State never knew what the present Constitution contained, thereby proving conclusively that there was nothing in it which hurt them in any way, and nothing omitted which might otherwise have benefited them.

"The proposed Constitution as adopted is wholly the work of the Federal Republican Party, who controlled the convention, and not the work or either the State or City Republican or Democratic Party."

Railway Corporation Gets Permission for New Subway Issue.

The Public Service Commission granted permission yesterday to the New York Municipal Railway Corporation to issue $20,000,000 in 5 per cent. sinking fund gold bonds under its $100,000,000 mortgage to the Central Trust Company of July 1, 1912. As $40,000,000 in bonds has already been issued under this mortgage, this new issue will complete the $80,000,000, which it is reckoned the company will expend on the construction and equipment of its share of the dual subway system.

The bonds will be sold at not less than 97, and will be dated July 1, 1912, and will mature Jan. 1, 1966. They are to be redeemable at 107½ on any semi-annual interest date, and are to be amortized before maturity by the sinking fund provided for in the terms of the mortgage. All these bonds must be sold before Jan. 1, 1916, or the company will have to apply to the commission for further authority.

Threatens Police with Whitman.

The New York Society for the Enforcement of Criminal Law at a meeting yesterday adopted a series of resolutions calling for the suppression of gambling and the enforcement of the excise law. The resolutions say that if the police are not more vigilant in their duty, it will ask the co-operation of Governor Whitman in a campaign to have the law enforced.

MRS. REVELL DENIES ATTACK ON SERVANT

FEARED FOR HER BABY

Intimates to Court That Discharged Nurse's Complaint Was Instigated by Offended Neighbor.

Mrs. Marian Revell, wife of Fleming H. Revell, the publisher, testified yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Devendorf and a jury in the suit of Della Cronin, the nurse who wants Mrs. Revell to pay $5,000 for an assault alleged to have been committed in Mrs. Revell's apartment at 250 West 104th Street on March 21, 1914. Miss Cronin, who is about 50 years old and is a frail, nervous woman, accused the defendant of having beaten her with her fists and feet and with a heavy coat weighted with lead.

Mrs. Revell is a small, slight woman about 24 years old, and was on the stage for half a year before she was married. She denied every one of the charges made against her by the nurse and declared that she had a sweet disposition, as could be testified to by all of her servants. Asked to tell what really occurred on the day of the alleged assault Mrs. Revell said that she had returned to her apartment with her husband at about 5:30 P. M. She had previously discovered, she said, that Miss Cronin, whom she had hired only a week before, was very untidy and careless.

"I went into the nursery," Mrs. Revell testified, "and saw some of the baby's linen hanging on the radiator. I concluded that I wanted a different kind of a nurse, and I discharged the plaintiff on the spot. Miss Cronin became very violent and abusive, and cried out that she hoped my baby would die. She started to enter the nursery, and, fearing that she intended harming the baby, I stood in the doorway and pushed her away. I did not strike her at all."

Mrs. Revell was sharply cross-examined, but she stuck to her story.

Across the hall from the Revell apartment lived Mrs. Stewart M. Brice, widow of the son of the late United States Senator Calvin S. Brice. Miss Cronin said that after the alleged assault she was carried into Mrs. Brice's apartment, where her wounds were dressed. Mrs. Revell intimated that Mrs. Brice's appearance in court to testify for the plaintiff was largely due to the fact that she had not displayed any inclination to know Mrs. Brice or her daughter-in-law, who lived with her. She thought the testimony of the two boys, which appeared to favor the plaintiff, had been influenced by liberal tips from Mrs. Brice.

"I do not tip the boys," explained Mrs. Revell, "because I cannot afford to."

Then Mrs. Revell said that she had received an anonymous letter threatening harm to her baby. She did not know that Mrs. Brice had written the letter, but she thought it very strange because she had not been able to keep a servant since Mrs. Brice came to live in the house.

Mrs. Brice testified that Miss Cronin had been carried into her apartment, and corroborated the story of the plaintiff concerning the extent of the bruises she said she had received. Mrs. Brice admitted having complained to the janitor of the crying of little Millicent, the Revell baby, but she denied writing any letter, anonymous or otherwise, to Mrs. Revell.

Dr. Josephine Walter, who examined the plaintiff two months after the assault by a court order, testified that she had found the plaintiff's condition to be about normal.

"I made a very careful examination of the person of the defendant," said Dr. Walter, "and found nothing that would bear out her story of an assault."

A sealed verdict will be returned on Monday.

SUES ACTRESS FOR $25,000.

Mrs. Mitchell Says Ruth Austin Stole Her Husband Away.

Mrs. Ruth Austin, artist's model and actress, appeared before Justice Pendleton of the Supreme Court yesterday to defend a suit for $25,000 for alienation of the affections of James Murray Mitchell. The plaintiff is Mrs. Anna Mitchell, who is stout and partly gray. Mrs. Austin is much younger and not gray at all.

Mrs. Mitchell testified that she lived very happily with her husband until September, 1913. Her troubles started, she said, while she was dining with him at a Broadway restaurant. Mrs. Austin came in, she said, and stopped at her table long enough to say, "Why there is Murray Mitchell and and there is Mrs. Murray Mitchell, too." Later, Mrs. Mitchell testified, her husband told her to go to Pelham Manor with the children and live with her parents. She did so.

Mrs. Mitchell told of several occasions when the telephone in her hotel apartment rang and a woman's voice asked for her husband. She said she recognised the voice as that of Mrs. Austin. On another occasion she was called to the telephone and a woman's voice told her if she wanted her husband to come and get him.

Mrs. Mitchell said her health gave out and she went to a sanitarium in Stamford and remined there from May 16 to July 14, 1914. Testimony was also offered showing that Mr. Mitchell and a woman registered at the Collingwood Hotel as man and wife, and that they lived there from February to April last. The trial will be resumed on Monday with eleven jurors, Richard C. Patterson, the third juror, was excused because it was discovered after the trial began that he was a friend of the plintiff's brother.

BROKERS ALTER COMPLAINT.

Amend Bill in Conformity with Cotton Futures Act Ruling.

Stephen M. Weld and other members of the brokerage firm of Weld & Melville, who attacked the constitutionality of the Cotton Futures act on the ground that it imposed a duty on exports, have amended their complaint and withdrawn that contention.

The new complaint, filed yesterday in the Federal District Court, asks for the return of the $960 duty collected under the act by John A. Lowe, Jr., Collector of Internal Revenue, on the plea that the act originated in the United States Senate, although as a tax measure it should have been introduced first in the House of Representatives. In this they follow the line of Judge Hough's decision in the Hubbard Brothers' suit.

Hermeneutic Interpretation of the Origin of the Social State of Man and of the Destiny of the Adamic Race

By Fabre d'Olivet

Done into English by Nayan Louise Redfield.

8°. $3.50 net.

The translation is of a deeply interesting philosophical history of mankind. It is difficult to believe that such a thorough, scholarly, and original work should have been allowed to exist for nearly a century without an English version.

M. d'Olivet, according to his admirable method, establishes the position of the principles in ontology and anthropology. He presents a metaphysical anatomy of individual man as ingenious as plausible. The successive scale of the instincts, passions, and faculties is then ascended in a double mode in the two primitive sexes and is continued through history from the savage state to the barbarous, from the original civilizations to our own. M. d'Olivet has given the public a philosophical study of permanent value.

CALLS MAYOR'S TALK WILD AND WOOLLY

President Churchill Aroused by Mitchel's Reflections on Board of Education.

ROW OVER EVENING SCHOOLS

Finally, $50,000 Is Appropriated to Continue the Classes for Another Week.

There was a clash before the Board of Estimate yesterday between Mayor Mitchel and Thomas W. Churchill, President of the Board of Education, over the question of obtaining sufficient revenue to enable the evening schools, high and elementary, to continue the rest of the year.

Some 500 students of evening schools who filled the chamber applauded when President Churchill said he would need $270,000 to keep the schools open. At one point the Mayor suggested that the Board of Education Commissioners resign if they could not run the department on the money allotted them. Finally $50,000 was obtained, and the schools will remain open.

"If any gentlemen in the Board of Education entertain the idea that the Board of Education cannot be run on the money allowed them by the Board of Estimate, I invite their resignations, and I will appoint men who can," said the Mayor. "As Mayor I don't purpose for one moment longer to entertain the implication that the responsibility rests here. It does not."

Mr. Churchill replied that he had no intention of resigning. He said he didn't intend to "leave the Mayor in the lurch."

"We need $270,000 right now to conduct the evening schools until the end of the year," said President Churchill. "If we get the money we can go ahead. If we get $150,000 we can keep the evening schools open until Nov. 15. We have curtailed expenses in every way possible. We now have vacancies in 1,260 teachers' places, and we have not been able to appoint a regular teacher during the last year. We have consolidated schools and increased classes to over fifty. We are in a deplorable state. It is impossible for us to reduce expenses further. If we don't get this $270,000 we will have to cut off the evening schools right away."

Mayor Urges Judicious Economy.

"I am in favor," said the Mayor, "of giving the schools $150,000 now, if it is absolutely necessary to continue the sessions, but I do feel that with reasonable and judicious economy the need for new funds would have been obviated."

Mrs. Mathilde C. Ford, educational adviser to the Board of Estimate and secretary of the Committee on Education, whispered to the Mayor at this point, and the Mayor said he had been informed that there was a $200,000 balance unexpended in the general repair and replacement fund, and that some of that amount could be transferred to the evening school fund.

"I am sure," said President Churchill, "that we will be glad to pick up any left-over bits for this purpose."

It was here that the Mayor suggested that the Board of Education members resign if they could not conduct the department within their appropriation. Mr. Churchill replied that he thought the Mayor was indulging in a display of "Irish temper."

"On the contrary," said the Mayor, "I am serious in my belief that a Board of Education can be obtained to run the schools successfully on what the Board of Estimate allows."

"With all due respect to the Mayor," replied President Churchill, "I would suggest that those are wild and woolly words. I don't know how much of a clairvoyant you are, but I do know, Mr. Mayor, that some of the appointments you have made are no better than those made by your predecessor. I don't think it comes with good grace for you to put a blight on the Board of Education. Either it is gross stupidity on our part or we ought to be praised for economy."

"I know," said the Mayor, "that the Board of Education comes down here every year and asks for more money than it needs."

Churchill Challenges Mitchel's Statement.

"Thinking so does not make it so," replied Mr. Churchill. "I do not think we had enough money this year, and today's demonstration shows it."

"Today's demonstration does not show it," retorted the Mayor.

President Churchill asked the Mayor to point to one instance where a saving could have been made. The Mayor said he couldn't do so, but that Mrs. Ford could.

"Yes, Mrs. Ford, that's the trouble," replied President Churchill. "It's because of the Mrs. Fords that we have this distress today. It's the Mrs. Fords who try to wipe out the forty-six members of the Board of Education. You have so much respect for the ladies, Mr. Mayor, that you take their word for everything."

Mrs. Ford was allowed to show where money could have been saved by practicing economy.

A report from the Board of Education to President Churchill showed that there was $107,700 still left in the repair fund, and that the board had already committed itself to contracts for this year which would very largely deplete the fund. Chairman John Greene of the Finance Committee of the Board of Education told the Mayor that if $50,000 were transferred from the repair fund to the evening school fund it would be enough to continue the evening schools for a week. The board allowed the money to be transferred.

Amen Brethren to Celebrate.

The fifteenth anniversary dinner of the Brethren of the Amen Corner will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria on Friday, Dec. 3. The occasion is described as "a red, white and blue dinner, and a celebration of the first dinner of the brethren held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in 1900." Charles T. White is President of the association; James J. Montague, Vice President; William Leary, Treasurer, and Walter Lauder, Secretary.

$40 FOR VOLTAIRE LETTER.

Total of Sale of Joline Library Already Reaches $58,832.

The sale of the seventh part of the late Adrian H. Joline's library was concluded at the Anderson Galleries yesterday. The total receipts for this part was $5,255.40, and for the entire sale to date it was $58,832.85.

George D. Smith paid $40 for a letter by Voltaire, dated Ferney, July 12, 1764, and addressed to M. Du Pont. In it Voltaire says: "I begin, my dear philosopher, to recover my sight." Mr. Smith also obtained for $42 a letter by Horace Walpole, Earl of Orford, dated Berkeley Square, March 22, 1790, and expressing his condolence on the death of Lady Browne.

A letter of William Wordsworth to Samuel Rogers, the poet, asking him to use his influence among his Parliamentary friends for the support of Talfourd's Copyright bill, went to Mr. Smith for $22. An autograph poem by Paul Verlaine was knocked down to Frederick Coykendell for $29. Mr. Smith paid $28 for a receipt signed by Jean Racine for the fourth part of his income as Prior of Saint Jacques de la Ferté, June 12, 1673. He also gave $18 for a letter of Richelieu, Paris, April 13, 1633, to M. de Peyanne, notifying him that he was expected by the King at Fontainebleau to receive the order of knighthood.

P. F. Madigan obtained for $18.50 an extract of the verbal process of the National Assembly of July 13, 1790, signed by Maximilien Robespierre. A letter of Jean Jacques Rousseau, Oct. 18, 1782, to the brothers De Luc, merchants in Geneva, sending news about the health of their father, went to Mr. Smith for $30. A letter of Elizabeth Germaine to Jonathan Swift in answer to an application for an appointment sold for $26.

James F. Drake paid $19 for a letter of Lord Alfred Tennyson in regard to his accepting a check. Tennyson says: "I do so, taking it for granted that you will not look upon me as an Oliver Twist asking for more."

A letter of Hester Lynch Piozzi, (Mrs. Thrale,) in regard to Pope Pius VI., brought $10, and a letter of the Duke of Wellington $6.50.

BLACKLISTED, SAYS ACTOR.

Testifies Vaudeville Combine Kept Him Idle for a Year.

Edward Clarke, a vaudeville actor, testified yesterday at the hearing of the Sherman law suit for $300,000 damages which is being brought by Clifford C. Fischer against the United Booking Offices of America and its individual members before Judge Learned Hand in the Federal District Court, that he had been on the stage for twenty-four years, but in 1909, after he had been working for William Morris, Inc., J. J. Murdock told him that the so-called trust would not engage any one who had gone to the Morris agency.

Not until William Morris, Inc., had been absorbed by Marcus Loew, he said, had he obtained any work from the United Booking Offices, after he had been out of work for an entire year. Percy G. Williams, Clarke testified, had told him he was on the "black list" for playing under Mr. Morris, and Edward Darling, secretary for E. F. Albee and booking agent for Procter's Fifth Avenue Theatre, had told him the same thing. Moreover, Edward Keller, manager of the Warburton Theatre at Yonkers, had told him, as he canceled a date with him in 1910, that he had done it under order from Mr. Murdock.

In reply to Max D. Steuer, of counsel for the plaintiff, Mr. Clarke said he was testifying voluntarily, after consulting with Harry Mountford of the White Rats.

REAL BAD BOYS HELD.

Alleged Burglars Say They Scared One Judge to Death.

Two boys, who said they so frightened a Justice of the Peace in Tarrytown, N. Y., that he committed suicide, after which they were sent to Elmira Reformatory—not for frightening the Judge to death, but for robbing his house of $2,000 in valuables—were arraigned before Magistrate Joseph Fitch yesterday in the Jamaica (Queens) Court, charged with robbing two houses at Rockaway Beach. Detectives Charles A. Harden and Patrick Kehoe said they found a lot of jewelry in the home of one of the boys. They said the two were under parole from Elmira, having left there two months ago.

Anderson and McCabe were arrested as the result of an alleged confession to the detectives by Patrick O'Connell, 15 years old, of 68 Sixteenth Street, Brooklyn. O'Connell had a loaded revolver and an electric flashlight in his pockets when he was arrested Tuesday night. One of his friends dropped a "jimmy," while a policeman was chasing him. O'Connell told the detectives his companions were McCabe and Anderson.

Magistrate Fitch held McCabe and Anderson in $1,000 bail each for a hearing on Monday. The youths said they were friends of Raymond Beck, Brooklyn's "angel-faced boy" burglar, who is under many indictments.

WOMAN SHIELDS GUARANO.

Mrs. Bell for Man Accused as White Slaver.

In an effort to save Ralph Guarano from conviction for white slavery, Mrs. Jenny Bell, who says she has a daughter 10 years old, testified before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions yesterday that she went to live with the defendant of her own accord.

Guarano was brought to trial on evidence obtained against him by "Miss Helen Davis," a Bryn Mawr graduate, who is really Mrs. Joseph A. Bryant of Boston.

On Thursday Mrs. Bryant, who devotes herself to sociological investigations, told the jury how she gathered evidence against Guarano and others by posing as a keeper of a resort. She returned to Boston yesterday. The trial of Guarano will continue on Monday.

Fewer Fires and Smaller Loss.

A substantial decrease in total loss, as well as a decrease in number of fires, is shown for the third quarter of this year in a report submitted to Commissioner Adamson yesterday. The losses were $1,181,463, or $384,098 less than in the third quarter of last year. The total of fires was 3,063, a decrease of 151.

Ream Estate Escapes Tax here.

The State Controller's office yesterday notified the Surrogates' Court that no opposition would be made by the State to the application of the executors of the estate of Norman P. Ream for exemption from any transfer tax. Mr. Ream died a resident of Thompson, Conn., and any tax must be made in Connecticut, if at all.

STATE UNIVERSITY HONORS ELIHU ROOT

Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws Conferred as Convocation at Albany Closes.

SETH LOW PAYS TRIBUTE

"No Living Son of New York More Deserving"—John Bassett Moore Speaks of "a Higher Place."

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 22.—The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon Elihu Root by the University of the State of New York at the closing session of its fifty-first convocation here tonight. The degree is the highest honor the university can pay to any person; only nineteen other persons have received it.

The degree was conferred by John H. Finley, President of the university, in the presence of a distinguished audience. Nearly all the members of the Constitutional Convention, of which ex-Senator Root was President, were present.

President Finley, after a brief explanation, gave the degree in the language used in the first bestowal of the honor in 1792. He said:

"Since honor is the reward of merit and for that reason it is customary in all schools of learning for those who surpass all others in character, talent and their knowledge of liberal arts to be endowed with the greatest praise and the highest honors, we, therefore, the Regents of the University of the State of New York, by the power delegated to us by the State, by these presents, desire to bear witness that this honorable and learned man, Elihu Root, has been exalted to the rank of Doctor of Laws, and that to him have been granted all rights and privileges that are wont to be conferred either here or elsewhere upon those raised to high honor of the Doctorate."

Before the degree was conferred, Mr. Root's work was praised by Seth Low of New York, who spoke on "Elihu Root, the Statesman," and by John Bassett Moore of New York, who took as his subject "Mr. Root's Service to the Nation."

Low's Tribute to Root.

"It is always a pleasure," said Mr. Low, "to take part in doing honor to one who has rendered distinguished public service, and certainly there is no living son of the State of New York better entitled to such recognition than the Hon. Elihu Root."

After sketching briefly Mr. Root's public career, Mr. Low, speaking of the ex-Senator's "wide range of ability," said:

"I can think of no one among our contemporaries who illustrates so strikingly the cumulative power that a man acquires through the successful discharge of important duties through a long period of years."

Mr. Low reviewed Mr. Root's work as President of the Constitutional Convention, and spoke of the fact that he took pains to give the minority adequate representation on committees, adding:

"Mr. Root held himself always accessible to every member of the convention for purposes of conference, and he aided by his presence and counsel more than one of the most important committees. On several of the most important propositions which came before the convention he took the floor, and by his wisdom and his great familiarity with affairs he steadied and guided the action of the convention; but his influence never surpassed the legitimate influence of a true leader. He did not command, and he did not dominate in any offensive sense of the word. He simply offered a constructive leadership which the majority of the convention followed willingly because they were convinced that it represented the public interest.

"In his personal relationship with the members of the convention Mr. Root won everybody. Those who had before known him only at a distance were surprised to find how genial he was, and how great a fund he has of merry humor which found an opportunity to display itself in personal conferences and in the more formal meetings of the convention. When occasion demanded, however, it was clearly seen that good nature did not deteriorate into weakness. I think Mr. Root is entitled to feel that his services as President of the Constitutional Convention of 1915, constitute the culminating service of his life to his native State."

Never "Bid" for Any Office.

Mr. Moore reviewed Mr. Root's work as Secretary of War and his early advocacy of proper preparedness for defense, with the measures undertaken to further that policy. The speaker also sketched Mr. Root's work as Secretary of State and touched briefly upon his services in the Senate. In conclusion he said:

"The name of the guest of the evening has often been mentioned in connection with what is sometimes called a higher place than any he has as yet occupied. I deliberately refrain from saying 'higher honors,' because I conceive that honor consists not so much in the position one holds as in the manner in which he performs its duties. But this much I desire to say: After a careful survey of Mr. Root's services to the nation, I am unable to detect in the record a single act or utterance suggestive of what is popularly termed a 'bid' for any office. No trace is found there of rhetorical jugglery, nor of effort to steal away to the skies in a cloud of dubious phrases. On the contrary, order and lucidity mark every utterance, while intelligent purpose characterizes every act. The office is lost sight of in the man, and honor follows achievement. Of all distinctions, this is the highest and best."

Other presentation speeches were made by Don Ignacio Calderón, Minister from Bolivia, and the Regent William Nottingham. Following the conferment of the degree, the benediction was pronounced by the Right Rev. Thomas Francis Cusack, the new Catholic Bishop of Albany.

STARTS BUS FIGHT FOR INTERBOROUGH

Competition Injured Subways in London and Paris, Counsel Tell Estimate Board.

OPPOSES FRANCHISE AWARD

Fifth Avenue Coach Co. Wants a Rehearing Before Rival Concern Gets the New Routes.

The Board of Estmate received yesterday the report of its Franchise Committee, recommending that the franchise for the new motor bus routes should be awarded to the New York Motor Bus Company, in preference to the Fifth Avenue Coach Company or O. C. Brunner and W. T. Gridley, a third set of bidders. The Interborough, which is interested in the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, appeared and entered a protest.

It raised the point that as in London and Paris the subway system had been seriously injured by the competition of the motor bus lines, it was extraordinary that the city which was just about to become a partner in the subway system here should set up a competitor to itself.

The argument for the Interborough was made by W. D. Guthrie and James L. Quackenbush, general solicitor of the company, and they both complained that no public hearing had been held on the advisability of a wide extension of the bus system. It was pointed out to them, however, that the Interborough had been asked to submit briefs on the question, and to inform the engineer of the board what objections there were, but it had not done so.

Mr. Quackenbush replied that the Interborough was accustomed to confer only with principals in such matters, and that the Franchise Committee should have asked him to sit around a table with him and argue the question. It had seemed so important to the company that it had dispatched two of its chief officials, who could ill be spared, to London and Paris to investigate the experience there, and he thought that what they had ascertained should be considered by the city.

Bainbridge Colby, who, with William R. Willcox, appeared for the New York Motor Bus Company, replied that it was for the city to decide the bus question according to the traffic needs of the population and not according to its new vested interest in strap-hangers.

President McAneny wanted to know whether the Interborough would have been as much opposed to the proposed bus routes, if the franchise for them had been awarded to the Fifth Avenue Coach Company and not the New York Motor Bus Company.

"If the Fifth Avenue Coach Company had obtained the franchise," replied Mr. Quackenbush, "and was to enter into competition with the Interborough I should recommend my client to throw its interest in the Coach Company out of the window rather than continue the operation of motor buses."

"Yes," answered Mr. Colby, "but the Fifth Avenue Company was as eager as any bidder for the motor-bus franchise. You wanted the competition as long as you thought you would be the competitor."

The board fixed Nov. 8 as the date for a public hearing on the general question of motor buses and Nov. 10 as the date for a public hearing on the specific application of the New York Motor Bus Company.

A formal protest to the grant of the franchise to the rival concern was handed in by Richard W. Meade, President of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, with a request for a rehearing. In that he contended that the Franchise Committee had ignored the advantages of one unified bus system throughout the city, and the Coach Company's offer to give the city one half of the net profits.

JITNEYS FOR NEW ROCHELLE

Up-State Public Service Commission Grants Gray's Application.

The jitney bus has gained access to New Rochelle. The up-State Public Service Commission, in a decision handed down yesterday, granted the application of William B. Gray to operate jitneys on four different routes.

All of the routes start at the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Station. One runs into the fashionable Sutton Manor section of the town, and the others into the Stephenson Park, Homestead Park, and the Pelham Road sections. Application to run the buses into Rochelle Park, the most restricted section of the town, was refused, on the ground that a bus line in that direction was not a necessity.

Commissioner Emmet suggested that the buses should be of the "pay as you enter" type, with room for from ten to seventeen persons, and that the fare for a continuous ride be 5 cents. The buses must run on at least a twenty-minute headway.

The application was opposed by the Westchester Electric Railroad Company.

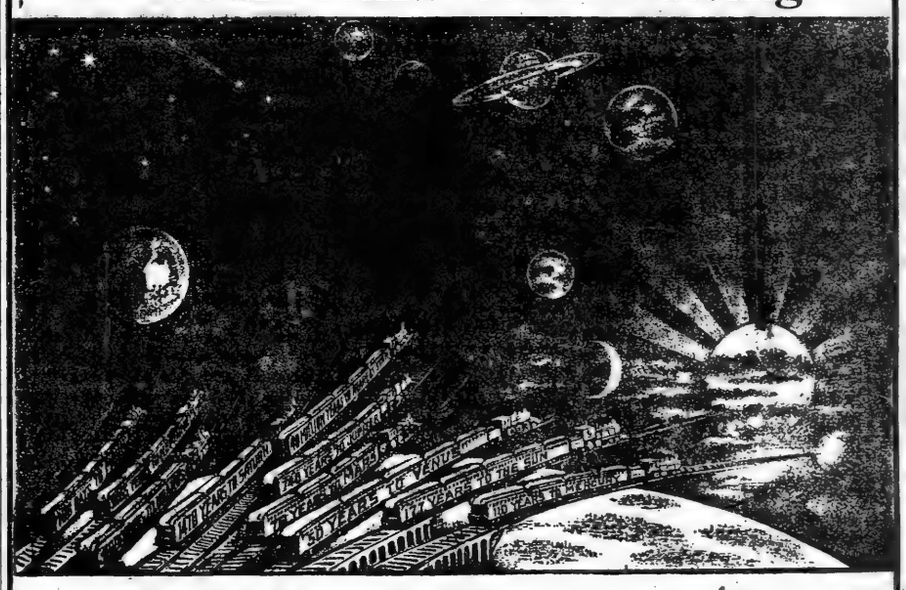
Is Your Child Still Waiting?



FLYING FOR FORTY MILLION YEARS TO THE NEAREST STAR.

One of Ten Thousand Educational Pictures Which This Work Describes—

EVERYBODY KNOWS ABOUT

The Book of Knowledge

The Children's Encyclopaedia

NEARLY EVERYBODY OWNS IT

DO YOU?

THE FIRST WORK OF REFERENCE FOR THE YOUNG

Never before has there been such a thing as a Children's Encyclopaedia! And yet there is not a half-hour in the day when the child is not asking questions. His hungry little mind is seeking to be fed with every variety of information. THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is a storehouse of the important and essential information of the world, written in the plain and simple language that a child can understand. It teaches the child how to think and what to think—how to find out for himself everything he wants to know. The child who has mastered this wonderful work has laid the foundation of a practical education for life. IS YOUR CHILD STILL WAITING FOR THE GREATEST EDUCATIONAL HELP OF THE CENTURY?

ANSWERS EVERY QUESTION A CHILD CAN ASK

What is a dew-drop?
How is a coral island made?
How did men learn to talk?
Where are the flowers in Winter?
Why is India hotter than Alaska?
Will the sun ever cool down?
What is a ship's water line?
What makes our hearts beat?
What is an element?
Does light weigh anything?
What causes rust?
What gives steam its power?
What changes the direction of the wind?

NO CHILD CAN RESIST THE STRIKING PICTURES

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE has accomplished a psychological feat. The children love to read it as they do no other book. They cannot resist its thousands of striking and wonderful pictures and marvelous stories of fact. It leads the child through a hundred foreign countries, telling him the history of their peoples, their customs, art and architecture, in simple and winning language. It takes him down into the mine where the coal is being dug, and up into the air where the worlds are spinning in everlasting cycles and men are learning to fly. It lures him into the woods where the birds and beasts are making their many homes; it shows him the wonderful things in the world of waters. The child will never forget these pictures and the wonderful facts which they teach him.

A WOMAN PUT TO DEATH.

Miss EDITH CAVELL, the English woman executed in Brussels after trial and sentence by a German court-martial, had aided English and French soldiers and Belgian young men to escape to England. According to the reports of the trial she admitted the truth of this charge. Her act was a defiance of the authority of the German military government of Belgium. Whatever may be our sympathy with the woman, whatever feeling of horror the shooting of a woman by a file of soldiers may arouse, we must not forget that in Brussels she was subject to inexorable military law, the provisions of which she had flagrantly violated. If a man of the English nation had been executed for this offense the world would have paid very little attention to the matter.

It will be said that the world pays attention to the execution of Miss CAVELL because she was a woman, that the putting to death of a woman for a military offense is shocking to the minds and hearts of civilized peoples. Let us here reproduce Article 102 of the Instructions for the Government of Armies in the United States, issued as General Orders No. 100, April 24, 1863:

> The law of war, like the criminal law regarding other offenses, makes no distinction on account of the difference of sex concerning the spy, the war traitor, or the war rebel.

Miss CAVELL was not a spy, not a traitor or a war rebel, but she had given aid and comfort to the enemies of Germany, she had aided them to escape from German control, she had violated German military law in full force in Brussels. We must candidly take account of all these circumstances, we must keep them in full view, lest we be betrayed by humane sentiments into the erroneous conclusion that in putting Miss CAVELL to death the Germans in Belgium inflicted a penalty not warranted by military law.

Nevertheless it is because of this very act of the Germans at Brussels and because of countless other acts of a like kind, all the fruit of the stern, blind German devotion to the ruthless ideas of militarism and State power, that the civilized world has turned against Germany, unsparingly condemns her, detests the ideals she seeks to attain by such inhuman practices, and hopes and fervently prays for her defeat in arms, lest by triumph her unspeakably horrible ideals should come into dominance and the hands upon the clock of civilization be turned back a thousand years. Miss CAVELL is not by any means the only woman who has been put to death in pursuance of a sentence lawfully imposed. Judge JEFFREYS condemned to death ALICE LISLE, a woman whose tender heart and humane services prompt comparison with the character and beneficent work of EDITH CAVELL. He condemned her to death, indeed, for a somewhat similar offense, that of giving shelter to a Nonconformist clergyman and to a lawyer who had offended against the majesty of JAMES II. But in the long history of England the name of JEFFREYS is the most odious of all. When men would by some appropriate comparison speak their utter execration of one of their fellowmen or of his deeds they invoke the name of JEFFREYS. In Russia the Nihilist, SOPHIE PEROFSKY, and another woman concerned in the plot to assassinate ALEXANDER II. were put to death by hanging. But Mr. JOHN W. FOSTER, who was our Minister to Russia at the time, tells us that after the trial M. DE GIERS told him that there was a great pressure brought to bear upon the Emperor to commute the sentences, and he inquired of our Minister as to the details of the trial and execution of Mrs. SURRATT for complicity in the assassination of LINCOLN. After the execution a high Russian official said that they "had followed the example of the United States in the case of "Mrs. SURRATT." Mr. FOSTER adds that he did not fail to remind these Russian officials that "a large part "of the people of our country con- "demned that execution." In the England of today Mrs. LOUISE HERBERT, the German wife of an English physician, has been sentenced to the extremely mild penalty of six months' imprisonment because of an offense much more serious than that of Miss CAVELL. She had sought information regarding munitions in England with the intent to send the information to Germany. That is a far more serious matter than Miss CAVELL's transgression. But Mrs. HERBERT was tried before a Judge who is an Englishman, not a German.

In the great tribunal of civilization the Germans have done themselves immeasurable hurt by their savagery against those who opposed them. Putting the interests of State above the interests and the rights of the individual, putting the ends Germany seeks to attain above all other things on earth, destroying the peace of the world, bringing on the bloodiest war in history, a war that has brought to their deaths millions of the people of Europe and threatens to impoverish great nations, all for the attainment of ends the world has denounced in themselves and by means which too often have violated the foundation principles of humanity and justice, Germany has brought herself into a position where the world turns from her in horror and dreads nothing so much as the success of her arms. She has instilled so deeply in the minds of her people the idea of power, of supreme military power, that she has deadened them to the finer and nobler feelings of humanity. Man's love of life, the chivalric sentiment of man for woman, tender consideration for the helplessness of age and of youth, all these she has maimed and bruised and effaced with her mailed fist, all these she has trampled under foot. The executioners of EDITH CAVELL but carried out the spirit and purpose of the Imperial military policy. They did their part in the working of the brutal, monstrous engine. It is because of this spirit, of these purposes, of such deeds as that at Brussels that Germany has lost her standing among civilized nations devoted to the ideals of humanity and of progress, it is because of these things that the prayer goes up in all the peaceful countries of the earth that her enemies may triumph, to the end that such a ruthless rule may not be established in power upon the earth.

RUMANIA OF THE IRON GATES.

It is possible that the issue between Kultur and Civilization in Europe will be decided not in the east, not in the west, nor on the seas, but upon the war-eroded Balkan Peninsula. By the irony of events that is left for Rumania to say; and her policy is frankly one of "national selfishness." She is interested only in herself. The possibility, approaching probability, that she will put her sword on the side of the Allies is an offset to the discouragement they must feel at the course of the Balkan campaign so far, and also to their disappointment in Greece.

Rumania of the "Iron Gates" rises out of the Black Sea like a gigantic lobster's claw. The northern half is called Moldavia, and thrusts itself between Russia and Hungary. The southern half is called Wallachia, and lies between Hungary and Bulgaria, the tip of it touching Serbia. Thus, Rumania separates allies and belligerents in a most tantalizing manner. She hinders Russians, Teutons, and Bulgars all at once. If she were with Germany, the Austro-German forces, instead of fighting their way through Serbia, could march directly and without resistance to Constantinople. If she were with the Allies, the Russians could invade Bulgaria, join the Anglo-French forces in Serbia, and attack Turkey at the same time. So, just thoroughfare across Rumania is of the highest strategic value. Add to this the fact that the Rumanian Army, 600,000 strong, is one of the crack fighting machines of Europe, and you have a situation now both dramatic and fascinating, and bound to become historically celebrated.

Were ever the diplomats of a little Power in such a position as this? They are "negotiating." That is the euphemistic word. If they forbear to practice extortion they are not Rumanians but angels, for they have precious merchandise to sell and the competition of the buyers is intense. Besides, they rather make a point of not being angels at all, but selfish human beings, intent on getting what material things they want. Their natural feelings are anti-Teutonic, as Bulgaria's were believed to be and probably are still. But their Kings have been doubtful. Indeed, King CHARLES at the beginning of the war sought to bring Rumania into an alliance with the Central Powers, but was foiled by the "national selfishness" of his people, calling themselves "greater Rumanians." He died, and was succeeded by FERDINAND, who apparently is somewhat less disposed to commit his country against its prejudices.

Until now Rumania's neutrality has been punctilious, even under the strain of great pressure from her formidable Teutonic neighbors and notwithstanding the tremendous reverses suffered by her only other powerful neighbor, Russia. If she had yielded military thoroughfare on demand it would not have been necessary for the Austro-German forces to go through Serbia. If now she should abandon her neutrality and take up arms against them, Russia for the first time since the war began would be able to make physical contact with her allies. Then Germans, Austrians, Bulgars, and Turks would meet Englishmen, Frenchmen, Russians, Italians, and Serbs on the Balkan Peninsula, in the middle of the world. Would Greece in that case enjoy the rôle of spectator? Her wavering sword is stronger now than it can ever be again.

A CONSTITUTIONAL CAMPAIGN.

The election to be held ten days hence is an unusual one, in that the interest in candidates, in most of the States participating, is subordinated to that in constitutional questions. It is a constitutional election. In some of the States only constitutional questions are involved. In nearly all the questions are of fundamental importance. The States that vote this year have turned aside from the usual campaign of personalities and party policies to debate the question of amending their Governments.

Only eight States will vote—New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Ohio, and Mississippi. The Mississippi election is merely a ratification of the nominations made at the Democratic primaries, and may be dismissed as an election only in form. This leaves seven States, and in five of these—New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Ohio—the people are to vote upon radical changes in the Constitution.

New York is to vote upon the new Constitution proposed by its convention and upon woman suffrage. Massachusetts is to vote upon woman suffrage and an income tax amendment. Pennsylvania will vote only upon the woman suffrage question. The interest of the bystander States is concentrated on these three, because of the large place the suffrage question has come to occupy in the popular mind.

The liquor question comes up only in one State, Ohio, which is to choose between two amendments. One, proposed by the Drys, prohibits not only the sale but the manufacture of intoxicating beverages, and the other, proposed by the Wets, prevents the submission of any constitutional amendment more than twice in six years. Ohio will also vote upon other amendments. The referendum is to be voted upon in Maryland, which will also decide about three other constitutional amendments, including home rule for cities. The referendum has not had much success in invading the East, but has been adopted in many Western States.

Governors are to be elected in four States, Massachusetts, Maryland, Kentucky, and Mississippi, but the Mississippi election does not count. In Massachusetts Governor WALSH, Democrat, is running for re-election against ex-Congressman MCCALL. In Maryland the candidates are OVINGTON H. WELLER, Republican, and EMERSON HARRINGTON, Democrat; the present administration is Republican. In Kentucky, whose administration is now Democratic, ex-Congressman STANLEY is the Democratic candidate against EDWIN P. MORROW. Though there is no State election in Pennsylvania, except to fill vacancies on the bench, as interesting a campaign as any in the country is going on in Philadelphia, where the term of the reform Mayor, BLANKENBURG, is ending. GEORGE D. PORTER, one of the chief members of his administration, is the reform candidate for Mayor against ex-Postmaster THOMAS B. SMITH, Republican, and the question is whether to continue BLANKENBURG'S work or return the old machine to power. The New Jersey election is only for members of the Legislature, and the New York election is for members of the Assembly, eleven Supreme Court Justices, and three Congressmen, though there is more interest in the city and county elections.

Off years are generally tame and uninteresting. What makes this year an exception is the coincidence that in most of the States participating alterations in government, and alterations of profound importance, are to be voted upon. It is as important an election as any we have had in recent years.

AN OLD NEW YORKER.

In the death of AMOS F. ENO New York has lost not only one of its oldest citizens, but one to whom the metropolis in all its phases was always interesting. New York City was his hobby, in the pursuit of which his keenest enjoyment lay in collecting old prints of scenes and landmarks long since effaced by modern improvements.

Mr. ENO was one of that small coterie of lovers of New York whose highest ambition is the acquisition of a rare engraving of which it proudly may be said that it is either unique or that but one or two copies are known. He was one of the few great collectors of New York prints, among his genial rivals being JOHN D. CRIMMINS, R. T. HAINES HALSEY, ROBERT GOELET, PERCY R. PYNE, 2d, WILLIAM LORING ANDREWS, SIMEON FORD, ISAAC N. PHELPS STOKES, Ambassador MORGENTHAU, and J. CLARENCE DAVIES. Mr. ENO began when the field had few competitors, and he often related with the true pride of the collector his "find" of some rarity for a few dollars, now worth as many thousands. His investments in these pictorial souvenirs of early New York would doubtless realize, proportionately, a higher percentage of increase than his large real estate holdings.

Mr. ENO was born in New York City, and for the greater part of his long life of eighty-one years he lived, a bachelor, in the old family home at Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street. He resisted successfully many threatened invasions of business into the lower Fifth Avenue centre, and, like other lovers of their old homes in different localities, he purchased adjacent property to preserve the residential character of his neighborhood. His wholesale jobbing firm, organized a few years after his father built the Fifth Avenue Hotel, was ruined by the civil war, but thirty-six years later Mr. ENO voluntarily paid the creditors of his firm in full, although the debts had long been legally wiped out.

CARRANZA'S FIRST DUTY.

The disturbances along the Mexican border are symptomatic of the unrest still extant in Mr. CARRANZA'S domain, but so long as the more distinguished and influential members of the disrupted Villista party persist in their determination to stand aloof from all demonstrations against the newly recognized Government there is little danger of a new revolution. Law-abiding residents of southern Texas, who have never approved of the activities of Mexican revolutionists on United States soil, have feared that the recognition of CARRANZA might be the signal for attacks on Texan towns and villages by the opponents of CARRANZA. But the incident at Ojo de Agua, a small settlement in Texas about seven miles from Brownsville, seems to have been a sequel to the recent border disturbances, believed to have been inspired for the purpose of exciting American anger and precipitating intervention, rather than the beginning of a new movement by adherents of VILLA. The slaughter of American soldiers on American soil, however, is not a matter to treat lightly. Either CARRANZA must find means to prevent the invasion of Texas by Mexican outlaws or the Government at Washington must resort to measures more severe than any that have yet been employed. It is folly to dismiss such an incident as a State affair which should be attended to by local authorities. If the raids continue there may be such an uprising against Mexicans in Texas before long as will have serious consequences. Some unworthy American citizens may have been involved in the circumstances which led to these international troubles, but they are not the victims of the raids.

The raiders are outlaws and bandits, to be sure, but they are Mexicans, and they have committed enough outrages on our side of the border to justify our Government in demanding their suppression in unmistakable terms, and, if the demand is not promptly heeded, in undertaking the work of suppression itself in an orderly way. At present the only serious trouble in Mexico seems to be right in the Brownsville neighborhood. At Toluca, the Zapata contingent has surrendered to GONZALES and amnesty has been granted. There is no news of any Zapatista activity in Morelos. VILLA sulks in Sonora, but none of his abler followers are with him, and he will be compelled to reorganize his forces before he can start another revolution, if he is really so disposed. Ill-feeling against the Carranzistas is plentiful, and it will increase or decrease according to the First Chief's ability as a pacificator. The continuance of the border disturbances should certainly have his early attention. It is as much to his interest to satisfy the people of Texas as to his desire to be regarded as a good neighbor, capable of keeping his house in order, as it is to gain the good will of his own people. By "making good" with the United States as quickly as possible he will do more to discourage and disarm the various juntas which are looking for his early downfall than he can accomplish by a hundred pronunciamentos. It must be admitted, by the way, that the granting of amnesty to the disarmed Zapatistas at Toluca is a hopeful sign of his intention to temper with mercy the needful austerity of his new rule.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Filling a Sphere with Tremors.

Coming as it does after the establishment, or rather the accomplishment, of wireless telephonic communication from Washington to Honolulu, the sending of messages in the same way from the same place to Paris is an achievement so much smaller as to be, from a scientific or technical standpoint, a mere matter of course and of no particular interest. That, however, is not the way in which this latest exploit will be viewed, and, for the vast majority of us, telephoning thus to Paris seems, and in a sense is, a much greater thing than telephoning to Honolulu.

So far as mere distance goes, we do not very clearly differentiate between the two, but in the possibility of actually talking to people in the French capital we can feel vastly more of personal concern than in that of conversation with somebody off in the interminable expanses of the Pacific. So yesterday's announcement wasn't at all the anticlimax which a too critical analysis of the situation would make it.

There is significance, perhaps little ominous as to the future of wireless telephony and as to the extent to which it will replace other and older means of communication, in the fact that the words nominally sent to France were heard as well in Hawaii. This brings to mind the lamentable circumstance that as yet the ethereal impulses cannot be concentrated or directed to this or that destination, but must be distributed through the whole of a sphere that has the sending apparatus for centre—a sphere of colossal magnitude, at any point in which the message could be as well taken as at any other. The waste of energy involved in this method of transmission is rather appalling to anybody who realizes how expensive energy is. But this certainly grave defect is not discouraging in an invention still in the experimental stage. It will, or at least may, be remedied in due time, and then wireless telephony, instead of being the mere adjunct and auxiliary of the present means of communication, which is all that in soberness it now claims to be, will supplant them all. And when that day comes it may be that we shall have to invent and learn a new language, one with words especially adapted to this sort of transmission, and containing no sounds that the vibrations refuse to carry.

A Way to Get Lots of Money.

As a means of creating a regular income, in distinction from an endowment, for the Actors' Fund, there is one very simple expedient that perhaps deserves trying as well as did the many others already devised for the support of this very worthy charity.

The public that supports the theatres of the country is an enormous one, including, as it does nowadays, all except a small minority of our whole population. It spends a huge sum every year for the amusement and edification supplied by the stage, and almost without feeling the further drain on resources in the aggregate not far from incalculably large, it could pay, on one judiciously selected day in each year, a dime in addition to the price of the tickets bought for use that day.

Many, probably most, theatregoers are sufficiently grateful to the player folk for the enjoyment they provide to be glad to have an opportunity for assisting them when deprived of earning power by old age or other disability, and the remainder, a sour and grumpy lot, could either yield to a gentle compulsion toward generosity or they could stay away on the day of contribution.

The sum that could thus be raised would be far up among the thousands of dollars. There are more than a hundred theatres in New York City alone, not counting the innumerable "movies" of the humbler sort that would hardly claim the name, and most villages have at least one "opera house." As the actors serve so nearly all of us, it would be proper for nearly all of us thus to make a direct offering for their needs. The expense of collection would be practically nothing, as the business could be handled without any increase of the box-office forces, and money thus obtained could be accepted and utilized by its recipients without the slightest sense of humiliation.

Perfection a Dread Misfortune.

It is rather strange that of all our readers who have taken part recently in discussing the question whether or not "nature" is "perfect," none has protested against the general assumption that the attainment of perfection would be desirable. As a matter of fact, it would be highly undesirable—a ghastly state of immobility, free from sorrows, indeed, but also without joys, and, worst of all, without hope.

If "perfection" means anything, it means complete adaptation to environment. Now, as it happens, that state was reached by a majority of the world's living inhabitants some millions of years ago, and they have remained in it ever since. So far as we can see, at any rate, the innumerable tribes of water-living animalcula of the simpler sorts are "perfect" in the sense that they are adequately equipped for meeting all the exigencies of existence as they know it. Except for accidents so rare as to be negligible from the individual view, they go on growing and dividing and growing again in what amounts to immortality. There is no reason to believe that they are ever hungry or cold, and they have absolutely nothing to worry about—or with.

The result is that these most unfortunate little beasts are just what and where they were in the remotest ages of life that even the geologists have discovered, and they will go on and on unchanged as long as there is any water for them to go on in. They have never progressed or improved because their perfection made it unnecessary for them to do either.

The very thought of perfection otherwise than as an infinitely remote ideal to be fought for and suffered for, but never to be attained, is utterly demoralizing. Let a human being once get into his or her head the notion of perfection as something realized, and he or she immediately becomes both mad and vile. That has been shown by the followers of every cult claiming to confer the inestimable boon. "Perfect?" Why, instinct tells us that perfection is the worst of imperfections, and few appellations are more bitterly resented by sensible people. They know that they are not perfect, and do not want to be.

Picture Puzzles for the Wounded.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A year ago I made an appeal for picture puzzles for the wounded abroad. The response was immediate and generous. The puzzles donated and those purchased with the small sums given for the purpose totaled 1,760. They were safely sent to England and widely distributed with economy and wisdom among the hospitals of France and England, the convalescent huts and the fleet ships. They gave great help as well as pleasure, and now the demand for more is very urgent. If persons will send to me any puzzles with which they have finished I will gladly forward them over at once.

No Test for Muzzles?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

About two weeks ago I witnessed the horrid spectacle of a vicious bulldog shaking the life out of a half-grown, unoffending cat. The flimsy muzzle worn by the dog proved no deterrent to the wearer in securing a death hold on the throat of the cat.

Is there no provision made for determining the efficiency of the muzzles now worn by dogs?

EDITH CAVELL.

She faced the firing squad alone,
And with unbandaged eyes
Looked upward to the moon that shone—
The moon of English skies.

The prison faded from her view,
The trampling armed men;
And in the lanes her childhood knew
She roamed a child again.

A tiny flag upon her breast
Shewed where her heart did lie;
"I'm glad"—she smilingly confessed—
"For England's sake to die."

A volley!—and her spirit fled
From earth without a groan—
O foemen! wept ye o'er the dead,
Or had ye hearts of stone?

Knew none of you her gentle hand
Had smoothed your comrades' cut?
Shrank none of you from their command
To fire the fatal shot?

Her blood proclaims with crimson stain
The doom of tyranny;
They die for freedom not in vain
Who die as brave as she.

PICTURES THAT TERRIFY.

Why the Board of Censors Approves Realistic War Movies.

New York, Oct. 21, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter to Mrs. Kelly, published in THE TIMES, raises a fundamental question regarding motion-picture regulation. She criticises the realism of the picture, "The Campbells Are Coming," and states that it shocked the children in the audience.

The position of the National Board of Censorship with this class of pictures, as with others, is to register public opinion. It has no right to exclude them because they shock a small minority, including children. What, pray, is war if it is not terrible! The faithful presentation of some details of close fighting should be shown to Americans to satisfy them that it is far from being a game of ping-pong. The great Russian artist, Vereshchagin, has given us paintings of the details which are so ghastly and terrifying that they compel thought. The magnificent picture shown in THE TIMES last Sunday of the storming of the walls of a city in Poland is to be placed along with these paintings as a great educator. This and other still and motion pictures, which carry the American people close to the trenches, will do much to make them count the cost with the facts clearly in hand.

As the agent of public opinion, the National Board of Censorship has never reviewed pictures for children alone. Parents like Mrs. Kelly must assume some responsibility when they take their children to the motion-picture houses where war pictures are exhibited.

ORRIN G. COCKS,
Advisory Secretary, The National Board of Censorship.

So Many Feet of Horror.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A letter in THE TIMES last Sunday on "Murder in the Movies" reminds me of a picture I saw recently where whoever was responsible simply murdered his characters wholesale. There wert no vicious villains to give him an excuse either.

A woman in her sitting room was struck by lightning and killed. Another woman died of heart failure. A man was operated upon for appendicitis. The same man later met with an accident and died of his injuries. There were several sick-bed scenes where a life-saving doctor performed miracles. In one case the vision of Death was expelled by prayer. A man went mad and broke up the furniture, tore down draperies, and smashed pictures. He was subdued by the ghost of a woman, who stalked about the screen in a blood-curdling manner. These depressing scenes were punctuated by the appearances of a doleful woman, who was under the harrow from the first. "Misery had marked her for his own." She died of suppressed emotion, or something like it, in the middle of the story. A woman near me whispered to a friend: "She never had a moment's peace." And neither did any one concerned in the story. The suffering of the just and the unjust went on until the final fade out.

The Persecuted Movies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In this morning's issue there appeared a story of two small boys who wandered away from home and were afterward cared for by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children until restored to their parents. The caption on the story is misleading and unjust. You say "Movie Posters Lure Boys from Their Home." There is nothing in the story itself, as I have been able to run it down, which in any way shows that these boys were led to wander away from home through the lure of the movie posters.

The motion picture industry has been blamed for every crime on the calendar from the small boy who is lured away from home to murderer Wing of Kansas City, who, after shooting his wife's parents in cold blood claims that he was influenced to the crime by having seen, on the day previous, a screen production of the "Clemenceau Case."

As Executive Secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, it is my purpose to run down each of these stories. This will be done in defense of the good name of the motion picture industry.

Prior to the coming of the motion picture, the cigarette was blamed. Antedating that, the dime novel. Today it is the motion picture. I have made a close and thorough study of this alleged "incentive to crime" phase of the motion picture. I have investigated scores of cases. I have yet to find a single authentic instance where the allegation was proved.

The German and the Turk.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Those good and humane Americans who intend to write personal letters to the Kaiser asking him to use his influence in Turkey to put an end to the persecution and massacre of the Armenians must have forgotten the German Emperor's journey to Palestine in 1898, and his declaration, in his speech at Damascus, to take all Musselmans under his protection. Meanwhile, Christians were being slaughtered in Armenia, but, much to his sorrow, the Kaiser could not extend his protection to them. Policy is one thing, Christianity is another. See how a German minister of the Gospel knows how to reconcile the two. Pastor Friedrich Naumann, who had gone to Jerusalem to witness the triumphal entry of his imperial master into the holy city, says in his book, "Asia":

> Any weakening in German national energy through pacifist associations or other analogous efforts serves the fearfully increasing power of those who rule today from Cairo to the cape, and from Ceylon to the Arctic Ocean. No fraternity with England! Let us have a national policy!

This is especially what determines our attitude in the Eastern question. That is the profound reason why we must be politically indifferent to the sufferings of Christians in the Turkish Empire, however painful it may be to our feelings.

Bismarck taught us to separate foreign from home policies. It is just the same with Christian missions. As Christians, we desire the spreading of the faith that saves. But it is not the business of our policy to look after Christian missions. The truth is, here as elsewhere, that we must consider which is the greatest, and morally, the most important task. William II. has chosen; he is the friend of the padishah because he believes in a Greater Germany.

Another Kind of Weasel.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There have been several inquiries in your paper regarding the song "Pop Goes the Weasel." I think I can throw some light upon it, for when I was small I lived in an old country house, with all sorts of things in garret and cellar, among them some light-brown stone jugs or bottles, about as large as a tumbler and nearly twice as high, and my father called them "weasels." Perhaps they were like those in use at the "Eagle," and were used for beer and popped when opened. I often heard the song, but never the verse you have given. The two I remember were:

> A penny for a cotton ball,
> A penny for a needle,
> That's the way the money goes,
> Pop goes the weasel.
>
> Johnny Bull is very sick,
> Napoleon's got the measles,
> Sevastopol ain't taken yet,
> Pop goes the weasel.

THE PREPOSSESSIONS OF JANE ADDAMS.

How They Caused Her to Misunderstand the Attitude of the Young Men of England Toward the War.

A letter from Gilbert Murray of Oxford, Greek scholar and poet, to an American correspondent.

Montclair, N. J., Oct. 20, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some time ago the New York papers published accounts of the peace meetings held in connection with the return of Miss Jane Addams, and other peace agitators, from Europe. Among the many shocking statements that Miss Addams and Dr. Hamilton made on these occasions was the one that, while practically all the older men in England upheld the Government in the struggle against Germany, many of the younger generation (presumably of clearer vision) were coming to realize how wicked and wanton war is, and did not wholly sympathize with the effort to continue the struggle to a finish. Miss Hamilton quoted "a young relative of Gilbert Murray" as having told her that while he went to the war with great enthusiasm for the cause he came back a "peace-at-any-price" man.

Many admirers of Miss Addams in her social work feel that in her peace mission in Europe she not only belittled herself and all peace loving women, but that she, as well as some of her associates, made so many misstatements and exaggerations, in their enthusiasm for peace, that all sensible and patriotic women felt the sting and insult to their womanhood. I confess the writer is one of these women.

In order to prove to myself that Miss Addams and Miss Hamilton had misrepresented the sentiment abroad, especially in England, I sent the printed reports from The Evening Post and The Outlook to Gilbert Murray at Oxford, and asked him if he would be kind enough to tell me whether or not he and "his young relative" had been correctly quoted. The inclosed letter from Mr. Murray speaks for itself.

REBEKAH WHEELER BAKER.

The Letter.

Beckhythe Manor, Overstrand,
Norfolk, England, Aug. 27, 1915.

Dear Madam—Thanks for your letter. I should like to tell you that I agree warmly with every word of it. As for Dr. Hamilton's story, she seems to have misunderstood me in a rather curious way, owing no doubt to her own prepossessions. My "young relative" would be horrified at the idea that any one could suppose him to be in favor of an immediate peace-at-any-price. What he said had reference to politics in general. Formerly he had been something of a Jingo, but now he was almost a peace-at-any-price man. That is, he recognized the horror and wickedness of war more than he had ever done before. But as for submitting to the war-makers and war-traffickers on that account, and accepting the German warlords as the makers of a new Europe, I am sure that the idea never entered his head.

Miss Hamilton has quite misinterpreted what I told her of the spirit of many of my young friends and pupils at Oxford. She seems to imply that, because they hate war and loathe killing their fellow creatures, they are lukewarm or hesitating about this war. It is just the reverse. They are giving themselves up for a cause which is the cause of ultimate peace as well as of national freedom and international honesty.

For my own part, great as is my admiration of Miss Addams and her work in social matters, I cannot help thinking that her views on the war are vitiated by the fact that she will not consider the question of justice or of right. She considers nothing but peace. Peace is in my opinion almost the greatest and most fundamental of human blessings. But there are cases, and I believe this one of them, in which men should be prepared to fight and die rather than submit to triumphant wrong. We worked for peace to the last moment. We begged Germany to submit the quarrel to any tribunal on earth by any method that she could propose. She refused every proposal and blocked every road toward peace, and when she had succeeded in bringing about the war she waged it in a spirit of barbarity which, in Lord Bryce's measured words, has not been known in Europe for three hundred years. It will be a disaster to all humanity, a disaster greater than the war itself, if we and our allies allow such practices to end in triumph or in successful aggrandizement. That is, we want peace but we intend to scrutinize the conditions of that peace, and there is at present no sign of agreement between our wishes and those of the German Government.

As to the "doping" of soldiers before a bayonet charge, I believe the German soldiers are drugged before those extraordinary charges which they make in close order, the first two ranks unarmed and advancing arm in arm. We never charge in that way; and, as far as I have heard, it is not a usual custom to give our men a drink before a bayonet charge. Of course, it is sometimes done, if men are exhausted or the like. I know of many bayonet charges in which the men were not plied with any spirits, and I do not know for certain of any in which they were. I have consulted two soldiers about the matter, and their report agrees with mine.

HOW SERBIA MAKES WAR.

Preparation of an Army of Women to Meet Invaders a Myth.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of the 19th you published an announcement made by the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin to the effect that Serbian women and children fought against the Austro-German troops in Serbia. In the same issue you quote from a speech delivered in Chicago on Oct. 18 by a certain John R. Palandech, who is described as a Serbian leader, and who is alleged to have said that, according to his information from home, Serbia is preparing an army of 250,000 women to fight against the Teuton invaders.

Permit me to call attention to the fact that John R. Palandech is not a Serbian, much less a Serbian leader in America. It is true that he publishes several newspapers in the Serb language and that he is the only (alleged) Serb editor who signed the famous petition of foreign newspaper editors urging the American people that the exportation of arms and ammunition to the Allies be prohibited. His statement that Serbia is arming 250,000 women to fight the Teutons is false on the face of it, because where is Serbia going to get the arms and ammunition for this feminine army? And how long would it take to drill this army of women into any sort of fighting condition? I have in my possession the most direct and the most authentic information that this most desperate and obviously impossible measure was never dreamt of in Serbia, and I am certain that all statements like those of the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger and of the bogus Serbian leader John R. Palandech of Chicago are pure inventions, constructed for the purpose of excusing past and future atrocities which may be laid at the door of the Teuton invader. I notice also that the Bulgarians are already announcing how the Serbian civilian population is guilty of treachery, and before long we shall know that this announcement was sent for the purpose of excusing the outrages which the bloodthirsty Bulgarians will undoubtedly indulge in, faithful to their traditions which have come down to us from the second Balkan war. Treachery is a product not native on the Serbian soil.

Let the Women Decide.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Which ever way the vote on woman suffrage turns out there will be nothing conclusive as to the actual desire of women for the ballot, and there is only one real way to prove the matter once and for all. Let us have a special election for women only. Throw the polls open to every woman of voting age in the State and then if the suffragists can show a clear majority in their favor, their case will be clear.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Monday, Oct. 18, you quote the following from the Rev. Dr. William Milton Hess: "The Catholic World has said: 'Education must be controlled by Roman Catholic authorities even to war and bloodshed.'"

Since his statement appeared in the columns of THE TIMES, I would like him to state in the same columns the volume and page of The Catholic World in which this statement is found.

A Blind Man and Seven.

The Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, 69 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, appeals for help for the B. family, which is in desperate need of assistance. Until rendered almost totally blind by trachoma, Mr. B. was able to support a good home for his wife and six children, the youngest a mere infant, born a few months ago. The mother keeps an excellent home, but is unable to do any outside work because of her young children. As the eldest child is but 11 years of age and, consequently, too young to work, the family is with absolutely no means of support. The Bureau of Charities has secured medical treatment for the man and is trying to raise a fund of $100, which will be expended for food and rent. Gifts toward this amount should be mailed to the bureau, marked "for 0238 T."

The bureau acknowledges with thanks the following contributions received from contributors who could not be reached by mail: Appeal 0235 E. M. C. ARMS AND THE MAN.

Does Not Preparedness Require as Much One as the Other?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Professor Johnson is quoted as having said before the Mills Tax Commission:

> I think we should not do anything to encourage matrimony and child-bearing * * *. I am still a confirmed disciple of Malthus, and I believe that that awful war over in Europe is being fought out because the human race has deliberately refused to see the lessons of his doctrines, which were taught 100 years ago.

Undoubtedly in the mixture of fundamental causes for the European war, that of overpopulation, from an economic stand, is an important factor. One side expresses it variously as the necessity of spreading, the desire for a place in the sun, the iron band that constricts, the need for colonial outlets—the latter demanded by the commercial classes to conserve a trade that might otherwise be lost to them through unregulated emigration to lands not under the influence of the home Government.

At the risk of provoking the anathemas of those who hark back to the Biblical injunction when the world was young, "

NEW RAVEL MUSIC GIVEN BY DAMROSCH

MISCHA ELMAN, SOLOIST

Music of the orchestra, with which New York will not be less fully supplied than usual in the present season, was heard for the first time here yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall, when the New York Symphony Society began its series of concerts. Mr. Damrosch and the orchestra both seemed to be in fine form and prepared for the arduous weeks before them. There may have been a few new faces among the players; but the orchestra is the same orchestra, and its playing displayed no unexpected qualities, except perhaps a certain freshness and vigor resulting from a Summer's holiday. Mr. Damrosch's orchestral numbers were Beethoven's fifth symphony and selections from Maurice Ravel's music for the pantomime of "Daphnis et Chloe."

The symphony was played with power and delicacy and finish, all of which were so adjusted that the music did not seem out of proportion to the surroundings of Aeolian Hall. Probably no conductor could bear to think of conducting the fifth symphony without something in the nature of a personal touch in his reading; and there were two or three, perhaps, in this reading of Mr. Damrosch's. Some may have thought the retarded rounding of certain phrases a little more than was their just due, or that the oboist was encouraged or permitted to take his little cadenza in the first movement very deliberately indeed. But the performance suffered in nothing from extravagance in such things, and the delivery of the opening phrase was such as needed no questioning.

Selections from Ravel's music for "Daphnis et Chloe" were played last season and were found accordingly interesting, even stirring. Those heard yesterday seemed somewhat less important and less effective, but the fact should not be forgotten that such music, intended as the accompaniment and the interpretation of action on the stage, necessarily loses something of the effect when played in concerts. The excerpts heard yesterday were two: The first, a "nocturne," intended to suggest the assembling and "slow mysterious dancing" of sundry nymphs, ushering in the "Daphnis" theme, the invocation of Pan, and the appearance of the god. The second is a "war dance," rudely animated. There is much curious orchestral coloring in the first that blends before long into the beautiful and the charming, expressed in terms of the French idiom of the day and with much ingenuity of orchestral resource.

The soloist was Mischa Elman, the violinist, who, though in New York last season, did not play here. His reappearance was cordially greeted, and his playing roused more subsequent enthusiasm. He played Goldmark's concerto in A minor, Op. 28, which has seldom been heard here since Mr. Kneisel first introduced it to New York some twenty-five years ago. It is not a work of the first order, but it is serious and sincere music, and it holds its own surprisingly well in a time that has naturally somewhat passed it by. There are warm and expressive, if not positively eloquent, melodies in its substance, touched with something of the Hungarian color that belonged to Goldmark's music, and the three movements are well knit and elaborate in their development, and filled with glowing orchestral color. The work is at least a welcome enlargement of his violinist's répertory. Mr. Elman played it with much zeal and conviction. Repose in the performance of music that interests him—and he has the air of being interested in most music when he plays it—is not a salient feature of his performance, nor was it yesterday. But there was an abundance of fire, of dash and spirit, a reproduction of the warmth of the music; and there was inevitably the bravura, the brilliant and victorious technical command that few other violinists of the day can equal. It interested and aroused the listeners.

SARAH BERNHARDT IS 70.

Birthday Greetings Cabled—To Act in London Before Coming Here.

Today is Sarah Bernhardt's birthday, or maybe yesterday was. William F. Connor, the French artist's American manager, is of the opinion that Mme. Bernhardt was born seventy years ago today, though some of the biographies give Oct. 22, 1844, as the date of her birth. Mr. Connor says that all his records show she was born Oct. 23, 1845, and acting under this belief he sent a cablegram of congratulations yesterday that will be delivered to her today.

Mme. Bernhardt is in Paris. She has again changed her plans, and before coming to America will go to London to play an engagement at the Coliseum. Mr. Connor is awaiting details of the new plan, but his impression is that the actress will come to New York in December.

LAMBS' PUBLIC GAMBOLS.

Two Entertainments Planned in Aid of Club's Building Fund.

The Lambs are going to deviate from their custom of giving only private gambols during the Winter and instead give a series of public performances similar to those given every year in the clubhouse. The dates for two of these entertainments have been set for Nov. 7 and Dec. 14. They will be given in the Hudson Theatre, but will not interfere with the regular performance of "Under Fire."

Sam Hardy and Fred Niblo are arranging the programs for the gambols, which will be made up of original sketches by members of the club. The proceeds of the entertainments will be added to the fund to pay for the addition to the clubhouse in course of construction.

Alexander Bloch's Recital.

Alexander Bloch, who has given violin recitals in Aeolian Hall before, did it again last evening, playing the C minor and A major sonatas of Beethoven and Handel, respectively, and shorter pieces by Juon, Victor Kolar, Cecil Burleigh, Gambati, Handel, and Tschaikowsky. Mr. Bloch's most excellent qualification is that he plays in tune, and in a world where it is so much easier to play out of tune than in it, this is something to be prized. His tone, however, is small and his style a miniature one, so that his performance of masterpieces cannot be called representative or influential or even mildly stirring. His bearing is modest, his playing unpretentious, and, indeed, it seems hardly in place in the public concert halls of New York.

MRS. GALT BUYS TROUSSEAU

Places Orders for Paris Gowns with a Washington Firm.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—A close friend of Mrs. Norman Galt, the President's fiancée, made known today that the majority of the dinner and evening gowns ordered by Mrs. Galt for the coming season would be supplied through a Washington establishment. Mrs. Galt has definitely placed an order that will relieve her of any further shopping.

While a Washington modiste is intrusted with the assembling of this wardrobe, the gowns are coming from New York—that is, through the New York Custom House—for nearly all of them are importations from Paris.

Mrs. Galt has a variety of black gowns which she is wearing at dinners and at the theatre, but she now adds a brilliant evening wrap. One of these wraps, in which she appeared a few evenings ago, was a deep crimson velvet brocade, very full in the skirt, but close-fitting across the shoulders and long enough to come to her ankles. This is lined with delicate green satin.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Norman Galt evaded curious people who followed the White House automobile from store to store here this afternoon in hopes of seeing the next White House bride. Wherever the car stopped a crowd gathered. At no time were there more than two persons in the car, Miss Helen Bones and Mrs. Mead of Dayton, sister-in-law of Mrs. Galt, and while the people were following them Mrs. Galt continued her shopping expedition.

MRS. WYCKOFF'S WEDDING.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Tomlinson Weds H. T. Curtiss Today.

Mrs. Esther T. Wyckoff, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Tomlinson of 45 West Fifty-seventh Street, and Henry T. Curtiss, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Julian W. Curtiss of Oak Farm, Greenwich, Conn., will be married today at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson in Goshen, Mass.

This will be Mrs. Wyckoff's second marriage. In April, 1906, she became the bride of Clarence P. Wyckoff. Later they were divorced and on Oct. 25, 1913, Mr. Wyckoff married Miss Margaret Macdona, an actress.

Mr. Curtiss is a Yale graduate, class of 1910. He has several sisters, including Mrs. L. Wallis Gibbons and Miss Margaret B. Curtiss.

MISS GROSE WEDS OCT. 30.

Attendants for Her Marriage to Richard B. Wilson in New Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Grose of Great Neck, L. I., have sent out invitations for the wedding of Miss Josephine Grose, their sister, to Richard Bartley Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Wilson of Youngstown, Ohio, which is to take place on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 30, at 4 o'clock, in the New Church, in Thirty-fifth Street, between Park and Lexington Avenues. A reception is to follow at the Gramercy Park. The Rev. Julian K. Smythe is to officiate.

Mrs. Grose is to be the matron of honor and Mr. Grose will give the bride in marriage. The bridesmaids will be the Misses Helen B. Rich, Alice Pressbery, and Florence Miller of this city, and Gladys A. McClellan of Youngstown. Virginia Robbins of Pelham Manor, a niece of the bride, is to act as flower girl.

James T. Wilson of Providence, R. I., will be his brother's best man. The ushers will include Howard and Rondal Grose of New York, brothers of the bride; Sheldon C. Collins of Great Barrington, Mass., and Harold L. Wilson, another brother, of Youngstown.

Mr. Wilson is a graduate of Brown University, class of 1912, and of the Columbia Law School, class of 1915.

Tufts-Trowbridge Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Tufts of Los Angeles, Cal., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marjorie Alyn Tufts, to Arthur Lusk Trowbridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Trowbridge of 57 East Thirty-fourth Street. The wedding is to take place in Los Angeles next April.

WALDO STORY VERY ILL.

Sculptor Is Suffering from a Blood Clot—Bessie Abott with Him.

Waldo Story, the sculptor, is seriously ill at his home, 133 East Sixtieth Street, according to the announcement made by his friends last night. It is said that a clot has formed on his brain, but at his home the only information that could be obtained was that he was in a dangerous condition.

With him, it is said, who is Miss Bessie Abott, he returned to the city recently and took his present home. He is a son of the late William Wetmore Story, the sculptor, and was associated with his father during the latter years of his life, and for several years after his death, which took place in 1896, completed the Story Studio in the Barberini Palace in Rome.

Mr. Story did the first statue ever placed in the House of Commons, that of Sir William Vernon Harcourt. Other noted works of his are the golden mosaic memorial to Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, pastor and builder, and Perry Belmont, which is in Trinity Church at Newport, R. I. Mrs. Story is widely known as a grand opera singer, and Mr. Story's brother, Julian Story, the painter, married Emma Eames, from whom he was later divorced.

1,000 TO MAKE PILGRIMAGE.

Party Leaves Today to Visit Holy Shrines in Washington.

The second New York pilgrimage to the Memorial Church of the Holy Land in Washington, noted for its reproductions of Biblical scenes and places, will take place today when a party of Pilgrims will depart. It is expected that 1,000 Pilgrims will go.

The party, accompanied by a Franciscan priest, will leave the Baltimore & Ohio Terminal in Jersey City at 11 o'clock on a special train in two sections. After breakfast tomorrow in Washington the party will go by trolley to the Franciscan Monastery, at Mt. St. Sepulchre, Brookland, where high mass will be celebrated. After mass the Shrines of Nazareth, Matyr's Crypt Catacombs, Purgatory Chapel, Bethlehem, Mt. Calvary, the Holy Sepulchre, Grotto of the Agony, Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes, and the Alverna Chapel, will be visited.

Encouraged by the success of the present trip the committee will begin immediate plans for a larger pilgrimage early in 1916.

The Neighborhood Dances.

The Neighborhood Dances are to be continued this season at the Hotel Gotham, and the first meeting is set for Nov. 27. Among the patronesses are Mrs. James B. Curtis, Mrs. William Nelson, Mrs. William T. Gibb, Mrs. George Schaefer, Mrs. John E. Weeks, and Mrs. Edwin W. Andrews.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Philip Sawyer of 100 East Seventy-eighth Street has arranged two subscription dances for young people, to be known as the Two Tuesday Dances. They will be held at the Colony Club on Dec. 28 and Jan. 18.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Whitehouse have returned from their Summer place at Manchester, Mass., and are staying at the Ritz-Carlton. Myron T. Herrick, ex-Ambassador to France, is also at the hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Mitchell of New York and Washington are sailing for Europe on Nov. 2 on the Rotterdam.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Norris Williams of Philadelphia are at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mrs. Wheldon Keeling has returned from New Canaan, Conn., and is at 118 East Fifty-fourth Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl von Mayhoff, who have been in Monticello, Va., have returned to 17 East Thirty-seventh Street, for the Winter.

The wedding of Miss Estelle Y. Romeyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Romeyn, and Ernest W. Pittman will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. Thomas's Church, and will be followed by a small reception at the Women's University Club.

'SONNY' FEELS FINE IN NEW GOULD HOME

HAS A GOVERNESS NOW

Foster Parents Say Their Son Takes Poor Picture, and Refuse Photographers.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 22.—A blond-headed youngster raced out of the big bath house at Lyndhurst, Mrs. Helen Gould Shepard's estate here, this morning, and tore across the lawn toward Mrs. Shepard.

"Hello, Sonny," she called to him, and the little lad flung himself at her, shouting:

"I had a dandy bath. But, ooh! the water was cold. I'm learning to swim, too. I use white wings. It's great."

A governess and one of Frank Gould's children, who make their home with their aunt, followed after the youngster, and the party walked toward the big house, Mrs. Shepard holding the hand of her adopted son, the little waif who until yesterday was just "John Doe, No. 104," in St. Christopher's Home in Dobbs Ferry.

Mrs. Shepard looked proudly at the little chap as he told her about his bath. He is a sturdy youngster, very manly and good-looking, and, although he is not yet five years old, he uses excellent language to express his ideas. Mrs. Shepard was still holding to "Sonny's" hand when a reporter approached her. She smiled a greeting, and "Sonny" looked on interestedly while she talked, but all Mrs. Shepard would say was:

"Won't you please excuse me from talking about myself or my adopted son? Really there is nothing more to say. The newspapers this morning had a very fair account of all there is to tell at this time."

Then she and "Sonny" went on to the house.

Mr. Shepard was equally reticent when he returned from New York on the 6:49 o'clock train this evening. He said he couldn't give permission to have his adopted son photographed, much as he would like to be obliging.

"Mrs. Shepard and myself have very good reasons for this stand," he said.

"And besides, we do not think it would be good for the youngster now. We have taken several pictures of him ourselves, and all of them have turned out poorly."

Mr. Shepard said there wasn't anything more to tell about why he and his wife had adopted the youngster, and then he hurried home to see his wife and "Sonny."

MAY BE BOY'S HALF-BROTHER.

Man in Syracuse Thinks Shepard's Adopted Son Is His Relative.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Edward Edwards of Manlius, nine miles east of this city, yesterday called on Chief of Police Martin L. Cadin here and said he thought that "John Doe No. 104," known also as Austin McCleary, the five-year-old child adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, was his half-brother. He displayed a picture of the lad taken two years ago, and the Chief said that the boy in the picture looked very much like the published pictures of the adopted child.

Edwards said that his father, who he thinks may be the father of the little boy, when he came to this country dropped the name of McCleary for some unknown reason and took that of Edwards. He lived here until 1909, when his wife died, and he went to New York, while he, the son, went to Manlius to live.

The father married again and had two children by his second wife. These were Angus and Gwendolyn, and the father died in the Harlem Hospital in New York on Aug. 13, 1914. Edwards said that he brought his father's body to this city for burial, and while in New York saw his stepmother and her two children for the first time. It was a month later that "John Doe No. 104" was found on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral, in New York.

Walter B. Walker of 135 Broadway, the lawyer who arranged for the legal adoption of the child, said last night that any persons asserting they were his relations would have a very difficult time proving their relationship.

"Everything possible was done before steps were taken for the adoption, to make sure that the child has no relatives," he said, "and it will be practically impossible for any one to prove that he has any living."

OPERATION ON MARY GARDEN

Opera Singer's Father Says She Is Suffering from Appendicitis.

R. D. Garden, the father of Mary Garden, the American opera singer, who arrived yesterday from Liverpool, said he had left his daughter in Paris calmly waiting to undergo an operation for appendicitis. She had not done any singing during the Summer, he said, but had been assisting in caring for wounded French soldiers in a small hospital in Paris, maintained by herself and two women friends.

Mary Garden hoped to return to New York next February and sing at a few concerts, Mr. Garden said.

180 in "Around the Map" Company

The company that will appear in Klaw & Erlanger's production of the new musical play, "Around the Map," for which C. M. S. McLellan wrote the words and Herman Finck the music, will go to Washington today on a special train. The production is an elaborate one—there are sixteen changes of scenery painted by Joseph Urban, and the organization, counting the stage force and orchestra, numbers more than 180 persons. The first performance will be given in the National Theatre Monday night, and a week later the piece will be presented here in the New Amsterdam.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The Eighty-first Street has been added to the list of playhouses in which the Triangle films will be shown. The first program will be given Nov. 8 in conjunction with vaudeville.

Frank Thompson, son of Denman Thompson of "Old Homestead" memory, has revived the famous double quartet of that bucolic drama as a vaudeville act. A number of the singers of the original organization are in the company.

After Anna Held has acted for the motion picture she has contracted to make for Oliver Morosco, she will play twenty-five weeks in vaudeville in the Keith theatres. A percentage of her earnings will be given to the French Red Cross Society.

Clementine De Vere, prima donna of grand opera here and abroad, will make her vaudeville debut at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre the latter half of next week in a condensed version of "Martha."

Plans for the dog show at the Hippodrome next week have been perfected. Frank S. Sternberg, Harris A. Baxter, and H. L. Hoffman, kennel experts, will act as judges, and Dr. Edward N. Leavy, veterinarian of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, will inspect the pups to see that they are in fit condition to face Hippodrome audiences.

ALL WANT TO BE ORATORS

But Chauncey M. Depew Cautions the Would-Be Public Speakers.

"Every man in the United States wants to be a public speaker," said Chauncey M. Depew to the members of the Public Speaking Club of America at its opening in the West Side Y. M. C. A. Building, at 318 West Fifty-seventh Street, last night. "And," continued Mr. Depew, since the suffrage movement began, some women. I have never met a man who wouldn't rather be an orator than what he is, and most men think it's easy until they try it. Then they find it difficult. But very man can be a speaker if he will work hard enough. Public speaking is work, intelligent, persistent work, and a temperament behind the work that finds inspiration in failure."

Mr. Depew drew an emphatic distinction between "the gift of gab" and intelligent public speaking, and said that no man should presume to address his fellow citizens on any subject unless he knew more about the subject than they.

"The success of an orator," Mr. Depew continued, "also lies to a great extent in his ability to think for those who hear him, and make them go away imagining that they have thought it all out for themselves."

Mr. Depew indulged his talk with accounts of personal experiences in oratory. He told of the time when he raised his "Peekskill tenor voice" while standing on the rock from which St. Paul addressed "Ye men of Athens," and of how a friend had attributed his success in speaking to his manipulations of a dry cigar.

Mr. Depew was introduced to the club with the recital by the chairman of his page in "Who's Who." When the ex-Senator arose to speak, he said:

"I don't know what to say after that obituary. I suppose that when a man is in his eighty-second year he has to submit to that sort of thing."

SYMPATHY COST HIM $102.

One Man Held on Complaint of Victims of Package Game.

John Bruno, 51 years old, who refused to give his address, was arraigned before Magistrate Murphy in Yorkville Court yesterday on a charge of grand larceny and held in $1,500 bail for examination today.

When arraigned Bruno wept, but Detective Bauerschmidt told the court that the prisoner could cause tears to flow at will, and that he had been crying all morning. Magistrate Murphy ordered the prisoner to dry his eyes, saying that there was no sympathy due him.

Bruno was arraigned on complaint of Max Rosenberg of 231 East Forty-third Street, who, through his sympathy, lost $102 and a gold watch and chain. Rosenberg's story to the court was to the effect that he saw Bruno weeping in Forty-second Street, near First Avenue, some days ago and was told that the latter was carrying $4,000 to the Spanish Consulate and was afraid of being robbed.

Rosenberg agreed to accompany Bruno, and en route to the Consulate office they were joined by a third man. This man suggested that Rosenberg take charge of the $4,000, but put up his money and watch as security, all to be placed in a package. This was done and the package left with Rosenberg, who was to meet Bruno the next day. When the package was opened it was found to contain waste paper.

MISS FARRAR FOR GERMANY.

Singer's Letter Is Being Reproduced in the Papers There.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 23.—The Daily Mail says that Geraldine Farrar has written a letter from the United States which is being reproduced in the German press. She says:

"Everybody who knows me understands how grateful I am to Germany and the German people, because it is only through them I have become what I am in the musical world. None of my German friends can possibly for a moment believe the accusations which have been brought against me in such a hateful manner and which are nothing but untruths and distortions. I am a member of the Royal Prussian Opera and will go there when the right time comes and no poisonous tongue shall hinder me doing so. I am proud of my rank as a Prussian chamber singer and think too highly of it to show disrespect for the country to which I owe so inexpressibly much. I am a Germanophile through and through, although that is not very popular here at present."

ARRESTED IN COLLEGE ROW.

Four N. Y. U. Youths Cught in Interclass Fight in Street.

Special to The New York Times.

YONKERS, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Sylvester Elliott and Francis Potter, sophomores at New York University, and Harold Potter and Raymond Groves, freshmen, were arraigned before City Judge Beall in Special Sessions here today as a aftermath of the annual dinner of the sophomores at Stanley's restaurant last night.

Thirty-nine freshmen tried to break up the banquet, which 114 sophomores were having. The collegians staged a lively fight in South Broadway, near the restaurant. Reserves from the Third Police Precinct caught four of the belligerents and shooed the rest over the city line into New York.

The four students arrested were paroled until today, when Judge Beall suspended sentence, after finding them guilty of fighting in the street.

BROADWAY LINES BLOCKED.

Traffic on Broadway surface lines was tied up for more than an hour during the rush last night when a crowded northbound Broadway-Columbus Avenue surface car jumped the tracks at Broadway and Columbus Avenue, tore up the rail, and narrowly missed crashing into an elevated pillar.

Although there was considerable excitement among the passengers, no one was seriously injured, and the glass windows of the car were unbroken. Patrolman Winnegar of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, who was on duty at the crossing, escaped being hit only by a few inches.

SIR ANDREW NOBLE DIES IN LONDON

WON MANY DECORATIONS

He Was the Author of Books on the Science of Gunnery and a Member of Noted Societies.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The death is announced here today of Sir Andrew Noble, one of the foremost authorities on artillery and explosives, in his eighty-fifth year.

He was a native of Scotland, and for many years had been an important member of executive and experimental committees connected with the work of Woolwich Arsenal.

Sir Andrew was educated at Edinburgh University, and in 1860 joined the firm of Sir W. G. Armstrong & Co., pioneer makers of ordnance. He was President of the First Committee on Explosives from the time it was formed until it was dissolved, and later became a member of the Board of Research. In 1904 Sir Andrew served as a member of the Tariff Commission. He was President of the Federated Engineering Employers of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and in 1908 received the gold medal of the Society of Chemical Industry. The following year he received the Albert Medal from the Royal Society of Arts.

Sir Andrew received a number of Governmental decorations and honors for his work. In 1893 he was created a Knight Commander of the Bath and in 1902 was made a Baronet. He was also a Fellow of the Royal Society, a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, a Fellow of the Chemical Society, and the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Science. Sir Andrew was also a Doctor of Civil Law.

He was the first Baronet of Ardmore and Ardardan Noble in Dumbartonshire and of Ardkinglas in Argyllshire. Sir Andrew was also a Justice and Deputy Lieutenant of the Peace in Northumberland, of which he was Sheriff in 1896. He had received a number of foreign decorations, among which were those of the First Class of the Sacred Treasure of Japan and the Order of the Rising Sun, the Grand Cordon of the Orders of Mesoudieh and Medjidie, the Rose of Brazil, the Grand Cross of the Crown of Italy, the Dragon of China, the post of Commander of the Order of Jesus Christ of Portugal, and he was a Knight of the Order of Charles III. of Spain.

Sir Andrew was also a foreign member of the Academia del Lincei of Rome, and at the time of his death was Chairman of Sir W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth & Co.

He was the author of a number of books on explosives and the science of gunnery, the best known of which is "Artillery and Explosives," published in 1906.

Among the clubs he belonged to were the Carlton, Athenaeum, Army and Navy, and the United Service Clubs of London, and the New Club of Edinburgh.

In 1854 he married Miss Margery Campbell, daughter of A. Campbell of Quebec, and is survived by two sons and two daughters. His heir is Major George John William Noble, late of the Thirteenth Hussars.

Charles Hubbard.

Charles Hubbard, a steel, iron, and coal merchant, and one of the builders of the famous Monitor, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George S. Towle, in Larchmont, N. Y., in his eighty-first year. He was head of the firm of Charles Hubbard & Co. of 81 Fulton Street. Mr. Hubbard was a descendant of the fifth child of John Alden and Priscilla Mullens of the Plymouth Colony and was born in Boston. He came here when a young man and went into the steel business, being for a time connected with the J. L. Mott Iron Works. In addition to his daughter, he is survived by a son.

Rev. Father Alphonse M. Schaeken.

The Rev. Father Alphonse M. Schaeken, rector of St. Paul's Church in Jersey City for the last fifteen years, died suddenly yesterday afternoon in the rectory, 14 Greenville Avenue, of heart disease, in his sixty-seventh year. He was a native of Holland and was educated at the University of Louvain. Soon after he came to this country and became assistant at St. Joseph's Church, in Baldwin Avenue, Jersey City. From there, thirty years ago, he went to the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes in Paterson, N. J., as rector, his next charge being St. Paul's.

Adolph H. Fischer.

Adolph H. Fischer, President of the North River Savings Bank, and actively connected with a number of other financial institutions, died last night at his home, 129 West Seventieth Street, in his sixty-second year.

He was born in this city and was a graduate of the Columbia Law School. Mr. Fischer was a Director of the Produce Exchange Bank and the Garfield Safe Deposit Company. He was a Past Master of Kane Lodge, F. and A. M., and a member of the Union League Club. His wife, a son, and a daughter survive him.

Consul Arthur James Clare.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Oct. 22.—Arthur James Clare, United States Consul at Port Antonio, died early this morning after a short illness in his fifty-second year.

He had been in the Consular Service for fourteen years, his first appointment being that of Vice Consul at Barbados in 1901. From 1902 until 1905 he was Vice and Deputy Consul, and then Consul. In 1908 he was appointed Consul at Georgetown, in Guiana. In 1911 Mr. Clare became Consul at Bluefields in Nicaragua, later being transferred to Port Antonio.

Charles H. Covell Dies at 82.

Charles Heber Covell, a former Commissary of the Seventh Regiment and one of the oldest members of its veteran association, died yesterday at his home, 490 West End Avenue, in his eighty-third year. He was born in Saybrook, Conn., and retired from business five years ago. Mr. Covell belonged to the Seventh Regiment for thirty-two years and served in Washington during the civil war. His wife and three sons survive him.

Dr. Gabriel to Tell of Armenia.

At the French Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, 109 West Fifty-fourth Street, this evening, Dr. M. S. Gabriel will give a talk upon Armenia. The lecture will be free, and women are invited.

AARON S. THOMAS DIES.

Retired Shoe Manufacturer and Banker Was in His 69th Year.

Aaron Smith Thomas, one of the most prominent shoe manufacturers in this country until he retired in 1905, and the founder of Thomas & Co. of Brooklyn, died yesterday at his home, 183 West Seventy-third Street, in his sixty-ninth year. He was a special partner in the brokerage firm of Clement & Whitney at 55 Wall Street.

He was born in Wickford, R. I., and was graduated from Yale University in 1869. Mr. Thomas was President of his class at the time of his death, and was a member of the fraternities of Psi Upsilon and Phi Beta Kappa. After graduating he entered the shoe manufacturing business in Providence, R. I., where he remained until he came here many years ago. Mr. Thomas was a director of the Mount Morris and Williamsburg Savings Banks and of the Neyland Butt Company of Providence. He was a brother of the late Bishop Elisha S. Thomas of Canada, and an uncle of Bishop Nathaniel B. Thomas of Wyoming.

He was a vestryman of Christ Church here and of St. Paul's Church in Wickford, R. I., where he was also Vice President of the Laymen's Federation. Mr. Thomas was also a member of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the Union League Club, the Sons of American Revolution, and the New England Society.

His wife, who was Miss Clara L. Hubbard, and his two sons, Dr. Clarence T. and Winthrop G. Thomas, survive him.

FOOTBALL BATTLES TODAY WILL TEST THE BIG ELEVENS — COLUMBIA'S FIRST GAME

FOOTBALL ELEVENS SWARM IN NEW YORK

Dartmouth, Holy Cross, W. & J., and St. Lawrence Drop In Before Today's Games.

New York was overrun with football players yesterday, and with so many gridiron folks at large the city again looked like the football centre it was several years ago. Four college squads were camped at the Hotel Cumberland, and tonight there will be five, with a total of more than 150 men. Dartmouth, Washington and Jefferson, St. Lawrence, and Holy Cross all held their final rehearsals for today's games on local gridirons.

Last night was a football night, but, being the 'eve of the games, was very quiet. Tonight, if some of these teams win today, the college cheer of the exuberant youth may echo up and down Broadway as in days of yore.

Dartmouth practiced for a few hours at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn yesterday, and will go to Princeton this morning, accompanied by 200 students from Hanover, together with many of Dartmouth's Alumni, to see the Green Mountain boys tackle the Tigers.

The Washington and Jefferson squad, under Coach Bob Folwell, went through a signal drill and practice in forward passing at Van Cortlandt Park. The team went to New Haven last night to get a rest before they attack Yale. The St. Lawrence eleven, which opens the season at Columbia, and will bring back the game to Columbia after an absence of ten years, practiced at South Field yesterday. Holy Cross is here to play Fordham, and it is expected that the game will be witnessed by the largest crowd that has seen the Maroon play in nine years. The Georgetown team, which plays the Army today, will arrive here this morning and will return from West Point tonight and join the big gathering of visiting collegians to see what New York looks like when the electric signs are all at work.

Coach Frank Cavanaugh put the big Dartmouth team through a long signal drill at Ebbets Field, and Gerrish practiced a lot of kicking. There is no strong feeling of confidence in the Dartmouth crowd this year that they will win at Princeton. Cavanaugh saw the Tigers defeat Lafayette last week and came away saying that Princeton had a pretty good football team, a better one than last year. His own team is weaker behind the line, although Dartmouth presents a big, powerful array of forwards. McDonough will play his first big game at quarter back, and although he is mechanically a good player, his worth under fire has yet to be determined. McDonough is not in the best of shape and his place may be taken by Worthington, the national champion broad jumper. Princeton won last year 16 to 12, and while the New Hampshire lads do not look for victory, they expect a close game.

Washington and Jefferson does not hope to repeat last year's 13 to 7 victory over Yale at the Bowl today. Coach Bob Folwell said yesterday that his back field averaged only 150 pounds, but that the line men were big and formidable. They went through their plays at Van Cortlandt Park, and now have the forward pass well perfected. This style of play is like that Yale had last year. The team, however, will miss the services of such stars as Speigel and Fleming. "We do not expect to beat Yale," said Folwell yesterday before going to New Haven, "but the Elis will know they have been in a football game."

Much of the sympathy which seems to be prevailing among Yale men for the eleven may not be necessary, for it is under adverse conditions that Yale teams of the past have risen to real power before the season was ended. It would not be surprising if Yale should start today into the upgrade and wipe out last year's defeat by Washington and Jefferson in an effective manner.

There will be great jubilation at Columbia this afternoon when St. Lawrence gives the newly formed Columbia eleven its first test. Coach Metcalf has been drilling nine men for many weeks, but the team's ability is unknown. Columbia is so enthusiastic about the return of the gridiron game that the students will turn out and make a big noise about it. There will be music and waving of flags and concerted cheering. The students of Barnard College will attend the game and join in the demonstration. St. Lawrence practiced at South Field yesterday under Coach Boundy. The players went through their plays with plenty of snap and dash, and will give Columbia a good chance to see just how much they know about football. Too much is not expected of the Columbia eleven in their first game.

The revival of the Holy Cross game at Fordham is a significant event for these rivals, and a big crowd is expected at Fordham Field. Harry Vaughn, the former Yale player, is coaching the Maroon eleven, and, as this is the first of the four hard games on Fordham's schedule, a close battle is looked for. Holy Cross is being coached this season by Luke Kelly, the former Notre Dame star.

The big game of the day out of reach of New Yorkers is the Harvard-Cornell game at Cambridge. The Red Team from Ithaca is going into the Stadium today primed to do big things. Coach Al Sharpe's team has shown great speed and power this season, but their opponents have not offered a resistance which has shown a true test of the Cornell offense. The eleven made a great finish last year and started this season with much fine material and with Barrett, one of the best quarter backs, as Captain. Harvard's development has been slow and the Crimson has shown moments of extreme weakness. Their showing this year, however, is about the same as last year, when Haughton's team showed little of its real power until the game with Princeton.

For Cornell today's game is its biggest opportunity of the year, and the team is likely to make the most of its Wehrle and Harvard combination up enough of its latent and slowly developed power to offstand the dashing game of the Ithacans, who are sure to play desperately to win, is of course a question. To Harvard the Cornell game will be taken as it comes in the Haughton system of the team's development. Harvard would be satisfied to win by a small margin. The Crimson will probably play the same sort of a safe game as was played against Michigan last year. The desire to run up a good score against a formidable opponent like Cornell would be sacrificed to safeguard the team for its future big games. Cornell has never defeated the Harvard eleven.

Penn and Pittsburgh Clash Today.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—The University of Pennsylvania football team held its final practice for tomorrow's game with the University of Pittsburgh today behind closed gates. Even members of the scrub team were barred from Franklin Field while the 'Varsity ran through a light signal practice, which was followed by a blackboard talk in the gymnasium. With the exception of Mathews, left tackle, the Pennsylvania players are in fine shape, and the coaches feel confident that the team will give a good account of itself in tomorrow's contest.

The Pittsburgh players, accompanied by Coach Warner and a squad of rooters, arrived here tonight. Although none of the freshmen in the Pittsburgh squad will participate in the game, Coach Warner and his players are hopeful of winning by a large score.

CADETS FEAR GEORGETOWN.

Keenly Remember What Southerners Did to Navy in Recent Game.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, Oct. 22.—Light practice on the football field this evening gave the Army its final preparation for the Georgetown game tomorrow. On their way out to the gridiron the men stopped for a short practice at the blocking and tackling dummies. There was no scrimmaging, the coaches spending most of the time in a position drill and a long signal practice. Injuries to Parker, Meacham and Coffin kept these players idle today and they are not likely to play against Georgetown tomorrow. O'Hare, Captain "Babe" Weyand, Mitchell, Ford, and Oliphant all participated in the signal drill tonight, but they are so badly bruised they are not expected to start tomorrow's game. The men spent considerable time with the forward pass formations, Murrill getting off several pretty ones to the ends. Britton seems to have displaced Redfield at end. The latter was not used today in the signal practice. Timberlake will play part of the game in Weyand's place.

The cadets fear Georgetown and although the team is crippled it will make a hard fight to win. The fact that Georgetown beat the Navy a fortnight ago is an added incentive to the Army men to win and Georgetown will know it has been through a fight at the finish. The Army team will line up as follows: Neyland and Britton, ends; Jones and Weyand, tackles; O'Hare and Holmes, guards; McEwan, centre; Murrill, quarterback; Mitchell and Oliphant, half backs; Ford, full back.

N. Y. U. Goes to Haverford Today.

A two-hour rehearsal of signals and a general review of the weak points was the final preparation which Head Coach Reilley gave the New York University eleven yesterday for the game with Haverford at Haverford, Penn., today. The Varsity showed more speed than it has at any previous practice this season. Every man was in his regular position and appeared to be in the best of condition, so that the Violet expects to defeat the Pennsylvania eleven by a larger score than last year. The superior strength of this year's eleven and the fact that the practices of the past week have included some of the hardest kind of scrimmaging indicate that the Violet's hopes will be realized.

Navy Hopes for a Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 22.—The Naval Academy football team has improved so much in its practice games during the present week that its friends are confident of defeating Virginia Polytechnic Institute here tomorrow and showing a different brand of football from that exhibited in previous games. The line-up announced by Head Coach Ingram shows several changes, and the team will start the game as follows: Left end, Kenworthy; left tackle, Ward; left guard, Kercher; centre, Goodsell; right guard, Smith; right tackle, Gilman; right end, Harrison; quarter back, Captain Miles; left half back, Martin; right half back, Westphal; full back, Von Heimburg. Harrison, one of the regular ends last season, will play for the first time this season. He is particulary strong in getting the ball on forward pass plays. Every back has shown improvement during the week in carrying the ball, while Von Heimburg is doing much better punting.

Indians "Brush Up" on Signals.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Oct. 22.—On account of making several changes in the Carlisle Indian School football eleven's line-up, Coaches Kelly and Welch put the Redskins through an unusually long and hard signal drill this afternoon on Indian Field, in preparation for tomorrow's contest here against Bucknell. The players are getting accustomed to their new positions, and team work will not be seriously handicapped. Captain Calac did some good work this after noon, both in punting and in placement kicking. The Redskins' line-up tomorrow will be: Left end, Lasha; left tackle, Welmas; left guard, Mays; centre, E. Morin; right guard, J. Morin; right tackle, Martel; right end, Looksaround; quarter back, Crane; left half back, Broker; right half back, Wofford; full back, Captain Calac.

Signal Drill for Williams.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Oct. 22.—In preparation for the Trinity game tomorrow, the Williams College football players were put through a thorough signal drill this afternoon on Weston Field. The addition of Wells and Payson, both star members of last year's Purple eleven, to the coaching staff has enabled Fred Daly to give his undivided attention to several new formations which are being tried out, probably for use against Trinity tomorrow. Williams will line up as follows: Redfield, left end; Choate, left tackle; Clifford, left guard; Garfield, centre; J. A. Wright, right guard; Welch, right tackle; Hubbell, right end; Overton, left half back; H. Wright, right half back; Jones, quarter back; Tomkins, full back.

Wesleyan Goes to Amherst Today.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Oct. 22.—The Wesleyan team, which will go to Amherst tomorrow, has not been scored upon this season, and the whole institution is worked up in expectation of a victory tomorrow. More than four hundred students, with a band, will go to Amherst on a special train. Owing to injuries, the Wesleyan team will be handicapped, for Captain Highley, Sargent, and Becker are all out of the game. This year's team is regarded here as the best since 1905, when Wesleyan won the triangular league pennant. Coach Eustis has used the freshman team this week against the 'Varsity.

"Pete" Maxfield Out Again.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Oct. 22.—After a month's absence from active play with the Lafayette football squad, Pete Maxfield, the giant tackle, was at his old place in the signal practice this afternoon, which was the final preparation for the game with Albright tomorrow. Maxfield has been out with a sprained ankle. It is probable that he will play in a part of the game tomorrow. Low again played tackle on the 'Varsity, and will play there tomorrow. The 'Varsity went through the light work in a spirited style.

Eight Football Fatalities This Year.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The death of Bryan Scott of Knox College, who died in St. Louis yesterday of injuries sustained in a football game, was the eighth football fatality this season, according to statistics available today. There were fifteen deaths attributed to the game last season, including one after the season had closed.

Montclair Football Victory.

Montclair Academy's football team defeated the Bloomfield High School eleven in an interesting game yesterday afternoon on the former's gridiron at Montclair, N. J., by the score of 20 to 0.

YALE EXPECTS CLOSE GAME WITH W. & J.

Elis Fear Repetition of Successful Forward Passing of Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 22.—Yale coaches said tonight, in discussing tomorrow's football game with Washington and Jefferson College, that Yale could expect to win by only the closest of margins. Yale undergraduates believe that their eleven, weakened by the injury of six first string players, and by the loss of Full Back Harry Legore and Half Back Billy Easton through disqualification, will be unable to outscore the brilliant W. and J. combination which last year defeated the Elis 13 to 7. Unless Washington and Jefferson is considerably weaker than it was a year ago Yale cannot logically hope for victory, according to many undergraduates. It is felt that Yale faces its first eleven of the highest standard this season and that, although Virginia won a game through Yale's fumbling, Washington and Jefferson will show an article of football tomorrow much superior to that played by Virginia.

On account of the loss of four rush line stars, Yale's defense will be considerably weakened and the ability of Gates and Church to withstand the visitors' attack is doubted by many Yale men who are downcast by the loss of Legore. Yale will be able to present no star tomorrow except Captain Wilson, whose end runs from quarter back with the plunging game of Mal Scovil will constitute the major part of the Yale attack.

That Yale fears the forward pass has been shown by bringing John Kilpatrick several days ago to perfect the Eli ends. Washington and Jefferson made both their touchdowns last year through an almost marvelous execution of this play. Yale's ends have been the weakest played of any position on the team, and Yale has been heroically trying to strengthen this link in her chain of defense during the past fortnight.

Considerable Washington and Jefferson money reached Yale tonight. It was offered at even terms against Yale.

Yale will make two changes in the line-up tomorrow. Church has displaced Allen at right end and Joe Neville will be tried at right half back in place of Legore. Church, who will tomorrow start his first game for Yale since early last season, has been making the competition close with Allen for right end all Fall. He was tried at both tackle and end in the early games this year and was regarded as a likely first-string choice when he was shelved for the season by injury.

In Kirk, Smith, and Neville Yale will present a pony pair of half backs, each weighing about 165 pounds. They will divide the Yale punting. Neville did the kicking last Saturday after Legore retired, but Smith has shown improvement steadily this week under the tutelage of Dr. Billy Bull, and will start the punting game tomorrow.

Aside from Legore, six first-string players will be kept out of the game by injuries. These are Centre Rush White, Guard Black, Tackle Baldridge, End Betts, Quarter Back Thompson, and Full Back Guernsey.

FOOTBALL CAPTAIN A "PRO."

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 22.—Lorin Solon, Captain of the University of Minnesota football eleven, today was held guilty of professionalism, and declared ineligible to take part in future intercollegiate competitions. The charge against him was that he had played Summer baseball for money on the Havre (Mon.) team.

The Eligibility Committee includes two football players—Baston and Bierman. The vote against him was unanimous. As Solon signed an affidavit that he was an amateur, it was said that expulsion from the university might be asked. Solon was the team's surest ground gainer, its best goal kicker, a great defense player, and the best man on the squad in receiving forward passes, according to his admirers.

He was the Special Gopher Captain in recent history to be barred from play on the eve of an important contest because of sustained charges of professionalism. In 1914 Captain Earl Pickering of Madison, Wis., was declared ineligible to play, and was withdrawn from the line-up on complaint of the University of Wisconsin.

Lehigh Tackles Muhlenburg.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Oct. 22.—The best conditioned, best developed, and strongest football team that Lehigh has been able to get together this year finished a strenuous week of work today, and tomorrow will try to demonstrate Coach Keady's teachings against the strength of Muhlenburg's team. At least the local coaches hope Muhlenburg will prove strong, because with the Pennsylvania State and Gettysburg games approaching, Lehigh's eleven needs the developing influence of a hard battle. Grumbach will start the game at left guard in place of Ostrump, who was slightly injured yesterday. Otherwise the stonewall line will remain intact. Coach Keady is anxious to see what his newly arranged back field will do. Cahall at quarter back, Maguinnes and Keady half backs, and Halsted, full back, will present the most powerful back field combination that Coach Keady has so far sent into a game.

Rochester to Have "Grad" Manager

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 22.—University of Rochester athletics in the future will be in charge of a graduate manager, the decision to create such a position having been reached by the university council governing body of athletic activities of the college. Captain Frederick W. Helmrichs, President of the council, has announced that the position will be filled as soon as a suitable graduate manager is selected from the list of Rochester graduates recommended for the place. The proposed move is of the greatest interest to Rochester graduates, the need of a graduate manager for all athletics having become more evident as Rochester activities in intercollegiate sport have increased.

Amherst's Signal Drill.

Special to The New York Times.

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 22.—A long signal practice this afternoon ended the Amherst preparations for the Wesleyan game here tomorrow. No changes in the line-up are expected, and the same eleven used all season will start the game. The "no admittance" sign has been up at Pratt Field every day this week, and it is expected that Coach Riley will use some new plays in tomorrow's game.

Columbia Cubs Score a Goal.

Columbia's freshman football team engaged in a practice scrimmage yesterday afternoon with the Horace Mann School eleven on South Field. The Blue and White cubs succeeded in crossing their opponents' goal once, when Dunn, substitute left end, plowed through the line.

Syracuse Off for Providence.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Twenty-four members of the Syracuse University football squad left this afternoon for Providence, R. I., where the Brown University eleven will be played tomorrow afternoon. The Syracuse eleven averages 182 pounds in weight.

STUDENTS NOT 'LIVE STOCK.'

Commerce Commission Decides Against Penn State Men.

STATE COLLEGE, Penn., Oct. 22.—Plans of Pennsylvania State College students to travel as "live stock" to the big football games away from home have been shattered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, it was learned today.

The commission ruled that it was illegal for railroads to transport human beings under the special classification of "live stock."

The students hoped to see the Harvard game next week at Cambridge at a cost of about $7 for railroad fare, whereas the journey in Pullmans would cost them $35.

TEST OF RUSH'S METHODS.

Princeton Coach's Game to be Tried Against Dartmouth Today.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 22.—Finishing off their last bit of training for the Dartmouth game tomorrow with a light practice this afternoon, Princeton awaits the arrival of the big Green team from Hanover tomorrow with no overconfidence but with hope for a victory. Practically all of Coach "Speedy" Rush's men are in good condition and will be able to start the contest tomorrow. The men have been drilled with a hard battle in view so that the Tigers will not be taken unawares by any strength on the part of Dartmouth.

Princeton rooters will be out in force, and a big delegation from out of town is expected to view the results of Rush's first year of coaching in the first big game of the year on Princeton's schedule.

The only name in the line-up that has not appeared in recent games will be that of Halsey at right tackle. The big forward, who was first tried out at guard, but who was unsuited for the position, has shown wonderful development during the past week and Rush has decided to start him in the game. With a wonderful build that should adapt itself to a spectacular game as a rowing tackle of the Ballin type, the actions of Halsey will be watched with much interest tomorrow.

Practice today consisted of defensive work as well as the usual signal practice and kicking drill. From the way it out it seems that Rush is convinced that Dartmouth intends to play a forward passing game tomorrow. For an hour the scrubs tried to get the passes off with the 'Varsity opposing them. No tackling was allowed, but each regular was assigned to cover an opponent and progress was so rapid that soon the scrubs were unable to make a successful toss.

The signal practice was held behind closed gates at the old field, but during the workout a thorough overhauling of all of the Tigers' plays was made. There was considerable attention paid to plays that have not yet been in evidence in public, and Rush evidently expects to be called upon to show something against the Hanoverians.

FORDHAM SEEKS REVENGE.

Bronxites Hope to Wipe Out Holy Cross Victory of 1913.

After waiting two years to avenge the football defeat of 1913, Fordham will clash with Holy Cross at Fordham Field this afternoon in the first big game played on the Bronx gridiron since 1909. That the renewed football relations of the two big Catholic rivals is causing some interest among the old grads is evident from the fact that over three thousand seats have been taken by both alumni bodies, while special arrangements have been made by the New York Central Railroad to make special stops at Fordham Station of trains leaving Grand Central Station at 2:08 and 2:30 o'clock.

The last preliminary practice yesterday saw Fordham still in some doubt as to this afternoon's line-up. After starting its usual drill, Coach Vaughn suddenly ordered the line until the big cannon fence was hurriedly put up around the regular gridiron. The squad was then taken into the inclosure for its first secret drill of the year. In the brief opening workout the line-up was the same as Thursday's, with Benson and Grace still in the places of Kane and Corridon. Corriden was on hand, however, and appeared to have recovered from the banging up he received in the New York University practice game.

In the secret drill there was a brief review of the fundamentals and a hard signal practice. It was followed by a blackboard drill in the dressing room. Following the practice the Maroon undergraduates spent over an hour in the stands practicing cheers for today's game. They were especially jubilant following the announcement that Moncaid would be back at quarter back after an absence of two weeks. It will be his first game this year. As a result Captain Dave Dunn will move back to left half back. Delehanty will start at centre in place of Treanor.

Union Ready for Stevens Tech.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Oct. 22.—In final preparations for the Stevens Tech game tomorrow Union's 'Varsity showed the result of a hard week's practice today. The line displayed more cohesion and drive than has been apparent for two weeks. Wally Girling, Dow Roof, and "Tubby" Rosecrans alternated in the 'Varsity backfield, with Steller, Mallen, and Anderson. Goff, at quarter back, gave way for a few minutes toward the end of practice to Girling, who ran the team with snap and precision. For the first time this year practically all the 'Varsity men are off the hospital list. Roof has recovered from his torn shoulder, Girling's elbow is good once more, and Steller is fit. The presence of many old Union football men on the field this afternoon encouraged the squad. Among them were "Big Bill" Smith, '99; "Pud" Harvey, star half back in 1907; G. Herbert Daley, '92, and Everett Grout.

Queensboro Kennel Club Show.

More than 800 dogs will be benched at Link's Schuetzen Park, Astoria, Long Island, today, where the first annual exhibition of the Queensboro Kennel Club will be held. The entries represent many of the leading kennels in the East, and the show will be one of the largest of the open air match events of the season. Classes have been provided for Boston terrier puppy, dogs and bitches, six months and under, in addition to Japanese spaniels. A number of special prizes have been offered for the various breeds. The show grounds at Astoria are twenty minutes from New York City and can be reached by the Queensboro trolley lines.

Meeting of Dog Lovers.

At the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Dog Lovers' Protective Association of America, which is to be held tonight at the assembly rooms of the Betterment League, 11 East Thirty-fifth Street, President James Gardner Rossman will make an announcement of interest to all dog lovers in New York City. The meeting will be an open one, and all owners of dogs are invited to attend. Mr. Rossman recently had an interview with the Board of Health officials and the representatives of the A. S. P. C. A., and he will announce some interesting facts gathered at these conferences.

HARVARD MAKES SHIFTS IN ELEVEN

Wallace to Play Centre and Parson Left Tackle Against Cornell.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 22.—Today when the Harvard coaches formed their team to go into the Cornell game tomorrow there were three important changes. Three men who played last year were suddenly rushed back into the line-up and, on paper, the Crimson should go against the Ithacans considerably faster than it did against the University of Virginia team a week ago. The first shift made was that of putting Don Wallace back at centre rush, a position which he played well against Yale and Princeton last Fall. Wallace has been keeping in trim all season, but the question of his eligibility was only decided last night. Taylor will be a substitute and probably will play in the second half of the game.

Parson, last year's 'Varsity left tackle, will begin the game tomorrow instead of R. Curtis. Parson, however, will be shifted from the left to the right side of the line, while Gilman, the regular of two years ago, will go over to the right wing. Parson is not in the best condition, but should show speed for at least two periods.

Watson, who was rated as first string quarter back until he became ill, will be put in as the General of the Crimson's forces at the start. He has better judgment than Wilcox, although he is not nearly as brilliant in open field work. He, like Parson and Wallace, will not play throughout the game, but the idea of the coaches is to hold the best conditioned players for the second half, or to rush them into the play early if things go wrong. The backfield against Cornell will be the same that played against Virginia. Whitney will run with King and Mahan, it having been impossible for the trainers to get the heavier backs, McKissock, Emerson, Enright and Horween, in condition for this game. Harvard seems much stronger than it did a week ago. Harvard feels that its team is good enough to win from Cornell, but realizes that it can make no mistakes. The Cambridge team will be outweighed on the rush line, but is well versed on defense and has put on a lot of good plays during the past week, particularly those developing kicks and forward passes.

The Cornell team, confident that it will make the best showing of its career against Harvard in the Stadium tomorrow, arrived in Boston early this morning. This afternoon Coach Al Sharpe brought his players out to Soldiers' Field before the Harvard practice started, and for an hour the Ithacans ran through their plays and practiced kicking and catching punts. The wind about the Harvard stands is always tricky and almost every team that comes here has a lot of trouble to gauge the height and the float of its own kicks as well as those of Harvard. Cornell looked husky enough today, and surely will outweigh the Crimson in the morrow's game. The Cornell coaches believe that they have a fair chance to beat Harvard, but state that in order to do this Cornell must show more football than in any of its earlier games, which have been against weak opponents. The Ithacans are sure that they can score by rushing, but are not so certain that they will be able to stop Harvard's attack, this being something they have been unable to do in any previous game.

P. S. A. L. Rules to Govern.

The adoption of the Public Schools Athletic League eligibility rules for the national interscholastic track and field championships, to be held in connection with the celebration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of Newark, shows the effect that the athletic system of the New York schools has upon interscholastic athletics, and means that the eligibility rules will soon be generally adopted. For some time there has been considerable difference between the athletic rules for high schools in the different cities, but recently the New York P. S. A. L. rules have been adopted in several cities. The championships are to be held in Newark on June 10, and the committee in charge of the meet has received a sanction from the P. S. A. L. The granting of this sanction means that junior events will be open to high school students who have not reached their sixteenth year, and senior events will be open to high school students who have not reached their twenty-first year.

No More October Outdoor Meets.

Fearing that some of the schoolboy athletes of the city might contract sickness at an outdoor meet held when the weather is too cool for athletic attire the Elementary Schools Committee of the Public Schools Athletic League has decided to prohibit all outdoor activities in the future among elementary school athletes after Oct. 1. At the annual Fall track and field championship games of the elementary schools held at Brooklyn Athletic Field on Oct. 9, the air was so chilly that the members of the Games Committee decided that it was too great a risk to take with the health of the youngsters. If it is found impossible to change the date of any of the scheduled meets, the committee favors holding an outdoor meet instead.

High School Swimming Tourney.

Nine high schools have entered teams in the high schools swimming tournament, and the first dual meets will be held on Nov. 15. The tournament will be a round-robin affair, and the swimmers winning will receive the official title of high school swimming champions of the city. The swimming meets will be held weekly from Nov. 15 until Jan. 17. The high schools that have entered teams are Townsend Harris Hall, De Witt Clinton, Commercial, Boys', Stuyvesant, Bay Ridge, Erasmus Hall, Commerce, and Manual Training.

GILMORE ATTACKS JOHNSON.

Takes Exception to Latter's Alleged Remarks About Robert B. Ward.

In a statement issued yesterday at the Federal League offices, James A. Gilmore, President of the league, characterized as false a remark attributed to B. B. Johnson, President of the American League, to the effect that the late Robert B. Ward had told Johnson that he wished to withdraw from the Federals.

The statement which Johnson is said to have made includes what the Federals consider a slur on Mr. Ward, it being said that the Federal League caused his death because "he could not stand the strain of worries and losses." The text of Johnson's remarks in reference to the death of Robert B. Ward is given as follows:

"He was the backbone of the Federal League, and the blow is likely to prove fatal to the organization. I had a talk with him last Spring, at which time it was inferred that he would be glad to get out of the league. I think it is the Federal League that put him under the sod, as he could not stand the strain of worries and losses."

Selling a Pitcher by Force.

"Death Valley" Jim Scott, curve ball wizard of the White Sox, owes his rapid flight from the tall grass to the big top of baseball to Frank Isbell's ambition to "smell like a magnate" after he had purchased an interest in the Wichita Western League club, says The Detroit News Tribune. Isbell and Jack Holland, owner of the St. Joseph Western League club, purchased the Wichita franchise at the end of the season of 1907, while Isbell was still playing first base for Comiskey. When the season was over Issy took the first train to Kansas to look over his new possession. Ned Egan, who broke Isbell into the semi-pro game around St. Paul years before, was piloting the Burlington team in the old Iowa State League, and Issy appealed to him by wire for a tip on a pitcher. "Draft Jim Scott, of Oskaloosa club, Iowa League," was Egan's advice. Scott reported to Wichita at the opening of the next season and was the pitching sensation of the campaign in the Western League. Just before time came for the major league draft to open, Issy burst into Comiskey's office with the announcement:

"I've sold you a pitcher."

"Very well," drawled Commy, "but I can't use him without his name."

"Jim Scott, Wichita, Kan," replied Issy, and the famous curve ball expert has been working continually for the master of the White Sox since the opening of the following season.

Owners May Stop Barnstorming.

President John K. Tener of the National League is attempting to put an end to the barnstorming trips of National League teams by asking the club owner to withdraw the permission which has been granted players to make such trips. The question will come before the National League meeting in December, but until then the only remedy lies with the club owners, and it is anticipated they will take favorable action on President Tener's suggestion. Yesterday, when he was talking with President Baker of the champion Phillies, and the Quaker City baseball man said he would attempt to do something about the matter. The question with regard to the Philadelphia players, he said, had been given for games that were to be played in the vicinity of Philadelphia, and no games were to be played in this city. The Phillies played here last Sunday, and are scheduled to appear again tomorrow, but it may be that the game with the Lincoln Giants will be called off.

Sam Ross Signs with Yankees.

The Yankees' pitching staff for next season was further increased yesterday when Sam Ross sent in a signed contract. He was drafted from the Chattanooga club of the Southern Association. Ross first attracted attention at Jackson, Tenn., where he pitched semi-professional baseball. The Chattanooga club then engaged him, but he soon was farmed out to the Ottawa club of the Canadian League. While pitching for that club he showed indications of being of major league quality. He was recalled to Chattanooga when the season was nearing a close and pitched four games in the Southern Association, three of which he won. Ross pitched 193 innings for the Ottawa club. His opponents scored 75 runs and made 170 hits. He struck out 157 men and gave 43 passes. In the thirty-six games in which Ross took part he scored fifteen victories with only seven defeats.

Amateurs in World's Series.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22.—The South Tacoma (Wash.) Tigers defeated the White Autos of Cleveland, Ohio, here today in the first game in a series of three for the amateur baseball championship of the world, excluding intercollegiate games. The game was closely contested, no runs being scored after the fourth inning, when Tacoma bunched two hits and sent across the decidding run in a 3 to 2 score. Eley, pitching for Tacoma, wabbled in the third inning and the Easterners took full advantage of his temporary lapse. Three hits were turned into two runs. From this point Eley had his opponents at his mercy. Crowley, for Cleveland, pitched a splendid game.

Smith Sues Newark Club.

Harry Smith, former manager of the Newark International Baseball Club, has filed a suit in Newark for $650 against the Newark Baseball and Amusement Company. According to the papers filed, the money represents an alleged unpaid balance on Smith's salary and expense contract for 1913 and 1914. The former manager cites his contract, signed April 20, 1914, as the basis of his suit. Smith is now living in Philadelphia.

White Sox to Train in Florida.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The Chicago American League Club will establish a training camp in Florida next Spring instead of making the annual trip to California. Ocala, half way between Jacksonville and Tampa, it was announced today, probably will be the place chosen for the camp.

Notes for the Boxers.

Many members of the New York Athletic Club will be on hand next Monday night at the Olympic Club of Harlem to see Young Mike Donovan box ten rounds with Cowboy Charlie Shands. This will be Donovan's first appearance in the ring since last Winter. Professor Mike Donovan, who is training his son, will act as his chief adviser. Shands comes from the West with an enviable reputation. Marty Cross, brother of Leach Cross, will oppose Farmer Sullivan of Greenwich Village in the semi-windup.

The Broadway Sporting Club offers as a stellar attraction tonight Leach Cross, the fighting dentist, and Harry Fitzpatrick of Brooklyn. Three six-round contests will precede the main feature. Jimmy Dunn will box Young Jimmy Murray, Sailor Krug will face Willie Barton, and Kid Lewis will test the skill of Young Bruno.

Three ten-round contests and a special bout will complete the bill for the matinee exhibition of the Broadway Sporting Club next Monday. Jack Coyne of Orange, N. J., and Charlie Pappas will be the principals in the special contest, and a lively mixup is expected by the patrons of the club.

Jack Dillon, who has forced recognition from the boxing club promoters, will engage in a ten-round bout with Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, next Monday night at the Broadway Sporting Club. A victory for Dillon will put him in line for a bout with Frank Moran. Solly Woods of Bay Ridge and Young Shaw of Brooklyn will figure in the semi-windup, and Young Pierson and Young Brady will be the principals in the opening contest.

COLUMBIA'S FIRST FOOTBALL IN YEARS

Alumni Come Back to See the Restoration of Sport on South Field.

Football at Columbia will again become a reality today, when a fighting Blue and White eleven will clash with an opponent for the first time since 1905.

The team that will line up against St. Lawrence University this afternoon on South Field at 3 o'clock is not composed of seasoned veterans. Rather, it is an aggregation of inexperienced men, only a few of whom have played football even on their high school teams. At the students' mass meeting yesterday noon Head Coach T. Nelson Metcalf warned the student body not to expect too much, but he promised that a Columbia team with fighting spirit would enter the game today.

Old and young Columbia alumni began to return early in the week for today's event. Many of them wore the Blue and White colors on gridirons nearly a generation ago. Practically all of the alumni associations will attend the game in groups, and several will hold dinners this evening in observance of the occasion.

The practice yesterday afternoon was devoted merey to signals and kicking goals from the field. Miles, quarter back, and Calder, left end, will be called upon for the field goals, and Mansbach will do the punting because of Captain Simonds's absence from the first game. Simonds was in football togs yesterday afternoon for the first time in nearly two weeks, but he will not play this afternoon. Bullwinkel, first string centre, also was on the field in uniform, but his dislocated shoulder will keep him out of the gridiron for at least another week.

Columbia	Position.	St. Lawrence.

DE ORO NEW BILLIARD CHAMPION

DE ORO CAPTURES A BILLIARD TITLE

Cuban Defeats George Slosson in Final Block of Three-Cushion Tourney.

By winning last night's game from George Slosson by a score of 50 to 34, Alfredo De Oro, the three-cushion billiard champion, won the five nights' match between these players at Doyle's Academy for a purse of $500, by a total score of 250 to 206. De Oro was notified yesterday that William Huey of Chicago, the three-cushion champion, had returned the championship emblem and his forfeit of $100, so the title and trophy revert to De Oro, the challenger.

Slosson, in his day the best of balkline cueists, played the balkline game for forty-five years before he took up three cushions seriously. In this match he showed that he was unable to change the delicate stroke of the balkline player to the vigorous drive necessary in the three-cushion game. Last night Slosson had zeros in forty-seven of his seventy-one innings. De Oro finished the match in seventy-two innings, and his high runs were 4, 3, and 3.

De Oro was steadier last night, but never brilliant. He plodded along, making a point or two at a time, and left the balls so widely spread that Slosson missed with regularity. De Oro's best playing was done after the fifty-fifth inning, when he clicked off 10 points in five innings.

De Oro started poorly, while Slosson began to register consistently after half a dozen innings. For a time it looked as if the veteran player was going to gain on his opponent, and he held the lead at the seventeenth inning by a score of 12 to 7. At the twenty-first inning Slosson was but a point ahead, and with a steady run of carroms after the thirty-fourth inning De Oro gained rapidly, and his lead was never threatened. The score by innings:

0 0 1 0 1 0 2 0 1 2 0 6 0 2 0 1 0 0 0 1
2 1 1 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 2 0 0 2 0 1 0 0 2 0 1 0
5 2 1 4 0 0 2 0 0 0 3 1 0 2 0 1—50. Total—250. High runs—4 3 2.

HOPPE RETAINS TITLE.

Yamada Defeated, 1,500 to 1,231, in 14.1 Billiard Match.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—Willie Hoppe tonight successfully defended his title as world's champion 14.1 balkline billiards player. At the end of the third and last block of his challenge match with Koji Yamada, he had scored 1,500 points to his opponent's 1,231. The match went ninety-one innings.

Other Winners with the Cue.

E. Barnes's ability to overcome a handicap was again demonstrated last night, when he defeated L. Friedman in the amateur handicap three-cushion carrom billiard tournament at the Morningside Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue, by the score of 22 to 15. Barnes conceded five points to his opponent, agreeing to score 22 before Friedman could tally 17, and he led throughout, completing his string in forty innings. Barnes had a high run of 4 points, while his opponent's best effort was a run of 3.

G. Gardner displayed excellent form in his game with Dr. H. Stern last night in the amateur handicap three-cushion carrom tournament at the Audubon Billiard Academy, and won by the score of 40 to 29. Stern had 7 points advantage at the start, being called upon to score only 33 points, while Gardner had to tally 40 to win. This the latter did in eighty-one innings, making two runs of 4 points as his highest marks.

Charles Matthews scored another victory in the amateur handicap 18.2 balk-line tournament at the Knickerbocker Academy, in Brooklyn, last night, when he defeated George Spear by the score of 200 to 148. Matthews was playing for 200 points, while Spear required 190 points to win. The former played consistently from the start and maintained the lead, completing his string of 200 points in thirty-two innings. He had high runs of 33, 27, and 22, with an average of 6 8-32. Spear's highest runs were 26, 16, and 14, and he averaged 4 24-31.

PROFESSIONAL BASKET BALL

Six Cities in League Which Will Start Season Next Thursday.

Professional basket ball will be tried in and near the metropolitan district during the coming season by the Interstate Basket Ball League, which is made up of Brooklyn, Kingston, Stamford, Paterson, Jersey City, and Elizabeth. The promoters of the new organization will endeavor to make it as popular as it is in Pennsylvania, upper New York State, and in the Middle West.

A meeting will be held on Monday to draw up the schedule, which is to include forty games for each team, twenty at home and twenty away from home. The season will be opened on the following dates: Oct. 28, Stamford at Jersey City, Paterson at Kingston; Oct. 29, Brooklyn at Paterson; Oct. 30, Elizabeth at Stamford, Kingston at Brooklyn; Nov. 2, Stamford at Paterson; Nov. 3, Jersey City at Elizabeth. The season will close on March 15.

All the best-known professional players available have been engaged and the contracts will be announced at the meeting Monday. The new league will open negotiations with other professional leagues in relation to honoring players' contracts, after the custom practiced in baseball. Among the players will be Henschel, Biggane, Dreyfus, and Clinton of Cohoes, Johnson and Barry of Kingston, Friedman and Sedran of Utica, Bruggy of Gloversville, Beckman and Fuller of Kingston, Streusand of Newburg, Tome of Wilkes-Barre, Wright, Wallum, Ruckert, Schmeelk, and Harvey of Paterson, Barger of Troy, Slawson of McKeesport, Norman of Poughkeepsie, Smith of the South Sides of Pittsburgh, Curlett of the Jaspers of Philadelphia, and Brunner of Utica. The Secretary announced that Brennan, Hill, Shields, and Rean had been appointed referees in the league.

Dundee Wants "Decisions."

Johnny Dundee has requested the State Athletic Commission to adopt the much-discussed rule allowing decisions, the rule to go into effect for the Ritchie-Dundee bout at the Garden on Tuesday night. Dundee points out that a better opportunity could not be afforded for this purpose, as the decision would decide the American lightweight championship and give the winner a clear right to a match with Champion Welsh. There has been a general feeling among the boxing enthusiasts that decisions would meet with much favor if competent referees were appointed by the commission. Both principals in Tuesday night's battle are particularly anxious for a decision on the bout.

Madden and Daly Box a Draw.

Frankie Madden and Knockout Daly boxed ten rounds to a draw as the main attraction last night at the Vanderbilt Athletic Club, in Brooklyn. Madden showed to advantage in the majority of the early rounds, but from the seventh session to the final bell Daly was on the aggressive for the most part of the time and evened up the honors.

In the final bout Phil Franchini and Young Erdy were the principals, and at the last bell the former was entitled to the honors by a wide margin. In the opening ten-round contest Johnny Murray outpointed Red Kilbride by a small margin.

PURIFYING ATHLETICS.

New Registration Committee Aims to Weed Out "Pros."

That more of the intricacies of "inside amateur" athletics, will be uncovered by the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Union before the present wave of reform has spent its energy, is assured by the attitude of the committee on Harry Gissing and Drew Valentine, who have been more or less prominent in track athletics in the past. They were on the Irish-American Athletic Club relay team which competed in the games of the Second Infantry, Company D, at Troy, N. Y., in February of 1912, and it has been intimated by A. A. U. officials that they had some knowledge of the disposition of the $125 which is alleged to have been paid for their appearance.

The Irish-American Athletic Club, through John P. Conway, promised on Thursday night that its stand in the Kiviat case would be known yesterday, but no statement was forthcoming, and will not be until today or Monday. Terence Farley, Chairman of the Irish-American Athletic Committee, declined to comment on the case last night, except to state that a meeting of his committee would be held Monday night. Kiviat's affairs are in the hands of Congressman Murray Hulbert and John T. Dooling, his counsel.

It is known that the club is not entirely satisfied with the action against Kiviat, particularly that part which Justice Bartow S. Weeks was active in, but Justice Weeks maintains that his purpose was his interest in the purity of amateur athletics.

According to a member of the Registration Committee, Kiviat will be asked to return the prizes he won in the games of Lafayette College at South Bethlehem two weeks ago and at the James E. Sullivan memorial fund games at Jersey City last Sunday.

When this trouble first started a champion runner was mentioned as being involved in certain irregularities. A prominent athlete of a rival club assured some friends, however, that the Registration Committee would never "get the goods" on the fellow, for he had an agent who attended to all such matters.

BILLINGS SELLS HIS VANADIS

Big Yacht Now Property of Morton J. Plant of Larchmont Y. C.

Yachtsmen agree that the many purchases and sales of large steam yachts in the fleet of the New York Yacht Club as well as other clubs recently indicate a renewal of national interest in yachting, giving promise of an active season in 1916.

Out of the half a hundred large yachts that have changed ownership since the close of last season perhaps the most important was the sale, through Cox & Stevens, of C. K. G. Billings's big steam yacht Vanadis to Morton J. Plant, former commodore of the Larchmont Yacht Club, owner of the famous racing schooner Elena and the twin screw steam yacht Kanawha—fastest of her size afloat.

It was reported, in September, that Billings and Plant had traded their yachts, Plant paying something to boot for the Vanadis, which is a larger yacht. However, Borden of Chicago was the purchaser of the Kanawha. He intends to use her to cruise in the Pacific. The Kanawha measures 227 feet over all; 192 feet water line, 24 feet 6 inches beam, and 10 feet draft.

The Vanadis, built in Glasgow in 1908, is 277 feet over all, 232 feet 7 inches water line, 32 feet 8 inches beam, and 14 feet draft. Her machinery is a combination of turbine and reciprocating engines. She is also equipped with wireless apparatus. Commodore Plant also expects to cruise to the Pacific in the Vanadis.

Among other large steam yachts recently sold through the same firm is the Columbia. She was sold to a member of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club for J. H. Ladew. The Columbia, which is 196 feet over all, 185 feet water line, was originally fitted out for quick conversion into a gunboat. Commodore Isaac E. Emerson of Baltimore has chartered his steam yacht Margaret to a New York yachtsman, and the 200-foot steam yacht Surf, owned by J. H. Hanan, has been chartered to H. S. Black of the New York Yacht Club. George S. Runk of the same club has sold his 117-foot steam yacht Isabella to George H. Macy, who has changed her name to Kasha.

Gravesend Y. C. Elects Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Gravesend Bay Yacht Club the following officers were elected: Thomas C. Cardwell, Commodore; H. A. Guilmard, Vice Commodore; George W. Roff, Rear Commodore; J. Metcalf, Treasurer; F. C. Kengeter, Secretary; C. Myck, Measurer. A. L. Madison, William C. Lindner, Jr., and Charles Hollinshed, Board of Governors. J. G. Callahan and William Heinsen, Auditing Committee, and H. Jacobson, P. H. Teller, and F. H. Popkin, Membership Committee.

WILLIAMS TO DROP TRINITY.

To Sever Athletic Relations Because of Alleged Professionalism.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Oct. 2.—The Williams College Athletic Council tonight voted to sever athletic relations with Trinity College after the annual game between the football teams of the two institutions tomorrow. The presence on the Trinity team in the games already played this season of George Brickley, who has been a member of the Philadelphia Athletics and the Lawrence (New England League) baseball clubs, and the insistence of Trinity officials that Brickley should play tomorrow, were given as the reasons for the break. Brickley is a brother of Charles Brickley, former Captain of the Harvard University football eleven and now football coach at Johns Hopkins University.

Find a Willard Among Amateurs?

A young giant, the equal in size of Jess Willard, if not in boxing ability, has been discovered in the amateur ranks, and will show his skill for the first time in New York at the tournament for the Sullivan Memorial Fund at the New York Athletic Club and Crescent Athletic Club next Friday and Saturday nights. He is George Wessler, a twenty-one-year-old lad, who weighs 232 pounds and is 6 feet 5¼ inches tall. Wessler is a mechanic employed at a local university, and was discovered by Jake Webber, the New York Athletic Club masseur, and Homer Baker, the Mercury Foot middle distance runner. Each will claim the credit for Wessler's entry into the "manly art" should he succeed in winning a trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which is the reward to the winners in the Memorial Tournament. Webber has seldom failed to pick a winner, and he gets much of the credit attached to the success of Homer Baker on the cinder path. A meeting of the committee in charge of this tourney will be held at 21 Warren Street Monday night, at which time the apportionment of the classes between the New York Athletic Club and Crescent Athletic Club will be made. Entries will not close until the following night, with Frederick W. Rubien, Amateur Athletic Union Secretary-Treasurer.

Quaker Ridge C. C. to Reorganize.

At a meeting of the Quaker Ridge Country Club near Larchmont in Westchester County, held last night, a committee was appointed to reorganize the club. A membership, limited to 300 men is planned. The club has decided to take over the stock of the holding company, which was organized when the construction of the new golf course was commenced last Spring. The first nine holes of the course have been built, and the work on the second nine holes is now under way. The committee which will reorganize the club include W. J. Baird, Herbert Hipwell, T. Shea, Donald Rose, Dr. Charles Walker, A. J. Dittmore, and O. Raynor.

Sportsmen's Show Next Year.

The promoters of the original Sportsmen's Show have decided to revive the old show as it was held in Madison Square Garden years ago. The first of the original Sportsmen's Shows was held May 13 to 18, 1895. This exposition was organized by Captain J. A. H. Dressel, who with Allen S. Williams will hold another "real" Sportsmen's Show next March, from the 15th to the 22d, in Madison Square Garden.

RECORDS MAY FALL IN FOOT RACES TODAY

Provided weather conditions are as favorable today as they were yesterday, two new American records are expected to be established in the seven-mile walk and ten-mile run championships of the Amateur Athletic Union, which will be contested at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J. A record entry has been received for these events. George Goulding, the Canadian, who is regarded as the best of all amateur pedestrians and holds the Olympic championship, has assured the committee in charge of the games that he will compete at New Brunswick today, with his clubmate, E. C. Freeman, of the Toronto Central Walkers' Club.

Goulding, in a letter received by Lester Stevens, A. A. U. Commissioner for New Brunswick, stated that he was in his form, and would endeavor to shatter the American record for seven miles, 54:07, made twenty-five years ago by E. E. Merrill in Boston. The Canadian title holder has never competed in an American championship event at seven miles, and will have his first opportunity of beating Merrill's figures. The world's record of 50:54 4-5, made by George Larner, the English policeman, at Brighton, England, in 1905 is considered a little beyond the ability of Goulding at this time.

The Canadian's chief rival will be the American champion, Eddie Renz, of the Mohawk A. C., and, though undoubtedly the best heel and toe exponent in this country, Renz is not expected to cause Goulding much trouble.

Hannes Kolehmainen probably will have as much difficulty retaining his ten-mile honors as Goulding will in winning the seven-mile walk. The Finn, who has been eager to annex the fifteen-mile American record since he lost the mark through the failure of the Irish-American Club to measure its track at Celtic Park this year to conform with the International Federation rules, will go after new figures today. After completing the ten-mile championship race he will continue running for five miles more, in the hope of bettering Jim Crowley's fifteen-mile record of 1:25:15.

Gaston Strobino, New York A. C.; Willie Kyronen, and Nick Gianakopulos, Millrose A. A., are Kolehmainen's most dangerous rivals, but they appear outclassed by the Finlanders.

A series of limited handicap field events have been arranged by the Johnson & Johnson A. A., which is conducting the championships, and some of the best jumpers and weight throwers in the country will be seen in action. Among them will be Pat Ryan, Pat McDonald, Mel McGrath, Jim Duncan, Pat O'Connor, C. C. Lincoln, Jr., Egon Erickson, Tim Ahearne, and Dave Politzer.

High School Indoor Meets.

Many of the high schools of the city have made plans for their annual indoor games, and this promises to be one of their busiest seasons. The annual Sauyvesant High School indoor games will be held on Dec. 18 at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, and the Manual Training games will be held at the Fourteenth Regiment Armory on Dec. 30. The St. John's College games will be held in the Thirteenth Regiment Armory on Jan. 15, and Poly Prep will hold a set of indoor games in the Fourteenth Regiment Armory on Jan. 22. The annual games of the Dickinson High School of Jersey City, which is one of the biggest scholastic events of the year in New Jersey, will be held on the afternoon of Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, in the Fourth Regiment Armory in Jersey City. The Barnard School games are to take place in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory on March 4, and on March 11 in the same armory the annual indoor games of the Hamilton Institute are scheduled to be held. The John Wanamaker Institute games are scheduled for March 18 at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory. On either March 3 or 10 the high school swimming championships will be held at the natatorium of the College of the City of New York.

McCracken Leads Runners.

G. L. McCracken, a freshman, won the first of the series of five Van Amringe cross-country runs yesterday on the Columbia University course. His handicap was 2 minutes, but his corrected time was 31 seconds better than that of his nearest competitor. The next of the series will be held next Friday over the three-and-three-quarter-mile course. The runners finished as follows:

	Handicap.	Corrected Time.
G. L. McCracken, 1919	2:00	20:39
H. C. Caldwell, 1919	1:30	21:10

FISH AND GAME NOTES.

All of the salt water fish in local waters are now taking the hook. The following is a reminder of what species are biting and the bait and hooks to use in catching them:

Blackfish: Bait, fiddlers and clams; hooks, No. 6 to 8 Virginia or blackfish. Codfish: Skimmer clam, herring; hooks, No. 7-0 to 8-0 Limerick or Kirby. Tomcod: Bait, sand worms; hooks, No. 8 to 9 Chesterdown. Whiting: Bait, Skimmer clams; hooks, No. 4-0 to 5-0 Sproat or Limerick. Flounders: Bait, sand and bloodworms; hooks, No. 8 to 9 Chesterdown. Smelt: Bait, bloodworms; hooks, No. 8 Carlisle or Chesterdown. Ling: Bait, skimmer clam; hooks, No. 5-0 Sproat or Limerick. Striped bass: Bait, bloodworms and shedder crabs; hooks, No. 1½ Sproat for river; for surf, No. 6-0 O'Shaughnessy. Hake: Bait, Skimmer clams and crabs; hooks, No. 5-0 Sproat or Limerick. Eels: Bait, sand and bloodworms; hooks, No. 9 Chesterdown and No. 8 Sproat.

Nearly 200 anglers made a trip to Split Rock Pond, the private fish and game preserve of the Newark Bait and Fly Casting Club, last week, to take part in the annual fly casting and trap shooting competitions. The trap shooting events required two shoot-offs before the winner was determined. The event was a ten bird shoot in relays of five targets. The winners were G. Jackiltsch, 8 targets; W. A. Dube, 7; G. Thayer, 6. In the casting competition Charles Champion made the longest throw. A. J. Marsh was second, and B. J. Muldoon was third.

One of the largest channel bass caught along the Jersey coast this season was landed at Barnegat Inlet last Thursday by T. A. Everett. It weighed sixty-one and a quarter pounds, only two pounds less than the record fish, taken three years ago by Joseph Cawthorne.

William J. Hooper, fishing from one of the inlet boats at Atlantic City, caught a sheepshead weighing eight pounds. It was the first of this rare species of food fish to be caught on the oyster beds in five years.

Cod fishing will be good soon. Cod have already been caught near Boston, and will appear at the Cholera Banks next. Several have already been caught by the fishermen on the party boats from Sheepshead Bay.

Joseph Bush and John Tynan fished the Shrewsbury River, N. J., last week for striped bass, catching eight in three days, the largest of which weighed five and a quarter pounds. Bush's largest bass weighed four pounds and three ounces.

The fishermen out Sunday from the Green House at Bayside, L. I., brought in average catches of from 75 to 150 flounders and tomcods to a man. A number of boats went out to the Stepping Stones light in the Sound, where some good catches of blackfish and flounders were made.

A three and a half pound small mouth black bass was caught last Wednesday by James Gillespie, at Greenwood Lake, N. J.

Phil Coffin reports that English snipe are plentiful in the Great Force Meadows, N. J. He was out there recently and shot six in a short time.

Frank Walsh returned Saturday from a two-weeks' hare hunting trip at Calicoon Creek, Sullivan County. He brought with him fifty pairs of large rabbits.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Pressure is still moderately low in the South Atlantic States, and there were more rains in that section, but over the remainder of the country the weather was generally clear, with moderately high pressure over the interior districts. It is considerably cooler in the Atlantic States and slightly cooler in the north upper lake region, the Gulf States, and the Far West. Elsewhere temperatures are much above the seasonal average, as a rule, especially so in the Northwest. Havre, Mon., reporting the highest October temperature of record.

Except for scattered rains Saturday in the South Atlantic States, the weather will be generally fair Saturday and Sunday east of the Mississippi River, without decided changes in temperature, although it will be somewhat warmer Saturday in the upper lake region and the Ohio Valley.

Winds for Saturday and Sunday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate northwest; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate northwest and north; South Atlantic Coast, moderate north, except east and south; east off the Florida Coast.

FORECASTS TODAY AND SUNDAY.

New York, New Jersey, New England, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Saturday and Sunday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

Munitions Stocks Make Further Gains—Foreign Exchange Rates Slump Badly.

All semblance of restraint on speculation seemed to have been removed at the opening yesterday morning, when many of the industrial issues which have engrossed the attention of the speculative element opened with large overnight advances, and moved on up to new high records. The most spectacular performer was, of course, Bethlehem Steel, which sold up 12 points, to 600, at the opening, but Baldwin Locomotive was a close second. There was this difference in the two war stocks, that, whereas Bethlehem was relatively inactive and sold off 25 points at the close, Baldwin was in great demand and ended the session with a net gain of 16⅝, and within a little more than a point of the highest price ever touched.

Such an excited opening, which resulted in transactions totaling 346,000 shares in the first hour, naturally awoke many of the old rumors on which the specialties had been put up. The motor issues made early gains, which were not all maintained, although Maxwell Motors common closed the day at 70, a net gain of 3¼. Studebaker was unusually active, and sold up to 10⁰, but subsequently lost 5 points of this. United States Industrial Alcohol and Distillers both continued their gains, the former adding 5½ points to its price on Thursday.

The railroads were in somewhat better light yesterday, but contributed only a small share to the trading. Reading, Pennsylvania, Norfolk & Western, New Haven, and Union Pacific, all benefited by the improvement in Fall traffic figures. The argument that the railroads are short of equipment, and will not be able to handle the amount of business that is expected to come upon them next month, is met by the statement that the better railroads are making much more efficient use of their rolling stock, which means along with heavier trainloads better net earnings.

The weekly trade reviews were very favorable in spite of the temporary setback to retail trade due to the milder weather. Dun's reports that evidence of widening activity is now apparent in nearly every important department, even in localities where no sign of recovery was manifest a short time ago. Bradstreet's emphasized the fact, well known in the wholesale trade, that the general buying movement now on is accompanied by insistent demands for prompt shipments, showing that stocks on shelves have been greatly reduced.

It begins to look as though the pending negotiations for banking credits between this city and London will be altered by the increasing evidence of the need for larger amounts than had been considered. Demand sterling yesterday sold down to $4.64½, representing a drop of 2½c. from Thursday's lowest figure. The weakness was due to growing recognition in this country of the meaning of the tremendous exports now going out. Large amounts of munitions ordered here months ago are now beginning to show in the trade figures.

LONDON MARKET ACTIVE.

Money and Discount Rates Firm—American Exchange Weak.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Money and discount rates were firm today.

American exchange was weak. Cable transfers opencd at 4.67⅝ and fell to 4.66⅜. No reason was attributed for the decline beyond the continued absence of a statement of how the allied funds are to be applied. Petrograd exchange eased two points to 248½ on rumors that the Russian credit arrangements are proceeding satisfactorily.

Interest in the war loan subsided on the Stock Exchange, probably on account of the holiday tomorrow. The feature of the trading was a spurt in Brazilian issues on the improved financial outlook. Mexican shares were in good demand and Kaffirs were better on the election results. International Mercantile Marine preferred was strong and advanced eleven points.

American securities were quietly firm with the decline in exchange rates.

TO PAY BANK CREDITORS.

Depositors of Carnegie Trust Company to Get 5% Dividend.

State Superintendent of Banks Richards applied yesterday to the Supreme Court for authority for the payment of an additional 5 per cent. dividend to the depositors of the Carnegie Trust Company. It was announced that sufficient funds were available to pay a 10 per cent. dividend. Litigation instituted by Jacques Lebaudy, the "Emperor of Sahara," however, will restrain Superintendent Richards from disbursing the full 10 per cent. at this time.

Application was also made for authority to pay an additional 5 per cent. to the stockholders of the Northern Bank. They have already received 60 per cent. In the near future, it was announced at the State Banking Department, the Superintendent hopes to pay an additional 10 per cent. to the shareholders of the Industrial Savings and Loan Company, making a total of 35 per cent.; a 21 per cent. dividend to the bondholders, and a 7 per cent. dividend to the general creditors of the New York Mortgage Company, an institution having already paid a 12 per cent. dividend; 15 per cent. dividend to the depositors of Deutsch Bros., private bankers, a 20 per cent. dividend having already been paid in this liquidation, and an additional 5 per cent., making a total of 20 per cent., to the depositors of L. W. Schwenk, also a private banker.

COTTON IN REACTION GAINS FIVE POINTS

Liquidation Toward the Close Causes Setback of Earlier Advances.

GENERAL OPINION BEARISH

Trade Interests Furnish Chief Demand, and Spinners' Purchases Fix Prices.

There was an upward reaction in cotton yesterday, but a setback toward the close on liquidation reduced the gain and left prices only about 5 points net higher.

Sentiment throughout the trade is more or less confused, but the general opinion is somewhat bearish. Southern spot markets show little sympathy with the break in contracts and the buying basis is now the highest of the season.

Aside from short covering the chief demand yesterday appeared to come from trade interests. Spinners fixed the price of a good deal of cotton and their purchases were on a safer scale than they have been for a long time.

According to the New York Cotton Exchange the into-sight for the week was 478,288 bales against 475,624 last year. The total for the season is 3,024,000, against 2,138,000 last year.

The market is now in a fairly well liquidated condition. It is estimated that the break of Thursday and yesterday resulted in throwing overboard about 150,000 bales of long cotton.

The strength of Southern spots continues to be a feature. Augusta, Ga., reported quotations 38 points higher on sales of more than 2,000 bales.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were quiet and unchanged. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, with an advance of 5 points; middling, 12.45c. Futures closed steady.

Wabash-Pittsburgh Bondholders Blame Directors for Stock Issue.

Minority first mortgage bondholders of the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railway, represented by the protective committee, of which Daniel B. Ely is Chairman, are urging the adoption of a new reorganization plan as a substitute for the plan of the Reorganization Committee, of which James N. Wallace is Chairman. The new plan is virtually the same as that proposed for the rehabilitation of the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railway by Mr. Ely in 1913.

Under this plan it is proposed to consolidate the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railway with the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad and to operate the two roads under one charter. It is proposed to raise about $17,000,000 by assessing both the stockholders of the Wheeling & Lake Erie and the first mortgage bondholders of the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal. Those paying the assessment would receive prior claim certificates, and the first mortgage claims would thus remain intact until these prior claims had been paid off. The $17,000,000 would suffice to pay receivers' certificates and other claims and to buy in the property. It is proposed further to issue $30,000,000 long-term refunding bonds on the consolidated property, and a part of the proceeds would be used to repay the assessment. As outlined in the Ely plan it is estimated that the consolidated company, on a normal basis, should earn at least $900,000 above charges annually.

In a circular sent to first mortgage bondholders yesterday the Ely Committee suggests the advisability of bringing suit against former Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railway Directors for issuing $10,000,000 in stock in exchange for the same amount of stock of the Wabash Railroad. It is contended that this issue of stock was not warranted. It is also contended that $20,000,000 second mortgage bonds were authorized and sold by the Directors at a price below the legal limit. Other suits against the old management of the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Road are now pending in the Ohio Circuit Court, and it is proposed to take these suits to the United States Supreme Court if adverse decisions are handed up. It is also contemplated, according to the circular, to ask for the removal of the present receivers.

"The value of the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal properties," says the circular, "is fully appreciated by the Wabash interests, who are without doubt waiting to take over the properties at their own price, should the bondholders of the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railway and the stockholders of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad fail to organize to protect their interests."

The Wallace reorganization plan under attack provides for the rehabilitation only of the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Road. It calls for an assessment of $9,000,000, and the reorganized company would have no new bond issue.

NEW WABASH CHARTER FILED

Reorganized Railroad Company Has a Capital of $143,460,000.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 22.—A charter for a new Wabash Railroad Company, the purpose of which is to take over all the Wabash Railroad property now in the hands of receivers, was filed with the Secretary of State here today. The capital stock of the new company was placed at $143,460,000, and a fee of $143,460 was paid to the State.

The stock in the new company is divided as follows: 462,000 shares of 5 per cent. profit sharing preferred; 499,700 shares of 5 per cent. convertible preferred, and 472,900 shares of common stock. The par value of the shares is $100 each.

Those named as directors in the charter are Samuel Armstrong, H. Bruce Campbell, Robert Goelet, Lawrence Greer, Edward F. Kearney, W. C. Maxwell, George W. Murray, Robert H. Neilson, John C. Otteson, Winslow S. Pierce, Lyman Rhoades, William V. Stuart, James E. Taussig, Allison E. Stuart and Henry Rogers Winthrop.

Edward F. Kearney of St. Louis was elected President of the new company, and Winslow S. Pierce of New York was elected Chairman of its Board of Directors. Mr. Kearney was President of the old Wabash Railroad and was a co-receiver of the property.

STERLING EXCHANGE HAS SEVERE BREAK

Value of English Pound Drops to $4.64½, About 4 Cents Under Monday's High Level.

DUE TO EXCESS OF EXPORTS

Institutions Meeting Foreign Bills Bought at Lower Rates and Are Lending Money In London.

Notwithstanding the influence of the Anglo-French loan and the expectations of additional credits for England and France amounting to many millions, foreign exchange rates broke rather sharply yesterday. Demand sterling sold as low as $4.64½, a decline for the session of 2¾ cents to the pound, from the highest level of Thursday. At this figure sight bills were quoted more than 4 cents to the pound under Monday's best price. The rate hardened slightly toward the close of business, but the final quotation stood no higher than a quarter cent above the lowest.

Franc checks at 5.92¼ when the market closed were 2 centimes lower than Thursday night, and Italian lire at 6.42 showed a recession of three-hundredths to the dollar. Reichsmarks were unchanged, and Swiss exchange displayed a slight improvement.

The decline, according to exchange brokers, represented nothing more than an acceleration of the retreating movement in evidence for ten days. The need for remittances abroad is light, and while the supply of exchange this made from day to day is not large, it is great enough to cause prices to lose ground. One reason offered for the prevailing small demand for exchange is that institutions with payments to make in Europe in November and December anticipated their wants earlier in the Fall, when rates were low. The funds provided for in exchange bought then were lent in London, where a 3 per cent. call money rate has offered an advantage of lenders, inasmuch as the New York rate has been 2 per cent., or under. The money lent has been under terms providing for a return to the lenders before their own requirements had to be filled.

At the same time that buying of exchange has been on a small scale for the purpose of sending funds across the sea, Europe's purchases here have been on an increasing scale, adding to the one-sided state of the exchange market. Gold to the amount of about $30,000,000 has been received from Canada this week and more is coming, but this movement is not extensive enough to have a material effect on the exchange market. It is expected that $25,000,000 will come in from Ottawa in a single shipment early next week, a transfer that was postponed this week because of the congested state of the Assay Office.

The coin is melted into bars, and sent to the different points of the United States coin. All available facilities at the Assay Office smelter have been engaged in disposing of the $23,500,000 received a few days ago, and the storage room for the boxes of gold has been too crowded to admit of further receipts for the time being, except for the comparatively small amounts brought in direct from London by this week's steamers.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

Seldom have the weekly trade reviews found prospects for business in this country so favorable as at this time. Dun's Review will say today:

Even the change to milder weather did not materially lessen retail demands, and there are still many more points of gain than of loss in the general situation. This fact is made clear in reports from the principal centres, as well as by the various statistical gauges that measure business movements and volumes. Bank clearings outside of New York largely surpass those of recent years, gross railroad earnings are steadily rising, the upward trend of commodity prices is unchecked, and the increase in commercial borrowing gives additional proof of trade expansion. Evidence of widening activity is apparent in nearly every important department, and in localities where no sign of it was manifest a short time ago. Progress is more rapid, as it should be, in the industrial than in the trading field, and is most pronounced at cities where the manufacture of war supplies is now the leading occupation.

Bradstreet's reports:

In the larger lines cumulative expansion is the chief characteristic; retail merchants show a stronger propensity to buy ahead; the steel trade goes on making ground; prices on some finished products have been advanced, partly to keep buying within certain bounds; the long-predicted scarcity of railway cars is an actual fact; a paucity of labor exists; pay rolls are enlarging; weekly bank clearings are of unparalleled proportions; demand for money, the supply of which is plethoric at easy rates, is increasing; exports of wheat and flour reduced to wheat for the current week establish a new high record; export trade continues unprecedented; meritorious new enterprises are being launched more readily; real estate, long dormant, is reviving; farmers in the South, having had their forebodings dispelled by good prices for cotton and its products, are paying off old debts, and, except in the lumber-producing sections of the Northwest (outside of the mining regions), growth is evidenced.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

After months of delay Winter wheat is beginning to move in larger volume, and offerings from that source, coupled with the tremendous movement in the Spring wheat States, has brought about more pressure than even the active domestic demand can absorb, and prices in the wheat market yesterday showed a further loss of 2@3 cents, making an almost perpendicular drop during the past week of 5@6c. In the local cash market No. 1 Northern Duluth was quoted at $1.04 and No. 1 Northern Manitoba $1.05, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER—Receipts yesterday, 8,866 packages. A little more speculative buying of high-grade creamery, and the market is firm and slightly higher. Medium and low grades also continue firm, with moderate offerings of fresh creamery under 26c. Other descriptions unchanged. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) 28¼c; higher scoring, 28¾@29¼c; firsts, 27@28c; seconds, 25@26½c; thirds, 23½@24c; State dairy, finest, 25c; good to prime, 26½@27½c; common to fair, 23@25½c; renovated extras, 24½@25c; firsts, 23½@24c; lower grades, 22@23c; imitation creamery, firsts, 23@24c; ladles, current make, firsts, 22@22½c; seconds, 21@21½c; lower grades, 19½@20½c; packing stock, June make, fine, 21; current make, fine, 20½@21c; current make, No. 2, 20c; lower grades, 18@19½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 5,660 cases. Receipts light. Strictly fancy qualities scarce and firm. Medium and lower grades continue extremely irregular, but with a gradual reduction of accumulations under sales at comparatively easy prices. Storage eggs quiet and barely steady. Near-by whites in light supply and fancy new laid qualities firm. PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was less active and operations were confined principally to the January position. Hogs were lower, and the trade seemed disposed to liquidate, and as a result prices developed an easier feeling and closed barely steady. Receipts of hogs at Western points aggregated 56,000, of which Chicago reported 14,000, Kansas City 3,000, and Omaha 1,300. Estimated receipts at Chicago for Saturday were 7,000 hogs.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

The market on the Consolidated Exchange generally displayed strength, but there was a degree of irregularity noticeable at the close. There were special upward movements in a number of "war stocks," particularly Baldwin Locomotive, in which a considerable degree of activity was maintained. United States Steel was firm, but the movements in the specialities were the overshadowing feature of the market.

GIRLS LEFT IN ROAD AFTER AUTO SMASH

Two Men Desert Companions, Both Injured, on Staten Island Driveway.

POLICE SEARCH FOR THEM

Leaving their two girl companions injured, lying in the Old Stone Road, Butchersville, S. I., last night two youths left the scene as fast as their legs could carry them. According to the girls, Miss Ruth Booth, 17 years old, 16 Union Street, West Brighton, and Miss Elsie Kress, 18 years old, 72 Manor Road, West Brighton, the young men were Adrian Duffie, 21 years old, of 1,686 Richmond Terrace, who was driving his father's automobile, and Andrew Olsen, the same age, who lives on Bergen Avenue, West Brighton. Miss Booth is in St. Vincent's Hospital suffering from a fractured right arm and Miss Kress with a broken rib.

The girls said that with the two young men they were driving westward on the Old Stone Road when they passed an auto truck. Duffie was at the wheel. In some way, they said, the car swerved and ran into the truck. The automobile was turned upon its side, and all but Duffie, who clung to the steering gear, were thrown to the road. Patrolman Michael Kennedy, who came along on his motorcycle, almost immediately after the accident, found the girls beside the overturned automobile. He sent for an ambulance and the girls were removed to the hospital. The truck was owned by George Vorgeetede of 5,464 Old Stone Road.

Last March young Duffie figured in an automobile accident on Staten Island in which Florence Murphy, 20 years old, of Theresa Place, Brighton Heights, lost her life. Duffie was charged with reckless driving at the time, his car having run into a telegraph pole, but the case was dismissed.

George Kress, the father of Elsie Kress, said last night that his daughter had been warned not to go driving with young Duffie. He said that on the night of the accident last March his daughter had been invited with the party which came to grief, but that her mother had not permitted her to go.

She is studying stenography at a business school in West Brighton, where Duffie called for her in his father's car last night. Mr. Kress said that the girl had gone for a ride with Duffie yesterday, and that he had warned her that there would be trouble if she ever did so again. Thursday night he tried to get Duffie's father, Daniel P. Duffie, on the phone, in order to ask him to forbid his son to take the girl out. He was not able to reach him, he said.

When the girl did not come home for supper last night Mrs. Kress called up the business school and learned that she had again gone with Duffie. The first news that she received that her daughter had been in the automobile accident was a telephone message from a friend who lived not far from the scene of the accident.

BESIEGED BY POLAR BEARS.

Canadians Marooned on Ice Fought Off Two Dozen Beasts.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 22.—A. T. Fleming, in charge of a Canadian Government expedition to Hudson Bay to establish wireless stations, returned today and told a thrilling story of a fight which he and five of his men had with two dozen polar bears.

The men lost their way in a snowstorm and found themselves on an ice floe. To their horror they found it tenanted by bears. The men climbed to the top of the berg, where they remained all night, with the bears prowling around and trying to dislodge them. There was only one gun in the party, but with it they killed one bear and wounded others. In the morning the bears went away. After two days on the ice without food the men were rescued by their comrades.

PLANNED JAIL DELIVERY.

Canada Discovers Plot to Free Prisoner in Windsor Dynamite Case.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Oct. 22.—Fearing an attempt would be made to liberate Charles Respa of Detroit from the Sandwich jail, where he was being held on a charge of complicity in the Windsor dynamite plots, Canadian Secret Service officers have spirited the prisoner to another prison, the location of which has not been revealed, it was learned today.

A plot in which several New Yorkers were implicated was discovered in September by the Dominion secret service authorities, and since that time the alleged conspirators have been under surveillance. It was learned that the conspirators planned to liberate Respa and carry him across the border.

Gov. Harmon says the alleged conspirators have been trailed about the United States from New York and the details of their scheme learned by the Canadian authorities. They were to gather in Detroit and row across the river to Windsor.

HELD AS SUBWAY ANNOYER.

Girl Calls for Help and Guard Summons a Policeman.

A man who said he was Louis Unterman of 529 West 133d Street, a process server in the District Attorney's office, was arraigned before Magistrate Ten Eyck in the Men's Night Court last night. He was accused by Miss Minnie Siegrist, Secretary of the Redpath Bureau in Aeolian Hall, who lives at 2,829 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, of having insulted her in a subway train last night.

Miss Siegrist asserted that Unterman annoyed her all the way from Ninety-sixth to 110th Street, and that she was unable to get rid of him. At 116th Street she called for help and the man was seized by two passengers while a guard summoned a policeman.

Unterman said he was a married man, with four children, and that when he entered the train Miss Siegrist stepped on his foot and refused to move. He was held in $500 bail for Special Sessions.

GEM THIEF PLEADS GUILTY.

Young Electrician Stole Jewelry Worth $5,000 in the Bronx.

Pleading guilty to the theft of jewelry valued at $5,000 from the home of William Whitten, Chief Superintendent of the American Express Company, at 851 East 194th Street, Joseph Santamaria, 19 years old, an electrician of 2,195 Belmont Avenue, the Bronx, was held in $2,000 bail yesterday to await the action of the Grand Jury by Magistrate Levy in West Farms Court.

According to Detectives Caso and Bonano, Santamaria confessed to taking the gems from the Whitten home, where he had been sent in the course of his employment. Some of the jewelry was found in a sewer in Riverhead, in pawnshops, and under a stone in a vacant lot. Other jewelry not belonging to the Whittens was also found, the police say.

Evelyn Thaw's Chauffeur Fined.

Carl Fitch of 1,007 Park Avenue, chauffeur for Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, was fined $25 by Magistrate Deuel in Jefferson Market Court yesterday for speeding on Fifth Avenue, between Eighteenth and Twentieth Streets, on Oct. 20. Mrs. Thaw and two men were in the car. John Emerson, stage director, living at The Lambs, was fined $25 for speeding.

NO HIGH TARIFF ON DYES.

Dr. Pratt's Statement Thought to Reflect the President's Attitude.

Dr. Edward Ewing Pratt, Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, as spokesman for the Administration, outlined last night at a meeting of the New York section of the Society of Chemical Industry at the Chemists' Club the character of the legislation to be asked from Congress at the approaching session for the protection of the American chemical and dyestuff industries. While making it plain that, as announced recently by Secretary Redfield, the authorities in Washington would favor an anti-dumping and unfair practices law, Dr. Pratt gave little comfort to those in favor of a higher tariff on imported dyestuffs. He was understood to reflect the attitude of President Wilson and his advisers when he made the statement that "the tariff question can be left out of our discussion."

Dr. Thomas H. Norton gave it as his view that protection to a growing domestic color industry would undoubtedly result from the establishment of a Bureau of Standards for Dyestuffs.

The famine in dyestuffs as it affects the woolen industry was described by John P. Wood, President of the National Association of Woolen Manufacturers.

J. Merritt Mathews argued that the Government in the interest of preparedness for war should see that a suitable line of coal tar intermediates was manufactured in this country free from foreign affiliations or control, since many of these are required for explosives and for other military use.

TRAIN POLICE FOR WAR.

Woods Fitting Force to Deal with "Great Emergencies."

How members of the Police Department are being trained in preparedness is told by Commissioner Woods in a report of the department for the third quarter, made public yesterday, in which he said:

"The committee is engaged in developing a plan to enable the police to cope with any great emergency which might arise in this city, and to aid the police on such occasions they have collected information and data concerning power houses, reservoirs, hospitals, and large buildings for shelter, railroad, steamship and automobile facilities, munition stores, and aeroplane owners.

"Skeleton orders have been prepared to provide for the detail of any number of the force to any given point in case of an emergency. A plan of auxiliary signals and communication has been made, and members of the force are practicing in the transmission of messages. Officers who are assigned to study and instruction at the United States Army camp at Plattsburg have made careful notes, particular attention being paid to commissary and Quartermaster details. Plans for field bakeries are also being worked out, and professional and business men who may aid the department with their special knowledge, covering a wide field of activity, have been listed for emergency work."

WON'T CUT FIREMEN'S PAY.

Budget Committee Ignores Recommendation of Sub-Committee.

The Budget Committee of the Board of Estimate has decided not to reduce the salary of Fire Chief John Kenlon from $10,000 to $7,000 and that of Deputy Chief Thomas Lally of Brooklyn from $7,500 to $6,000, as was recommended by the sub-committee of the Budget Committee.

The sub-committee also recommended that the salaries of 301 Captains in the Fire Department be reduced from $2,500 to $2,160, the salaries of 419 Lieutenants from $2,100 to $1,800, and the salaries of 300 fourth-grade firemen from $1,000 to $800, but the main committee decided not to make the reductions.

RECEIVE QUEEN'S MEDALS.

Officers and Crew of the Philadelphia Rewarded for Rescues.

Captain Arthur R. Mills of the American liner Philadelphia, H. Candy, chief officer, now retiring to take command of the Finland, and thirteen of the officers and crew received gold, silver, and bronze medals yesterday for bravery in rescuing the crew of the Dutch tank Chester in mid-ocean, on Feb. 4, 1915.

The presentation was made on behalf of Queen Wilhelmina and the Dutch Government by the Consul General in New York, A. van de Sande Bakhuysen, in the offices of the International Mercantile Marine Company at 9 Broadway. The Philadelphia was in the Erie Basin undergoing repairs. P. A. S. Franklin, Vice President and General Manager, and several other officials of the company, attended the presentation.

EDUCATION NOTES.

Licenses for 1915-16 as substitute teacher to teach in evening schools the subjects indicated have been granted to the following:

EVENING HIGH SCHOOLS—Baking, John J. Schmitt; marble cutting, Charles O'Reilly; mechanical drawing, Harry Lawrence; Spanish stenography, Frank J. Diaz; surveying, Louis Goodman.

EVENING ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS—Architectural modeling, St. John Issing; continuation class, Mrs. Jane H. Martin; power machine operation, Ida Bosco; stenography, Rose A. Connor, Mrs. Agnes H. Donnelly, Margaret F. Mahoney.

A written examination for license as substitute teacher of common branches in the elementary schools will be held at 2 P. M., Oct. 27. Men will be examined at the Education Hall Building and women at Hunter College. The written examination will be upon a paper in common academic subjects. Candidates will be required to take an oral examination, which will be held later at the Education Hall Building. A substitute teacher in elementary schools is paid $3 a day of actual service. When regularly assigned as clerical assistant or additional teacher the pay is $3.50 a day of actual service.

The Students' General Organization of the New York Evening High School for Men, Fifty-ninth Street and Tenth Avenue, has adopted appropriate resolutions with regard to the death of Dr. Thomas Hunter, who was the founder of this, the first evening high school in the city. Copies of the resolutions have been sent to the bereaved family and to the Board of Education.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

WOMEN ACCUSE BROKER.

F. A. Russell Held in $10,000 on Charges of Mail Frauds.

Frederick Adams Russell, a broker of 11 Broadway, was arraigned yesterday before Commissioner Houghton on the charge of having used the mails to defraud. Post Office Inspectors Swain and Mayhew said he had been defrauding a large number of speculators, many of them women, in the feverish rush to buy war stocks. Assistant District Attorney Julian Hartridge told the Commissioner that many of Russell's customers had lost their savings of years. Russell, who was defended by Jesse Epstein, was released in $10,000 bail for examination on Oct. 27.

He was at one time in the brokerage business at 90 Wall Street as McNeil, Adams & Co., but went bankrupt on Feb. 27, 1913, with liabilities of $250,000, and, according to William Blau, the receiver, practically no assets. Then, the postal authorities say, he opened offices at 11 Broadway, and professed to have inside information concerning stocks and the cotton and wheat markets. For a time, the Inspectors allege, he paid pretended profits to his clients, but when they pressed for an accounting he informed them he kept no books.

Inspector Swain in his complaint alleged that the daily reports Russell made to his customers concerning the profits they had made in Savage Arms, American Locomotive, and United States Steel were false and fraudulent because there were no such transactions.

Some of the women Russell is accused of having swindled are Mrs. Mary Mohns of 337 East 178d Street, who complained that she had lost with him $3,000, her life savings; Miss Mary Pryce and Miss Elizabeth Gilleland of 502 West 147th Street, Mrs. B. Weber of 239 East 173d Street, and Mrs. Elizabeth Boyer of 624 Walnut Street, Richmond Hill, L. I.

MAGISTRATE DEFIES COURT.

Murphy Says He Will Try Chauffeurs, Despite Injunction.

Magistrate Murphy, sitting in Yorkville Court, yesterday afternoon announced that he would disregard an injunction which sought to restrain him from trying certain cases pending an appeal on others, which he had already decided.

The defendants were chauffeurs of the Mason-Seaman Company, fifteen of whom had been summoned for disregarding an ordinance requiring all automobiles with taximeters to have public hack licenses. Three of these men were found guilty by the Magistrate and fined $50 each. These cases were appealed, and when the other twelve came up yesterday, I. R. McCombe of Wing & Wing, attorneys for the defense, produced an injunction, issued by Supreme Court Justice Stephen J. Callaghan of Brooklyn, restraining any interference with the twelve chauffeurs until the appeals of the other three had been decided.

"With all due respect to Supreme Court Justice Callaghan," said the Magistrate, "I do not feel that any injunction issued by the Supreme Court can tie the hands of the criminal procedure, and I will test that to any extent with any Supreme Court Justice. These cases will be tried, and I will take the evidence Nov. 11 in Jefferson Market Court, where I will be then presiding."

SEIZED ON VISIT TO ILL WIFE.

Business Man Clears Alleged Dupe in Forgery That Failed.

The cashier of the Lincoln Trust Company became suspicious when a man representing himself to be "A. Rosofsky" attempted to draw $95 from an account which he had just opened there by depositing a certified check on Thursday afternoon for $325, drawn by Ruhe & Sonen, electrical machinists at 127 West Thirtieth Street. He detained the new customer while he inquired if the check was all right.

"We will ask Mr. Sonen," replied a representative of the East River National Bank, where the check had been certified. Emile Sonen went to the Lincoln Trust Company and produced the check of forgery, but an excellent imitation of his own signature. The man, who was detained, said he was Samuel Wermis, an employe of Abraham Rappaport, proprietor of the Shirring Company, at 104 West Twenty-sixth Street, by whom he had been directed to deposit the check and draw the money.

"Rappaport is outside waiting for me," Wermis told detectives.

But Rappaport had disappeared, and he did not return that night to his home on Third Avenue, where his wife was ill. Yesterday Mrs. Rappaport was taken to the Long Island College Hospital, and there Detective Kalbfleisch found her husband visiting her. Rappaport confessed to Assistant District Attorney Samuels, saying he needed the money to provide for his wife. Wermis, he said, was innocent. Rappaport was held in $3,000 bail for the Grand Jury.

INSISTS HE KILLED A BOY.

Charles Carey, Arrested Here, Says He Committed Murder in Chicago.

Charles Carey, 53 years old, who said he had no home, was sent to Bellevue Hospital from the Mercer Street Police Station last night. He was said by the police to be suffering from alcoholism, after he had told Lieutenant Quinn, according to the police, in incoherent sentences, that he had murdered a boy in Chicago. The man will be detained in the hospital pending an investigation of his story.

Patrolman Zadi of the Mercer Street Station was patrolling Sixth Avenue last night when he observed the man walking aimlessly in the vicinity of Eighth Street. He responded to the policeman's questions with a blank stare.

Lieutenant Quinn notified the Second Branch Detective Bureau, and Detectives Talt and Bauerschmidt of the ripper squad were sent to Bellevue. In answer to their questions, the detectives say, Carey insisted that he had killed a boy in Chicago in 1898, but refused to give any further particulars. Carey's fingerprints will be taken today and sent to the Chicago police.

THREE HURT IN CAR CRASH.

Trolley Jumps Track at Manhattan End of Brooklyn Bridge.

Three passengers in a Bergen Street (Brooklyn) surface car were slightly injured last night when the car jumped the track in Loop 7 at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge shortly after the rush hour. The car was about to come to a stop at the southerly end of the loop, when the forward trucks left the rails, causing the front part of the car to strike an iron support.

John Cottle, 24 years old, a correspondent of 126 Cumberland Street, Brooklyn, had his right hip sprained; Mrs. Amanda Walsh, 47, of 412 Warren Street, Brooklyn, suffered contusions of the right arm, and Frederick Dohrman, 45, a clerk of 148 Dean Street, Brooklyn, contusions of the right knee.

Dr. Grant of Volunteer Hospital attended the injured and they left for their homes.

Burglary for Drugs Charged.

Detectives Finan and Riley of the Fourth Branch Detective Bureau arrested four men at a moving picture theatre in 110th Street last night on the charge of breaking into drug stores at 65 Amsterdam Avenue and 1,596 Madison Avenue, and stealing cocaine and heroin worth about $400. The men said they were Henry Weinreid, clerk, 16 East 106th Street; Solomon Gershank, laborer, 75 East 100th Street; Patrick Kelly, plumber, 5,534 Park Avenue, the Bronx, and Alfred Cohn, clerk, 978 Union Avenue, the Bronx.

Woman's Slayer Found Guilty.

Petrius Cornelius von den Corput, a kitchen man who, on Oct. 28, 1914, stabbed to death Barbara Wright, in whose home at 118 East Fifty-third Street he lived, was convicted of murder in the first degree before Judge Malone in General Sessions yesterday. Von den Corput, the only witness in his own defense, denied he had committed the murder. The jury was out only half an hour. The prisoner was remanded for sentence.

CHANGES IN NATIONAL GUARD

Private Honored for Long Service —Officers Promoted and Retired.

Governor Whitman on the recommendation of Colonel Daniel Appleton, commanding the Seventh Infantry, has appointed Private Edward Wanty of Company B, a brevet Second Lieutenant, for faithful service of more than twenty-five years, and he has been retired.

The following officers recently promoted to the grades given, have passed examination, and have been commissioned: Second Lieutenant Charles E. Bregenzer, Twenty-second Corps of Engineers; Second Lieutenant James H. Gies, Second Field Artillery; Second Lieutenant Jean Nelson, Second Field Artillery; First Lieutenant James H. Davis, Second Field Artillery; First Lieutenant H. D. Dumont, Twenty-third Infantry, and Second Lieutenant John A. Korschen, First Infantry.

Captain Henry C. H. Stewart, Ninth Infantry; Captain August T. Morrow, 20ist New York Volunteers; Captain Charles G. Stevenson, Coast Artillery; First Lieutenant William A. Hayes, Coast Artillery; First Lieutenant Rufus G. Shirley, Ninth Infantry; First Lieutenant Francis Halpin, Squadron A, and Second Lieutenant George D. Snyder, Twelfth Regiment of Pennsylvania.

Under the military law of New York officers who have been honorably discharged from the National Guard of other States, may be put on the reserve list of the New York Guard.

TRIED FOR NICHOLS DEATH.

Pantry Boy Faces First Degree Murder Charge.

Onnie Tallas, one of four men indicted for having caused the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Nichols when her home at 4 East Seventy-ninth Street was robbed of $17,000 worth of jewelry, was put on trial for murder in the first degree before Judge Malone in General Sessions yesterday. The three men with whom Tallas is alleged to have acted as an accomplice have not been arrested. They are Arthur Waltonen, Edward Lehto, and an Italian whose name is unknown.

Assistant District Attorney Brothers seeks to prove that Onnie Tallas, who was employed by Mrs. Nichols as a pantry boy, admitted the burglars to her home with the knowledge that they intended to commit robbery. Despite the fact that Mrs. Nichols died of fright, Mr. Brothers will endeavor to convict Tallas of murder in the first degree.

After the jury was obtained yesterday, Judge Malone adjourned the trial of the case until Monday.

Mrs. Nichols was the widow of James Nichols, one of the founders of Austin Nichols & Co.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Decisions Given on Tobacco, Furniture, Cottons, and Dye.

The Board of General Appraisers yesterday settled a dispute between the Government and the Havana-American Company, New Orleans, regarding the character of tobacco imported at that city. The Collector held that the importations contained more than 15 per cent. of wrapper tobacco, and accordingly took duty at the rate of $1.85 per pound, less 20 per cent., under the terms of the Cuban reciprocity treaty. It was claimed by the protestants that the contents of two of the tan bales should have been passed as filler tobacco and that the contents of the remaining eight bales as not containing more than 8 per cent. of wrapper leaves. Judge McClelland found that a part of the shipment was dutiable at 35 cents per pound, as claimed, the Collector being affirmed as to the balance.

McCreery & Co., Pittsburgh, lost in the claim that furniture covered with cotton tapestry should be admitted at the rate of 15 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for "house and cabinet furniture wholly or in chief value of wood." The appraiser reported that the merchandise was in chief value of cotton tapestry, and the Collector accordingly took duty at 35 per cent. ad valorem as "tapestries and other upholstery goods." The board held that the proper classification was as "manufactures of cotton," at 30 per cent., but, as that claim was not made by the importers, the protest was overruled without affirming the Collector.

A. S. Miller protested the Collector's classification of cotton bedspreads decorated with five fancy rows of hemstitching. The merchandise was returned at 60 per cent. as "articles from which threads have been omitted, drawn or punched, forming figures or designs." The board decided that there was no merit in the claim for 30 per cent. as manufactures of cotton.

H. A. Metz & Co. and the Farbwerke-Hoechst Company were sustained in protests, under the Tariff act of 1909, of merchandise invoiced as indigo bromate and chlorine blue T. The products were returned for duty at 30 per cent. ad valorem as coal tar dyes or colors. They were claimed to be properly dutiable at three-quarters of one cent a pound as indigo paste or extract. While there seemed to be some question whether the colors contained indigo, it was shown that they gave all the reactions and results of indigo. The Collector was reversed.

ISSUE 1915 YEAR BOOK.

Merchants' Association Says War Conditions Demand Co-operation.

The Merchants' Association of New York issued yesterday its year book for 1915. The volume, which consists of 240 pages, contains, in addition to the reports of the various bureaus and officials of the association on the work done during the last year, an alphabetical and classified list of 3,800 members, representing 748 businesses and professions. The book is illustrated with views of the headquarters of the association in the Woolworth Building.

President William A. Marble in his annual report says:

"The last year marks a new epoch in the life of the world. New burdens and fresh problems are being imposed upon the industry and commerce of this country from events that are now transpiring. Yet at the same time new opportunities are being presented, to grasp which industry and commerce must adjust themselves along new lines.

"As a result of the war in Europe, the operation of the Panama Canal, enactment of new legislation, and various other causes, new methods must be developed to meet new conditions. In manufacturing, in distribution, and in foreign trade changes are in progress. If ever there was a time when the full operation of the principle of co-operation and co-ordination of energy should be secured, it is now."

RULE FOR FOREIGN VALUES.

Those from Chambers of Commerce Abroad Not Inclusive.

Data furnished shippers by foreign chambers of commerce, especially when in certified form, will have to be both detailed and specific in order to be accepted by the Board of General Appraisers as conclusive evidence in support of American importers' contentions. This was the practical effect of a ruling made yesterday by General Appraiser Fischer, sitting as a reappraisement official in a protest case involving the dutiable values of wrapping paper from Antonio Bonastre of Barcelona and entered at San Juan, Porto Rico.

The importers entered the paper as having a foreign value of 18 silver pesetas per bale, whereas the Appraiser at San Juan held that the foreign wholesale price was 20 silver pesetas a bale. The Collector exacted duty on that basis. An appeal for a reappraisement brought out at the hearing that the purchase price of the paper as stated on the invoice

SENATORS AS SEEN BY CITIZENS' UNION

NO RECORD FOUND PERFECT

Bill to Abolish Coroners and Building Measures Taken as Tests for Criticism.

The Citizens' Union has made public the report of its Committee on Legislation regarding the individual records of Senators from New York City in the last session of the Legislature. As in the case of Assemblymen, attention is called to the vote of Senators on the Sanders bill and the Lockwood-Ellenbogen bill. The committee says the Citizens' Union is in hearty accord with the desire of property owners to eliminate conflict between city departments and simplify building inspection service, and that this the bills failed to do. The records of the Senators are given as follows:

BENNETT, WILLIAM M. (Rep. and Prog., 15th Dist., New York)—Intelligent legislator. His assertive independence often distasteful to leaders. Fathered bill to abolish nuisance of tracks at grade on west side of Manhattan. Supported bills weakening regulation of building construction. Record of votes otherwise good. Recorded on "quick" roll call against Rockaway City bill.

BOYLAN, JOHN J. (Dem., 15th Dist., New York)—Introduced several desirable measures and also some objectional ones. Voted to abolish office of Coroner. Supported bill weakening regulation of building construction. Record of votes otherwise fair.

BURLINGAME, ALVAH W., JR. (Rep., 8th Dist., Kings)—Showed independence but failed to give full support to several desirable measures. Except for support of bills weakening regulation of building construction, record of votes good. Recorded on "quick" roll calls against two objectionable private claim bills.

CARROLL, DANIEL J. (Dem., 7th Dist., Kings)—Introduced many bills, several without merit and none of which became law. Voted to abolish office of Coroner. Record of votes unsatisfactory.

CARSWELL, WILLIAM B. (Dem., 6th Dist., Kings)—Introduced seven bills of varied merit, three of which became law. Voted to abolish office of Coroner. Supported bill weakening regulation of building construction. Recard of votes otherwise good.

CROMWELL, GEORGE (Rep., 23d Dist., Richmond.)—Attentive to duties. Successfully handled several important city bills, including bill to abolish office of Coroner. Recorded on "quick" roll call against Rockaway City bill. Supported bill weakening regulation of building construction and record of votes otherwise unsatisfactory.

CULLEN, THOMAS H. (Dem., 3d Dist. Kings.)—Experienced and intelligent legislator. Fathered Brooklyn Marginal Railroad bill, which became law. Voted against bill to abolish office of Coroner. Record of votes poor.

DUNNIGAN, JOHN J. (Dem., 21st Dist. Bronx.)—New member. Prolific introducer of bills, several objectionable and also some of merit. Supported bill weakening regulation of building construction. Record of votes poor.

FOLEY, JAMES A. (Dem., 14th Dist. New York.)—Experienced and industrious member. Helpful in committee work. Voted to abolish office of Coroner. Except for support of bill weakening regulation of building construction, record of votes fair.

GILCHRIST, ALFRED J. (Rep., 10th Dist. Kings.)—Introduced many bills, several of which were objectionable. Record of votes poor. Supported bills weakening regulation of building construction. Recorded on "quick" roll call against Rockaway City bill.

HAMILTON, JAMES A. (Dem., 22d Dist. Bronx.)—New member of some ability. Attentive. Active in introducing bills of varied merit. Supported bill weakening regulation of building construction. Voted to abolish office of Coroner. Record of votes good.

HEFFERNAN, WILLIAM J., (Dem., 5th Dist., Kings.)—As in former years failed to display any value as a legislator. Record of votes poor.

JOSEPH, IRVING J., (Dem., 20th Dist., New York.)—New member. Introduced some objectionable bills. Supported bill weakening regulation of building construction. Voted to abolish office of Coroner. Record of votes good.

LAWSON, ROBERT R., (Rep., 9th Dist., Kings.)—New member. Introduced thirty-eight bills, a number of which were objectionable. Supported bills weakening regulation of building construction. Record of votes otherwise good. Recorded on "quick" roll call against one objectionable private claim bill.

LOCKWOOD, CHARLES C., (Rep., 4th Dist., Kings.)—Able and effective legislator. Materially aided in securing passage of Coroners bill and Municipal Court act. Introduced several desirable measures. Introduced and actively supported bill weakening regulation of building construction. Record of votes fair. Recorded on "quick" roll call against Rockaway City Bill.

MILLS, OGDEN L., (Rep., 17th Dist., New York.)—New member. Developed conspicuous legislative ability. Introduced important city and general legislation, a large proportion of which became law. Generally good record. Actively opposed and recorded on "quick" roll calls against weakening regulation of building construction and Rockaway City Bill.

PATTEN, BERNARD M., (Dem., 2d Dist., Queens.)—Introduced bills of varied merit, many objectionable. Voted against bill to abolish office of Coroner. Supported bill weakening regulation of building construction. Otherwise record of votes fair.

SIMPSON, GEORGE W., (Dem., 19th Dist., New York.)—Introduced desirable legislation. Voted to abolish office of Coroner. Supported bill weakening regulation of building construction. Recorded on "quick" roll call against Rockaway City bill. Record of votes good.

SULLIVAN, CHRISTOPHER D., (Dem., 11th Dist., New York.)—Introduced legislation of varied merit. As in former years, made poor record of votes. Unrecorded on important roll calls.

WAGNER, ROBERT F., (Dem., 16th Dist., New York.)—Experienced minority leader. Introduced legislation of importance and merit, but also two objectionable special pension bills. Intelligent and forceful advocate of desirable industrial measures. Actively opposed bills weakening regulation of building construction. Voted to abolish office of Coroner. Record of votes good.

WALKER, JAMES J., (Dem., 13th Dist., New York.)—Active and able, but energies largely misdirected. Introduced objectionable civil service, payroll and private claim bills. Record of votes poor.

As with the Assemblymen the committee gave the Senators an opportunity to examine the statements of their records, and to make suggestions and criticisms.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Three Fifty-seventh Street Houses Near Seventh Avenue Purchased for Apartment—Art Firm Leases Old Altman Gallery—Uptown Apartment Deals—Lower Broadway Cotton Firm Rental.

A deal of more than ordinary interest to Fifty-seventh Street residents, in that it forecasts the first big apartment house improvement on the north side of that thoroughfare between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, was closed yesterday in the purchase by a syndicate of the three four-story dwellings at 155, 157, and 159 West Fifty-seventh Street. The buying interests are headed by Edgar A. Levy, who has recently been prominently identified with some of the largest Park Avenue apartments, and which were readily sold after completion.

The property in Fifty-seventh Street has a frontage of 62.6 by 100.5 deep, and is diagonally opposite Carnegie Hall, being not far from the northeast corner of Seventh Avenue. To the east, in the same block, is the Calvary Baptist Church. The sale was made for the estate of Henrietta Sidenberg, Richard Sidenberg, and Robert A. Brown. The holding price of the plot was about $250,000. The property, with improvements, was assessed for 1915 at $182,000. The new owners are having plans prepared for the erection of a thirteen-story apartment house on the site.

Art Firm Leases Altman Gallery.

The gallery of the late Benjamin Altman at 1 West Fiftieth Street, adjoining his Fifth Avenue residence, has been leased by the Somerworth Realty Company to the art firm of Canessa of Paris for two years at a net rental of about $10,000 a year. The gallery, therefore, will continue to be used for art purposes, and not torn down as intimated a short time ago.

The Somerworth Realty Company, composed of Ralph Shoinwold and Michael Dreicer, took over the old Altman leasehold from Columbia University a few months ago, and on the site of the residence, 35.5 by 131, on the corner plot, a six-story business building has been erected, which has been leased by De Pinna & Co. for twenty-one years from Jan. 1, 1916. The gallery building adjoining has a street frontage of 33 feet by 100.5 deep.

B. M. Duke Buys Big Apartment.

Benjamin M. Duke bought yesterday the twelve-story apartment house at 378 West End Avenue. It stands on the southeast corner of Seventy-eighth Street and West End Avenue, and accommodates four family to each floor. In part payment was a ten-story loft building at 31 and 33 West Thirty-first Street and a large colonial dwelling in Plainfield, N. J., on the corner of Park and Moffet Avenues. Loton H. Slawson Company acted as brokers. The transaction is said to involve between $1,000,000 and $950,000. The sale was made for Arnstein & Levy and George Backer.

Purchase and Resale of Heights Apartment.

The Benenson Realty Company has purchased from the Lawyers Mortgage Company and resold to an investing client 530 West 144th Street, a six-story elevator apartment house, on a plot 87.6 by 100.

Builders Buy Apartment Site.

As a site for a five-story apartment house the Adnine Construction Company has purchased from the Harlem Construction Company a vacant plot 37.6 by 100 on the northwest corner of 214th Street and Tenth Avenue.

Bronx Sales.

Joseph A. Wasserman sold for A. Schmidt the dwelling and plot, 31 by 105, on the east side of Barnes Avenue, 93.6 feet south of 215th Street, to an investor, and for G. Halpin two lots, 50 by 100, on the east side of Seton Avenue, 100 feet north of 233d Street, or Nelson Avenue, to a client for improvement.

Two new five-story apartments now in course of construction at the northeast corner of Morris Avenue and Mount Hope Place have been sold by the J. W. Cornish Construction Company to an investor. The corner house occupies a plot 60 by 95 and the adjoining house 65 by 95, the two having a frontage of 125 feet.

Activity in Bay Ridge Section.

In the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, where there has been a revival of home and speculation buying during the past couple of weeks, L. E. Brauns sold for Herman H. Lucke the dwelling, 452 Seventy-third Street, to a client; also sold for F. Schum, a plot 40 by 100, on the south side of Seventy-eighth Street, east of Fourth Avenue, to a client for immediate improvement.

The Master Builders, Inc., have sold to a client for immediate occupancy, 1,137 Seventy-fifth Street, Bay Ridge, a two and a half story stucco and hollow tile private dwelling.

Brooklyn.

The two-story house at 513 Madison Street has been sold by Henry P. Cain for Sophie Leviten to a client for occupancy.

Long Island.

The D. H. Jackson Company has sold to S. H. Fenberg, the northeast corner of Windsor Place and Windsor Avenue, Brightwaters, Bayshore, L. I., a three-story residence with garage and other buildings on plot 156 by 200, running to the famous Brightwaters Canal. The sellers acquired this property from William A. Asch, last April.

Goldschmidt & Macdonald have sold for the Rebellenita Construction Company to Hiram V. Cosby two plots on Burton Avenue, Woodmere, containing nine lots for immediate improvement. In part payment the purchaser gives a plot on Crescent Street, Long Island City.

New Jersey.

The Simpson Merritt Company reports the sale of two plots of ground on Park Street, in Upper Montclair, to E. H. Holmes, associated with the Bank of Montclair. The property has total frontage of 180 feet. The same firm also has sold two plots of property in Verona to the same purchaser, the frontage being 140 feet.

Houses at Montclair Lakes Park have been sold to Charles A. Peck and Ura I. Cloughan.

Apfelbaum & Apfelbaum, Inc., sold the three-story-building belonging to the heirs of the Abraham Sickle Estate at 461 Broad Street, Newark, 17.4 by 65, to Weise Brothers of Newark, the price paid per foot being in the neighborhood of $2,000, which is the highest paid in the last five years on this block.

Buys $40,000 Scarborough Estate.

Fish & Marvin have sold for the estate of Henrietta C. Brinckerhoff the property at Scarborough, consisting of ten acres, residence and outbuildings. It adjoins the estates of Walter W. Law, V. Everett Macy, and Mrs. G. S. Achellis. The purchaser is Charles F. Samson. The holding price was $40,000.

Buys Rockland County Estate.

The homestead, with seventeen acres, of the late Henry Bardon, at Bardonia, Rockland County, N. Y., has been purchased by Jordan G. Miller of Brooklyn, who will improve the property and make it his home. Howard Goldsmith was the broker in the transaction.

Cotton Firm Leases Lower Broadway Building.

An important lease in the old Broadway wholesale centre has been made by the Lamport Manufacturers' Supply Company, one of the large wholesale cotton firms, which has been for many years at 273 Canal Street. For its new offices the firm has taken the six-story building at 567 and 569 Broadway, running through to Mercer Street, 49.10 feet on Broadway by 200 deep, between Broome and Spring Streets. The lease has been taken from Columbia University, owner of the property, for ten years, at an annual rental of $26,000. Alterations will be made before occupancy, at an early date.

$160,000 Garage Lease.

M. & L. Hess, Inc., have leased from the plans for James J. Riordan, Inc., a recently formed corporation, to Morris Segall, 438 to 454 West Eighteenth Street. This plot, 225 by 92, is to be improved with a two-story fireproof garage, sufficiently large to accommodate about 250 commercial autos. Plans have been prepared by James S. Maher, architect, and construction work will be begun at once. The building will be ready for occupancy by April 1, 1916. The lease is for a term of ten years, and involves a rental of $160,000.

Commercial Leases.

A. H. Mathews has rented for five years for the Pell estate the store and basement at 14 Maiden Lane to Tessaro, Inc.

Shaw & Co. have leased for the Ohio Realty Company the store at 402 St. Nicholas Avenue to Michael Roth.

Manning & Trunk, in conjunction with William B. May & Co., have leased the store for John R. Stevens in his building at 58 West Fortieth Street to the Misses Dorothy Steele and Louise Colwell.

The Cross & Brown Company has leased the store and basement at 15 West Seventeenth Street to P. N. Fletcher for Forbes & Co.

Private Dwellings Leased.

Worthington Whitehouse, Inc., has sublet for V. Everit Macy to Walter D. Denegre of Manchester, Mass., 37 West Fifty-sixth Street, a five-story modern American basement dwelling belonging to Elisha Dyer. The house was held at $7,500.

Pease & Elliman have leased for M. Tracy Hoppin to John J. Townsend the four-story American basement dwelling at 173 East Eightieth Street, and for Robert S. Clark to Louis Du Pont Irving the four-story and basement dwelling, 17 by 100 feet, at 63 East Seventy-eighth Street.

Real Estate Notes.

Joseph P. Day will offer today at absolute auction sale at 2 P. M. on the premises, to close the estate of John H. Gray, deceased, the property situated at 367, 371, 373, and 375 Huguenot Street and 381 Main Street and an adjoining vacant parcel at New Rochelle, N. Y.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. have opened a branch office at 509 Fifth Avenue for the renting of the new Guaranty Building, of which they are agents.

J. C. Lyons' Sons Company has been awarded the general contract for the erection of a garage at 7 to 13 Quincy Street, Brooklyn, for the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Brooklyn.

LEGAL NOTICES.

AT A SPECIAL TERM, PART II, OF THE Supreme Court of the State of New York, held in and for the County of New York, at the County Court House, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 22d day of October, 1915. Present: Hon. Mitchell L. Erlanger, Justice.

In the matter of The Northern Bank of New York.—In Liquidation.

Application of the Superintendent of Banks of the State of New York for leave to pay a third dividend to the creditors of The Northern Bank of New York and for other relief.—Order.

On reading and filing the annexed petition of Eugene Lamb Richards, Superintendent of Banks of the State of New York, dated and verified the 22d day of October, 1915, and the schedule thereto annexed, and the affidavit of Charles A. Horne, Special Deputy Superintendent of Banks of the State of New York, in charge of The Northern Bank of New York in liquidation, verified the same day, and upon the records in connection with the liquidation of The Northern Bank of New York, on file in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York, and

On motion of Breed, Abbott & Morgan, attorneys for the petitioner, it is ORDERED, that the Clerk of the County of New York file in his office this order, the said petition, with annexed schedules, and the said affidavit, and that this application of the Superintendent of Banks of the State of New York

(1) For leave to pay a third dividend of five per cent. to all creditors of The Northern Bank of New York whose claims have been filed and accepted;

(2) For leave to pay first and second dividends aggregating sixty per cent. to all creditors of The Northern Bank of New York whose claims have been filed and accepted since May 17, 1912, in order to equalize the distribution made to them with the distribution heretofore made to creditors whose claims were filed and accepted prior to said date; and

(3) For the confirmation and approval by the court of the acts of the Banking Department of the State of New York in connection with the liquidation of The Northern Bank of New York, including all disbursements made to and including September 30, 1915, and shown on Exhibit E, annexed to said petition;

Be brought on to be heard before this court, at a Special Term, Part I thereof, on the 29th day of October, 1915, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as said application can be heard, and that notice of such application be given by the Superintendent of Banks of the State of New York to The Northern Bank of New York, its creditors and stockholders, by publishing a copy of this order on the 23d day of October, 1915, and on the 27th day of October, 1915, in the New York Law Journal and THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, SOUTHern District of New York.—Citation.

Whereas a petition was filed in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, on the 20th day of October, 1915, by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, praying for a limitation of its liability as owner of the barge P. R. R. No. 267, concerning the loss, damage, injury and destruction occasioned by the barge P. R. R. No. 267 coming in contact with the barge P. R. R. No. 484 on September 14th, 1914; and

Whereas the petitioner filed with the Clerk of this Court on October 20th, 1915, an ad interim stipulation in the sum of $15,500, with interest from September 14, 1914, duly approved, undertaking to pay into Court within ten days after the entry of an order confirming the report of the Commissioner to be appointed to appraise the amount or value of the petitioner's interest in said barge P. R. R. No. 267 and her pending freight, if any, the amount or value of such interest as thus ascertained, or to file in this proceeding a bond or stipulation for value in the usual form, with surety in said amount.

Now, therefore, pursuant to the motion issued out of said Court, to me directed and delivered, I do hereby cite all persons claiming damages for any and all losses, damages and injuries caused by or resulting from the contact of the barge P. R. R. No. 267 with the barge P. R. R. No. 484 on September 14, 1914, to appear and make due proof of their respective claims before H. W. Goodrich, Esq., Commissioner, at his office, 49 Wall Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on or before the 24th day of January, 1916, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, and also to appear before said Court at the Court Rooms thereof on the 24th day of January, 1916, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day and answer the petition herein; otherwise they will be defaulted and barred from participation in said stipulation.

Dated, New York, October 20, 1915.
THOMAS D. McCARTHY,
United States Marshal for the Southern District of N. Y.

ELLIS ISLAND HOLDS BOY OF FIRST CABIN

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Avery Meet 9-Year-Old Son from England, but He Is Taken from Them.

IMMIGRATION LAW BLAMED

Officials Enforcing the Statute in Hope That Authorities at Washington Will Modify It.

Although his parents met him at the White Star pier yesterday when he arrived from Liverpool on the Baltic, Thorold Avery, 9 years old, had to go to Ellis Island with the immigrants to appear before a Board of Special Inquiry. The boy came over in the first cabin to go to school in this country. On the voyage he was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Druiff and Dr. Alfred Mosely, the well-known English educator, who assisted Mr. and Mrs. Avery in trying to convince the Immigration Inspector that as the father and mother were at the pier it would be unjust to take their son away from them.

W. G. Avery, the boy's father, is employed by William Baumgarten & Co. of 715 Fifth Avenue, dealers in fine furniture. He said he had ample evidence from bankers and other business men to show that he was quite able to prevent his 9-yeaf-old son from becoming a public charge. Mr. Avery is said to be well-to-do.

The Inspector listened patiently and replied that the United States immigration laws demanded that all alien children arriving in this country without their parents or legal guardians must be sent to Ellis Island to go before a Board of Special Inquiry. Thorold Avery and his parents left the Baltic at 3 o'clock on the immigrant barge for Ellis Island.

Officials of the International Mercantile Marine Company said this was the first time in their recollection that an alien under 16 traveling in the first cabin unaccompanied had been sent to Ellis Island when both parents were at the pier to meet the steamer on arrival.

At Ellis Island it was explained that the immigration officials had frequently written to the Department of Labor at Washington pointing out the faults in the present law, in an effort to get it amended to give the Inspectors on the ship some discretionary power.

William Williams, the former Immigration Commissioner at Ellis Island, said when he was in charge of the bureau that the best way to get bad laws amended was to enforce them rigorously, and that policy has been adopted by the officials ever since.

Grand Rapids City Official Sought.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 22.—Prosecuting Attorney Barnard this afternoon obtained a warrant for the arrest of Williard H. Olmstead, former Deputy City Treasurer, on the charge of embezzling municipal funds to the total of $2,070. The action is one of the developments in the case against City Treasurer James S. Hawkins, against whom impeachment proceedings have been started on allegations of irregularity in tax title transactions.

WIRT HAS NO FEAR OF SECTARIANISM

Says There Has Been No Such Effect by His System on the Pupils at Gary, Ind.

ETTINGER SEES A DANGER

Bishop Greer Warmly Approves Plan for Religious Instruction for School Children.

Permission to school children to attend classes in religious instruction outside of the classroom during the extra school time need not introduce sectarianism among children, according to Superintendent William A. Wirt of the schools of Gary, Ind., and Dr. William L. Ettinger, Associate Superintendent of the New York City schools, who talked at a meeting at Synod Hall last night. Mr. Wirt said that it had not had any such effect in the schools of Gary. He said:

"Every church in Gary is giving religious instruction to children in the extra hours which are not used in the classroom. The children have come to regard it in a very matter-of-fact way as a regular part of their daily lives. They would be surprised to learn that there were children in other cities who had no religious instruction on weekdays.

"I have not been able to find the slightest mark of sectarianism on any of the children or the least trace of illfeeling between the churches over the question of education. There is not in the religious instruction they receive daily at the various churches any teaching apt to produce such results. They are not taught much about creeds or the differences between denominations.

"I do not say that a religious teacher could not get them excited over the differences between churches, but I cannot imagine a church employing such a teacher. I cannot see that it is a strong argument against a good thing to say that it might be done badly. It is our business to see that it is done well."

Wants Children Kept Busy.

One of the questions put to Mr. Wirt was how the school authorities, under the Wirt system, could deal with ignorant and illiterate parents who would seek to have their children work in sweatshops or at home during the extra hours outside of the school building.

"The average time that a child is occupied in the schools on each day of the 365 days of the year is two and a half hours. Our plan is to keep children more fully occupied during the day in play, in work with the hand, and with religious instruction. There must be a co-ordinating agent which will join the activities of children outside of school with those in the school. The plan will not run itself. There will have to be adjustments in different portions of the city. We must somehow get the coordinating done, if the men and women of today want the school children of today to be turned out of as good a type as they were."

Mr. Wirt said he would have no objection, for instance, if a child should put in an hour of the extra time in the morning in working for her mother, if the mother needed help. The right kind of a mother, he said, could teach housekeeping, for instance, better than it could be taught in the schools.

He said that two generations ago men and women, who lived in cities less congested than those of today, had a chance to play in the open and to do chores and other work, so that their time was fully occupied. A generation ago, the children in the big cities had less open space and lived more and more under conditions which cut them off from the play and occupation of an earlier time, and today these conditions are worse. He told a story of an old man who had retired from business and interested himself in the education of his grandchildren.

Sees Possible Danger.

"He soon found out the disadvantage which school children today had in comparison with those of two generations ago," said Dr. Wirt. "The difference is not so apparent to many parents, who are so occupied in their own work that they have not the time to study these conditions, and it can be said that today a man often has to become a grandfather before he understands rightly how to be a father."

Dr. Ettinger, replying to a question as to the danger of sectarianism in the Ettinger plan, said that there was no reason to expect it, but he added:

"I think the greatest mistake that can be made would be to establish a point of contact between the school system and the churches. Parents have a full right to send their children to churches during the extra hours under which they are not under the control of the Department of Education. If any plan were established, however, under which the children were directed by teachers or Principals to go for religious instruction, or under which the school authorities delivered over the children for religious instruction, such a point of contact would be established, and the danger would then be present. The work of the school system must be over when the children leave the schools. The parents of the children, working with the churches, must then take charge of the religious instruction."

Bishop Greer, who presided over the meeting, said that, as far as he had been able to investigate them, the Wirt and Ettinger systems appealed very strongly to him, as providing for the development of the individuality of the child and for the development of the self-control as well as the mentality of a child.

Other speakers who explained and advocated the principle of the two plans were the Rev. Lester Bradner, Dr. William H. Pott, the Rev. John Wallace Suter, Jr., the Rev. Dr. H. P. Nichols, William Edmond Curtis, Louis O. Morny and Bishop Charles S. Burch.

PUZZLE IN RIVER DROWNING.

Police Try to Identify Woman's Body Found in Hoboken.

The Hoboken police made efforts last night to discover the identity of a woman whose body was found floating in the slip of the Christopher Street Ferry at the Lackawanna Station, early yesterday morning. After the body had been in Volk's Morgue, Washington Street, all day with no clue to its identification, the police received information that led them to believe the dead person had been a well-to-do woman, whose name and residence were not made public. At once the police became active, but they were reticent about the case. They sent a telegram to a woman living in West Virginia, supposed to be a sister of the dead woman; but, at a late hour, no answer had been received.

Whether the woman met her death by accident or suicide the police did not know. Their theory was that she had disappeared from her home and probably had drowned herself. That her death was deliberate seemed to be indicated by the fact that there was nothing about her by which an identification could be made. The woman apparently was less than 40 years old and weighed 130 pounds. She had brown hair and was clothed in a black dress, black shoes and stockings, and a gray sweater.

When the body was taken from the water it was suggested to the police that the woman might have been a victim of the ferry accident on Thursday morning whose death had not been reported, but an examination established that the body had been in the water at least a week.

FRANK GUARDS DISMISSED.

Five Punished for Kidnapping That Ended in Lynching.

Special to The New York Times.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Oct. 22.—As a result of the lynching of Leo M. Frank, who was kidnapped from the State Prison here on the night of Aug. 16 last, five of the guards and Deputy Wardens have been discharged and another has resigned. The changes have just been made on orders from the State Prison Commission.

Among those discharged was the guard on duty the night Frank was kidnapped. Another was a guard at the tuberculosis camp, where a Federal prisoner escaped the week following the kidnapping of Frank. Warden Smith and Superintendent Burns were not disturbed. Other changes are looked for.

FIX FRACTURED SKULL AFTER THIRTEEN YEARS

Belated Operation on Retired Fire Captain Expected to Restore Health.

Captain Robert Oswald of 312 West 112th Street, who retired from the Fire Department five years ago because of ill-health caused by severe headaches, was operated on at the Washington Heights Hospital on Thursday morning for a depressed fracture of the skull which he suffered in 1902 while fighting a fire in Brooklyn.

Until an X ray was taken a few days ago Captain Oswald did not know the nature of his injury, and for many years after the accident he carried on his strenuous duties as a member of the department in active service, answering alarms and directing his men. It was said at the hospital last night that he would recover his lost good health.

Captain Oswald, who is 54 years old, was at one time an aid to ex-Fire Chief Croker, and won quite a reputation for his daring. For a long time he was at the Fire Headquarters in Great Jones Street. A five-alarm fire in Brooklyn called his company out one night thirteen years ago, and while the Captain was leading his men a wall fell, breaking a heavy cable. The cable struck him on the head, rendering him unconscious.

An ambulance surgeon called the injury a lacerated scalp and put seventeen stitches in the injured head. After a lay-off for the wound to heal, the Captain was back at his desk. He complained of headaches, but refused to give up, despite his suffering. Physicians to whom he appealed for relief diagnosed the case as neuralgia, chronic neuralgia, and hysterical neuralgia. At four hospitals where he went for treatment the verdict was much the same.

Finally Captain Oswald was retired on half pay because of his illness, but he went to the courts and was reinstated as physically fit. He kept at his work until, under the stress of great excitement at fires, the pains became almost unbearable. Then he gave up and voluntarily retired.

A week ago when Captain Oswald was in great pain a nephew, Joseph Wilbur, who is employed as a bookkeeper at the Washington Heights Hospital, induced him to consult Dr. C. C. Sichel, the visiting surgeon, who lives at 210 Riverside Drive. The surgeon made a superficial examination and advised an X-ray of the injured head. Three exposures were taken, and according to Dr. Sichel, they showed a depressed fracture of the skull on the left side of the head extending a full six inches from just above the ear to the back of the head.

The operation was performed by Dr. Sichel, assisted by Dr. Daniel Bacharach, assisting visiting surgeon, of 15 Fort Washington Avenue. The delicate operation of trepanning the skull was employed and the brain exposed. It showed that the blood vessels had been injured and were constantly irritated by the broken skull.

Captain Oswald stood the shock of the operation well, and his condition was so favorable last night that he seemed out of danger.

SING SING MEN INDICTED.

True Bills Returned Against Five Convicts Who Have Escaped.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Rocco Stalzo, Frederick Spence, Louis Pillods, Dennis O'Day, and Thomas Rizzo, convicts at Sing Sing, who have escaped, were indicted today by the Westchester Grand Jury for their flights.

One convict was brought here from Sing Sing. This was John Flanagan, a long-term man. He was in the Grand Jury room only a short time. Several keepers were called into the room, one at a time. Some of the men indicted have been recaptured.

William Willett, the former Long Island Congressman, will be held in the county jail here under a writ of habeas corpus until the Grand Jury takes up the series of assault cases in Sing Sing. He then will be a witness. There are fifteen cases of assault in which information has been laid before District Attorney Weeks. Willett was assaulted at least once because of his decisions as Judge in Sing Sing.

ALBANY, Oct. 22.—Although no official report of the assault on Stephen Kromanski in the brush shop in Sing Sing Prison yesterday by J. Steinhart, a fellow-convict, was received at the Superintendent of Prisons' office here today, it was learned from an unofficial source that Kromanski is in a critical condition. The assault was made with a hammer, and the victim's skull had to be trepanned after the fractured bone was removed. It was said that the assault was the outgrowth of Kromanski's expressed disapproval of the Welfare League.

MAKES PLEA FOR MRS. MOHR

Widow of Murdered Physician Seeks Dismissal of the Indictment.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 22.—A motion to quash the indictment returned by a Grand Jury against Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr, charged as an accessory before the fact in connection with the murder of her husband, Dr. C. Franklin Mohr, on Aug. 31, was made in the Superior Court here today on the ground that the statute under which the indictment was drawn is unconstitutional.

Counsel for Mrs. Mohr claimed that the statute permits the indictment of persons who may "innocently aid and assist in the commission of a crime," which, he contended, is in violation of a person's rights under the State Constitution. It was intimated that an appeal on this question would be taken to the Supreme Court.

SCHUMANN-HEINK AIDS SON.

Has His Accounts Settled, but He Is Held as Embezzler.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 22.—Henry Schumann-Heink, the contralto's son, was arraigned today before Recorder Carroll, in whose office he was clerk, on a charge of having embezzled $600. He pleaded not guilty. Bail was fixed at $1,000 and furnished by a bonding company.

A settlement of the discrepancy in Schumann-Heink's accounts was made yesterday with City Attorney Merrey by a lawyer who said he represented the prisoner's mother. Any additional discrepancies discovered, the lawyer said, would be settled.

FOSS HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Former Governor of Massachusetts Loses First Move in Libel Suit.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—Probable cause was found today against ex-Governor Foss in an action for criminal libel brought against him in the municipal court by Dennis D. Driscoll, a labor leader. Foss was held for the Grand Jury in $100 bail.

Driscoll, who is Secretary of the Trades Union Liberty League, alleged that Foss asserted in a recent campaign speech that while he was Governor Driscoll sought to be appointed Prison Commissioner, and promised in return to call off a strike then in progress in factories owned or controlled by Foss.

SEAMEN'S ACT ATTACKED.

Manufacturers Urge Congress to Amend or Repeal It.

Four provisions of the Seamen's act of last March 4 are cited in resolutions addressed to Congress yesterday by the Board of Directors of the National Association of Manufacturers at 30 Church Street as reasons why the act should be reconsidered by Congress with a view to its amendment or repeal. The new regulations become effective next Nov. 4 as to vessels of this country, and next March 4 as to foreign shipping, and on next June 4 abrogate conflicting articles of treaties with foreign nations regarding vessels of their nationality.

One of the provisions especially criticised is that requiring 75 per cent. of the crew "to understand any order given by the officers of such vessel," and the resolutions point out that this would prevent American ships in the Pacific trade from employing alien crews of Chinese or Japanese, though the experience of years has shown that such vessels may be operated safely with orders transmitted to the crew through petty officers speaking the language of the crew.

The resolutions contend that the provision requiring that 65 per cent. of the crew shall ultimately be able seamen is impracticable in operation and disregards the actual duties of deckhands in modern steamships, unnecessarily increasing the cost of operation under American register to a point of prohibition in competition.

An especial protest is directed against the minimizing of the offense of desertion, accompanied by the substantial requirement of half payment of the accrued wage in every port, and the provision requiring the Collector of Customs to refuse clearance to any vessel against which any reputable citizen may lay information, within six hours of its sailing, of violation of the language test and quota of able seamen rule.

The resolutions point out that these provisions put a premium on desertion by making it possible for deserters not only "to breach their contract with but a minimum wage forfeiture, but, through the Collector of Customs," to prevent "the clearance of the vessel by calling attention to the condition which their own bad faith can create."

Lastly, the association asserts that this nation will incite treaty powers to retaliatory legislation and compel the negotiation of new arrangements at "a most critical time in our international relations, deliberately arousing resentment as a preparation for the negotiation of new treaties" by abrogating next June all treaties and conventions, any article of which conflicts with the provisions of the Seamen's act.

REFUSES TO GO TO TOMBS.

Alleged Check Swindler Complains That the Food Is Not "Kosher."

Abram Whiskin of 80 Market Street, an orthodox Jew, refused to be committed to a cell in the Tombs by Magistrate Cobb in the Tombs Court yesterday, because the food for prisoners was not "kosher." He was held in $1,000 bail on a grand larceny charge, but on his own urgent request he was allowed to remain in the courtroom until a bondsman appeared. He also raised an objection when the Magistrate set the arraignment for today, protesting that he could not come to court on the Jewish Sabbath. The Magistrate, however, refused to make any further concessions.

Whiskin, who is employed in Jewish butcher shops to perfom the orthodox rites by which chickens are made "kosher" before slaughter, was arrested on the complaint of Albert Garlick, a butcher of 447 Water Street. Garlick discharged Whiskin on Jan. 15, but in accordance with a contract which was still operative he had to pay Whiskin $450.

Garlick paid the amount in the form of an check. On the following day, however, Whiskin returned and said he had lost the check. Garlick then stopped payment on the check, and gave Whiskin the money in cash, receiving from him a receipt, which was shown in court yesterday, and also a promise to return the check if it was found. The check was certified at the Germania Bank on Oct. 16. From another butcher Garlick learned that Whiskin had boasted of having cashed the check supposed to have been lost. He thereupon had Whiskin arrested for grand larceny.

While waiting for a bondsman yesterday Whiskin was closely questioned by Deputy Assistant District Attorney Deuel with reference to any knowledge he might have concerning the murder of Barnet Baff on Nov. 14, 1915. Whiskin was willing to talk freely, but, according to Mr. Deuel, he could tell nothing that would in the least help to clear up the mystery surrounding the crime.

SHOT BY ARSON GANG.

Maryland Fire Marshal Wounded While Making Arrests.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 22.—State Fire Marshal G. Edward Myers was shot through the right eye and probably fatally wounded tonight at Odenton, twenty miles from here, when he and ten Baltimore policemen caught three men engaged in an attempt to set fire to the big canning plant of George M. Murray & Son. The men under arrest are Harry Miller, said to be an Italian; Gottlief Freund, and Harry Goldberg.

The capture of the men was the result of an elaborate "plant," engineered by the State's Attorney's office. Having learned of the existence of the alleged arson gang, the State's Attorney put Joseph Broening on the case. He got in touch with the three men, it is alleged, and made an agreement with them whereby they were to set fire to a designated place if assured that it was insured for a sufficient amount.

Broening under the name of Anderson took out a "fake" insurance policy for $12,000 on the canning factory, having previously made the necessary arrangements with the owners and tipped off the Fire Marshal's office when the arson was to be attempted. The plot, of course, did not contemplate the actual destruction of the property.

The police say that Miller did the shooting. They found a revolver with one chamber empty on him.

The sleuths opened fire as soon as the three men reached the plant, took their prisoners, and declare they found dynamite and coal oil in the possession of the accused.

Collier Kronprinz Olaf Lost.

Special to The New York Times.

SYDNEY, N. S., Oct. 22.—The lighthouse keeper at Pleasant Bay reports wreckage picked up off the lowlands, presumably from the collier Kronprinz Olaf, which sailed from Sydney for Montreal three weeks ago and is believed to have foundered.

To Study European Conditions.

To promote insight into European conditions, the Women's Conference of the Society for Ethical Culture announced yesterday a course of eighteen lectures on "The Science of Nations," to show ideals and contribution to civilization, at the house of the society, at 2 West Sixty-fourth Street, on Friday mornings, beginning Nov. 5.

CORPORAL BARTELL ACCUSED

Third Arrest for Alleged Quartermaster Frauds at Fort Adams.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 22.—Corporal Henry S. Bartell, Quartermaster's Corps, was placed under detention today in connection with the frauds discovered in the Quartermaster's Department at Fort Adams by Captain Ralph M. Mitchell. His was the third arrest made in connection with these irregularities. Further revelations are expected.

Corporal Bartell returned to Fort Adams today in response to a telegram, having been eight days over leave of absence. He was acting Commissary Sergeant at the post for four months. Captain Mitchell said tonight that the offenses laid to his door included appropriating money and charging up unsold articles as sold. Bartell denied any guilt. A United States Marshal will arraign him before United States Commissioner Frank Healy in Providence.

The accused Corporal is 24 years old. He came to the Quartermaster's Corps last April, his first enlistment in the army. He was born in Bremen, Germany.

Sergeant's Clerk Thomas R. Hanton of the Quartermaster's Department of Fort Adams was arraigned before Commissioner Healy today on the charge of unlawfully taking away vouchers of contracts with a Newport business house. He pleaded not guilty, and was held in $3,000 bail for further hearing next Wednesday. He could not furnish bail.

PRIEST'S AUTO KILLS BOY.

Lad's Relatives Riot When He Dies in Newark Hospital.

Ralph Cerrato, 12 years old, of 23 Fourteenth Avenue, Newark, was injured mortally at South Orange Avenue and Jones Street, that city, yesterday by an automobile owned and driven by the Rev. Father Benedict Flum, assistant rector of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, who was returning from a visit to the sick at the German Hospital. The boy died in the City Hospital. A charge of manslaughter will be made against the priest.

According to Father Flum, the lad ran from behind a trolley car directly in front of the automobile. Witnesses told the police that the boy had been riding on the back of a wagon. After the lad jumped off the vehicle he walked around the rear of the trolley as the priest came along in the machine, which was going about seven miles an hour. Father Flum told the police that he did not see the boy until it was too late.

With the assistance of bystanders Father Flum placed the boy in the automobile and made a quick run to the City Hospital. There it was found that young Cerrato had suffered a fracture of his right leg and internal injuries. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Cerrato, were summoned. When they arrived at the hospital about twenty relatives accompanied them. After young Cerrato died the parents and relatives made such a demonstration that the police reserves of the Fifth Precinct were called to quiet them.

EVIDENCE HALTS TRIAL

But John Corso Is Found Guilty of Stealing Cycle That Whistled.

The trial of John Corso, 22 years old, a printer, of 107 West Third Street, for burglary in the Bronx County Court yesterday, was interrupted for ten minutes by the whistling of Exhibit A.

The exhibit was a motor cycle which Motor Cycle Patrolman John Oschenhirt of Traffic Squad C, said Corso had stolen from a garage adjoining his home at 5,727 Broadway on the night of Sept. 17.

Some practical joker in the courtroom stuck a pin in the tire of the motor cycle as it leaned against the Judge's bench, and the air streamed out at the important part of the trial with a cheery, whistling sound that prevented the hearing of the testimony. It was found necessary to wheel Exhibit A out of the courtroom in order that the trial might proceed.

The jury found Corso guilty of burglary. Judge Gibbs remanded him to the county jail for sentence next Friday. One of the witnesses for the defense was Dora Schimmelfried, who testified that she was the wife of Corso. On the assumption that this statement was untrue, Judge Gibbs held her on a charge of perjury.

Editor Indicted for Libel.

The Richmond County Grand Jury yesterday handed in indictments for criminal libel against Joseph W. Burke, editor of The News-Independent, a weekly published at Port Richmond, and the Richmond Borough Publishing Company. Charles W. Wood is President of the company. The libel indictments followed the publication of articles attacking public officials of the borough.

Fire Destroys $100,000 House.

PLANDOME, L. I., Oct. 22.—A home owned by William H. Moffitt, real estate developer, and occupied by Arthur G. Meyer of West End Avenue, New York, was destroyed by fire this afternoon, with an estimated loss of about $100,000. The building took fire from a defective flue. The Meyer family expected to return to the city for the Winter next Monday.

Don't let Fatigue Poisoning ruin your health

Are you "dead tired" when you come home at night? Does your head feel dull? Are you losing your grip?

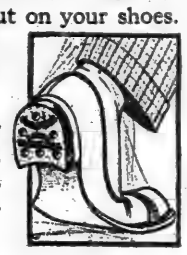
Doctor Mosso, a well-known authority on Fatigue, showed that fatigue creates poisonous substances in our bodies which ruin our health. He proved this by injecting the blood of a tired dog into the blood of a fresh, untired dog; the latter showed a marked increase in the heartbeat and breathing similar to that of the originally fatigued dog.

This experiment should be a warning to those who feel the poisonous effects of exhaustion creeping over them.

Avoid Unnecessary Fatigue

You save the wear and tear on a heavy automobile by using shock absorbers and rubber tires. You can save the delicate machinery of your body by wearing rubber heels. They take up the shocks and jars that are wearing you out and poisoning your whole system.

Have a pair of O'Sullivan's Heels of New, Live Rubber put on your shoes. You will feel the difference at once. More vim, less fatigue.



At any shoemaker or dealer; in black, white or tan; for men, women and children. 50c attached.

"Sure, I only came in this minnit," but from that "minnit" Peg won her way straight into the hearts of all the world.

Peg o' My Heart Perfume

"only came in this minnit," but it is as winsome and fresh and sweet as "Peg" in real life. Just because you may not yet know this adorable Peg o' My Heart in Perfume—and infused with infinite delicacy into talcum, toilet water, cold cream, face powder, sachet,—we are giving you this extraordinary opportunity to know it at little cost.

Peg o' My Heart Toilet Water, Cold Cream and Face Powder—the three carefully packed in a week-end box, 25 cents. They are miniatures of original packages, containing about a quarter the quantity. Ask for them at your merchant's.

This is an introductory offer only—and after its expiration Peg o' My Heart Toilet Requisites can be had only at regular prices.

PLEXO CREAMS

INCOMPARABLE

"For the Woman Who Cares"

Greaseless Cream 25c and 50c Cleansing Cream

Protects your skin from chap and wind burn; will impart to your complexion the velvety bloom of youth.

Incomparable for ridding the pores of all impurities; will give the pure, clear complexion of perfect beauty.

These two essential creams are scientifically prepared to be used in conjunction with each other, and will produce results obtainable in no other way.

PLEXO EVENING WHITE

Imparts that soft, pearly white tone to arms, throat and shoulders. Unsurpassed for the evening toilette and dansant.

Does Not Rub Off

Positively the Last Week of the

Special "EXPORT" Sale

This Special Sale, recently inaugurated by us in order to move quickly our overstock of superb Refrigerators which had been built for shipment abroad, but which we declined to ship on account of the unusual export conditions now obtaining, positively ends Saturday night.

Although the enormous demand at these low prices has nearly exhausted our surplus stock, there are still left some of our choicest models, in a variety of sizes and styles.

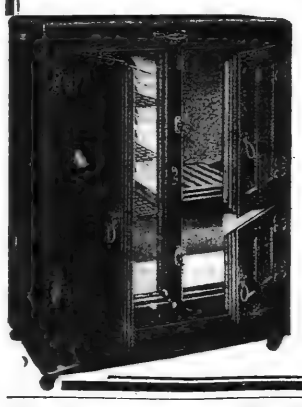
BOHN SYPHON REFRIGERATORS

need no introduction. They are the standard of the world to-day in scientific refrigerator construction. The dining cars and refrigerator cars on practically every railroad in the land are equipped with the Bohn Syphon. The Bohn Syphon Refrigerators for home use are constructed on the same efficient principle of rapidly circulating dry, pure, cold air, with consequent smallest ice consumption.

REDUCTIONS AVERAGE 35%

from list prices.

All sizes, in both wood and white porcelain exteriors, are reduced in price during this sale. The saving to you averages 35 per cent. If you need a Refrigerator, or want a better one, here is your chance. But you will have to act quickly, as we reserve the right to withdraw this special sale without notice.



A RARE BARGAIN

Our popular Model 43 (here illustrated) 3 doors, size 40x22x49 inches, lined with genuine steel-fused white porcelain enamel, (not paint,) ice capacity 125 lbs., list price $64, is an exceptional bargain at the special sale price of $41.60. No such value has ever been offered before, and probably never will be again.

For Future Delivery

On a small deposit we will hold your Refrigerator for future delivery. If you cannot call, write or telephone for our handsome catalog. Remember, we are the manufacturers, not middlemen.

Ageing, wrinkled skins

How to keep them young

As soon as you let your skin grow lax and sluggish, the tiny wrinkles, and then the bigger ones, will come.

But you can keep your skin so firm, so active that it will defy wrinkles and will retain its clear, smooth youthfulness. To do this, make the following Woodbury treatment a daily habit.

Bathe your face and neck with plenty of Woodbury's Facial Soap and hot water. If your skin has been badly neglected, rub a generous lather thoroughly into the pores using an upward and outward motion, until the skin feels somewhat sensitive. After this, rinse well in warm, then in cold water—the colder the better. Whenever possible, rub your skin for a few minutes with a lump of ice, and dry carefully.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. This treatment with it cleanses the pores, then closes them and brings the blood to the surface. Use it regularly and it will keep your skin so firm, so healthy and active that it will resist wrinkles and retain that fresh, clear youthful look you want it to have.

Do this today! A 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment. Go to your druggist or toilet counter today and get a cake. Begin at once to get the benefits of this treatment for your skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is for sale by every dealer and druggist in greater New York and, in fact, by dealers everywhere throughout the United States and Canada. Made by The Andrew Jergens Co., New York and Cincinnati.

FRENCH FORM JUNCTION WITH SERBS; RUSSIANS FLANK GERMANS FROM SEA; ITALIANS PUSH AHEAD ON WHOLE FRONT

PARIS LIFTS BALKAN VEIL

Debarkation Continues 'Under Best Conditions,' War Office Says.

SERBS WIN RAILWAY FIGHT

Saloniki Hears That Bulgars Are Being Forced Back on Istip After a Hard Struggle.

TEUTONS IN NEW INVASION

Force Crossing of Drina at Vishegrad—Serbians Attacking Along the Nish-Sofia Line.

LONDON, Sunday, Oct. 24.—Widely separated, though synchronous, diversions by the Entente forces on land and sea, designed evidently as preliminary moves to relieve the strain on Serbia pending the time allied troops of sufficient weight can reach the Balkan front, have marked the development of the last thirty-six hours.

An indication that the Allies are soon to make their strength felt in the Balkans is the announcement from the Paris War Office last night that French troops had formed a junction with the Serbians north of the Greek frontier.

On the other fronts a new activity prevails. Italy, having confined herself for weeks to local actions, isolated attacks, and counterattacks, has launched a general offensive along the Tyrol and Trentino frontiers of Austria. Allied warships, including Russian, have battered the Bulgarian ports in the Aegean, and Russia has increased the pressure on the eastern front, and by a coup of combined land and sea operations has flung men and guns on the coast of Courland, ninety miles northwest of Riga, thus menacing the flank of General von Below's army, which for so long a time has been trying to take the Baltic port.

The news of this surprise landing is disclosed in the Berlin official communication, which describes the forces landed as of small strength.

French Join the Serbians.

Official announcement of the junction of allied forces with the Serbians is made by the French War Office as follows:

The debarkation of French troops at Saloniki continues regularly and under the best conditions. The French troops who crossed the Greek frontier have formed a junction with the Serbian troops.

A Serbian official communication refers to the precence of French troops in the neighborhood of Strumitza, but in none of the communications since the beginning of the new Balkan campaign have the English been mentioned.

Serbs Win Fight for Railway.

A dispatch from Saloniki describing the hard-fought struggle for possession of the Saloniki-Nish railway says:

"According to dispatches reaching here the fight seems to be turning against the Bulgarian invading force of 6,000 men, for the most part Macedonian irregulars, who were joined by the Bulgarian inhabitants of this district.

"The Bulgars advanced toward Istip on Wednesday, stormed Fort Veles, lying east of the Vardar, and forced the Serbians across the river. Before evacuating the Serbians burned the eastern town and took up a position west of Tools. They immediately opened an effective artillery fire, halting the Bulgarians' attempts to cross the river. They retained command of the railway, which, although damaged, was not destroyed.

"This morning (Friday) the Serbs, who were recrossing the Vardar, were slowly driving the Bulgarians back in the direction of Istip. Simultaneously the Bulgar attempt to cut the railway at Vlandovo was promptly repulsed. The report that Turkish cavalry was engaged in these operations is not confirmed."

The Saloniki correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following dispatch, dated Oct. 22, regarding the situation in the Balkan war theatre:

"Notwithstanding the crop of alarmist rumors, the situation, as gathered from authoritative sources, is as follows:

"The railway between Gievgeli and Nish is open except at Troinegrad, a point just below Vranya, where the line has been cut by two regiments of light Bulgarian cavalry. The Austro-Germans, who have put into the field against the Serbians only twelve divisions, (240,000 men,) of which three are Slav, comprising men from 17 to 30 years of age, are being held in check along the Danube. The Bulgarians are attacking the Serbians with only 200,000 men, leaving the Greek frontier unfurnished with troops."

Germans Cross the Drina.

The latest Berlin report concerning the Serbian campaign says that German troops have forced the passage of the Drina River at Vishegard, driving the Serbians southward. The fighting here is still on Austrian soil, in the Province of Herzegovina, but it undoubtedly means the beginning of a new invasion of Serbia from the west.

On the north, from Slatina, about ten

Garvin Says 500,000 Men Would Stop Germans; But Fears Kaiser Will Soon Be in Constantinople

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sunday, Oct. 24.—J. L. Garvin, writing in The Observer, says:

"Responsible citizens of both parties, whatever their previous views, must prepare themselves for the probability that within a short period from now, a period variously estimated at from ten days to three weeks by good judges, German supplies of all kinds will be pouring in full traffic through Sofia toward the Bosporus. Afterward, unless something unexpected happens as a result of the arrival in the East of Sir Charles Monro, the German Emperor may take his special train via Vienna and make his spectacular entry into Constantinople.

"Whatever else may happen, it seems quite certain that the Serbs, taken between the upper and nether millstones, must be crushed out of the northeastern corner of their country, and that German supply trains will soon be running from Belgrade through Nish and Sofia toward Constantinople. These supply trains may not carry many German-Austrian soldiers of the rank and file, but they will carry officers, non-commissioned officers, technical experts, guns, munitions, every sort of fighting tackle and apparatus. The Turk will then be a far more formidable enemy against both Great Britain and Russia.

"We must choose between two broad alternatives. Either we must abandon the Balkans altogether, or any military policy we adopt in that quarter must be thorough. It must be pursued with the utmost resolution and power. Again, if we act, we may act in one of two ways, since no third course has yet been suggested. We may accumulate a large force and base it on Saloniki, as Sir Arthur Wellesley was based on Lisbon, or we may develop matters nearer Gallipoli. The aim of action from Saloniki would be to win Greece and place the Bulgarians in Macedonia between a choice of courses involving retreat or destruction and then an advance to the north. The Germans and Austrians would have to maintain large forces in Northern Serbia, or would risk the loss in a few months of their new won connections. That would be the nearest analogy to our military policy of over a hundred years ago. It would be in any case effective, and might be decisive.

"If Britain, by further reinforcements, could raise the allied strength on the Balkan mainland to 500,000 men within a stipulated time, so as to win the adhesion of Rumania as well as of Greece, that would be a certain means of retrieving all that is jeopardized."

ITALIAN ATTACKS GAINING GROUND

Important Successes Are Won in the Carso Region and at Other Points.

2,000 PRISONERS ARE TAKEN

Guns and Munitions Also Captured — Austrians Lose Heavily in Tyrol.

ROME, Oct. 23.—Large and important successes by the Italian forces in their offensive movement all along the front are reported in the official bulletin issued by the War Office tonight.

In the Carso region, especially, the Italian advance seems to have been very fruitful of results, over 2,000 prisoners, seven machine guns, and a large quantity of war material having been captured.

A mountain on the western bank of Lake Garda has been carried by assault and a fort has been won in the Cordevole valley. The forward movement in the Upper and Middle Isonzo districts continues.

The official bulletin reads:

The energetic offensive taken by our brave and unwearying troops continues, with important successes all along the front.

On the western bank of Lake Garda we have taken by assault Monte Nordic, thus completing our advance in the valley of he Ledro.

In Cordevole Valley pressure on the enemy positions at the Col di Lana continues. Half way up we took a small fort and made some prisoners. Between the height of the Boite and head of the Rienz our columns are closing the valleys flanking and crossing Cristallo Range and converging on the Schluderbach, sweeping away the obstacles prepared by the resisting enemy.

In Carnia successful raids by our troops in the Degano and Chiarzo Valleys are constant. We have taken twenty-one prisoners, of whom one was an officer.

The importance of our success on Oct. 21 in the Seisera Valley is confirmed. Here we have buried 426 enemy dead.

Along the upper Isonzo and middle Isonzo our troops progressed yesterday on Little Javorock, on the hill of Santa Lucia, east of Plava, and on the hill of Oslavia. Two violent counterattacks against Mrzli were repulsed. On this part of our front we made 151 prisoners, including two officers.

On the Carso our troops, on the morning of the 22d, resumed the attack with renewed vigor. In spite of the solid resistance of the enemy, supported by a violent and concentrated fire from numerous powerful batteries, our infantry, after severe and alternating struggles, succeeded in advancing along almost the whole front, especially toward San Martino.

Two thousand and nine prisoners, of whom sixty were officers, fell into our hands. We also took seven machine guns and a large quantity of munitions and other material.

A previous bulletin, given out last night, said:

Our offensive, happily begun along the Tyrol-Trentino frontier, is developing and extends along the whole front to the sea. In the Giudicaria Valley, where the capture of Monte Melino secured for us a large amount of war material, we have occupied Monte Sei Pini and the hamlet of Titano Inferiore. In Val Lagarina the same time along the heights of the range of Monte Cristallo, reaching the rugged crest of Rauchkofel, and by the plain which extends toward Schenderbach, taking enemy trenches and making some prisoners.

In the Felta Valley raids by our detachments inflicted serious damage on the enemy defenses and enabled us to take arms and munitions. Leopoldskirchen has been burned to the ground. In the valley of Seisera

GERMAN RAIDERS OR FILIBUSTERS?

Washington Puzzled to Know Meaning of Strange Yacht Movements in the Gulf.

MAY ATTACK OIL TANKERS

Or Aid Mexican Bandits — Interned Officers' Escape a Factor—Patrol by Cruisers.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—A tangled skein of circumstances is perplexing officials here, pointing either to the institution of a new commerce aiding campaign by Germans in the Caribbean Sea or the beginning of a series of filibustering exhibitions against Mexico. The Justice, Navy, and State Departments have worked on the mystery for several weeks, but without success.

The departure of several sea-going motor boats, the escape of six German warrant officers interned at Norfolk, and the mysterious movements of several American yachts in the Gulf of Mexico have baffled not only officials of the Washington Government, who are anxious to prevent violations of neutrality through the use of American territory as a base of naval operations, but also agents of the British Government, who fear a commerce-raiding campaign is about to be begun against tank steamers which carry oil from Mexican ports for the use of the British Navy. The circumstances, which officials believe are all connected in a general way, follow:

Series of Strange Happenings.

1. The sudden disappearance of six interned German warrant officers from Norfolk in the motor yacht Eclipse, provisioned for several days' voyage.

2. The arrival at Buenaventura, Colombia, of an American ship, the Academy, from San Francisco, heavily provisioned. One of the owners of the Academy telegraphed the Government here that the vessel had no instructions to go to Colombia. The captain of the vessel asserted that he put into the Colombian port for repairs. Some doubt exists as to the real identity of the vessel, and officials have sent to the American Consul at Callao the registry number of the Academy and have asked for a complete description.

3. Two yachts—the Alameda and the Ventura—have been lying at Key West, Fla., for several weeks. Louis Van Horn of New York City, who owned them originally, is understood to have sold the Alameda to a General Pasquero. The Ventura was recently stolen, it is alleged, from Key West by "Mexican pirates" and recovered by an American coast patrol.

4. An American sailing vessel called the Two Sisters went aground on an island off the coast of Louisiana recently, claiming to have come from Mexico for repairs. Her status is under investigation.

5. The American ship Zealandia left Pensacola, Fla., suddenly at night with a large stock of provisions on board for Tampico, Mexico, and with a number of Germans in her crew. The arrival of the vessel at Tampico has been reported, where an investigation will be made. An American flag painted on the side of the vessel originally had been painted out. It is alleged the vessel flew the German flag at sea, but this has been denied by the owners.

6. The American yacht Ethel disappeared from Jacksonville, Fla., within the last few weeks and has not been found.

Two Official Theories.

Officials have two theories as to the meaning of this series of happenings. One is that wealthy Mexicans in the United States are financing filibustering expeditions that have some connection with the raids in the vicinity of Brownsville, Tex., and the other is that small boats putting out from the United

Conan Doyle Sees Victory for England; One Successful Pounce Will Win

Declares Mistakes Few and Triumphs Many, Scouts Fantastic Fears, and Pictures the Germans as Walking Into a Trap in Their March Into Turkey.

By SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE.

Copyright, 1915, by The New York Times Company.—(Copyrighted also in Great Britain.)

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Duke of Wellington, in one of those acute philosophic asides which cropped up occasionally in his businesslike correspondence, remarked that a deep vein of madness ran through the British character. The noun is perhaps rather harsh, but our best friends have found marked eccentricity in our mental processes. One of the most curious manifestations is a tendency to excessive and ill-timed self-depreciation, not universal, for we have our optimists and even our braggarts, but so clamorous at times as to engage the attention of the whole world and completely deceive them as to our real situation and character.

The historian will find the phenomenon at all ages of our chronicle, and I expect that the original blue-skinned savage, as he poled his corracle along our creeks, was already lamenting the degeneration of his stock. It has, however, grown upon us with the years, and surely the most absurd sight of all the ages is that of Great Britain during our generation moaning and sobbing over her own inefficiency, while rapidly gathering up as much of the earth's surface and of the world's wealth as she could possibly lay her hands upon.

No better illustration of this national tendency could be found than a contrast between the German and British press during the last few months. If one were to take them at their face value, one would imagine, to read these articles, that Germany was not only confident of the future, but had in the past reason to congratulate herself upon the results of her efforts against Great Britain, while, on the British side, one would gather that there was great despondency and that up to now we had no reason to be satisfied with anything which we had done in the war.

Yet in our heart of hearts we are as certain of victory as that tomorrow's sun will come, and a dispassionate survey will satisfy any student of history that no great war in which our country has ever been engaged has been marked in the same space of time by such triumphant successes as those of the last fourteen months. Our troubles have been those of our allies; our victories have largely been our own. Germany can make a good showing up to date against the coalition. Against Great Britain she has been beaten at every turn.

What Britain Has Done.

Consider what we have done in this short space of time and compare it with the opening of any of our greater wars. In our war against the French Republic it was nearly two years after its inception that Howe's victory gave us a gleam of success. In the great war against Napoleon it was again two years before Trafalgar ended the fear of imminent invasion and twelve years of very varying fortunes before we won through.

Now, look at the work of fourteen months. We have annexed the whole great German colonial empire, with the exception of East Africa and a district in Kameruns; we have swept the German flag, both imperial and mercantile, off the face of the ocean; we have completely sterilized her fleet; we have repelled her serious submarine attack; played our game so skillfully that the flux of time shows us stronger, not weaker, in comparison; we have conquered South Mesopotamia from the Turks; we have completely repelled their attempted invasion of Egypt; we have helped to save Paris; we have, with French and Belgian assistance, but mainly by our own exertions, stopped the advance upon Calais, inflicting a loss of several hundreds of thousands upon the Germans; we have, by our intervention at Antwerp, helped to extricate the Belgian Army; finally, and greatest of all, we have raised an enormous voluntary army, which is large enough to turn the scale between the European forces, and we have converted ourselves, with wonderful adaptability, into the great factory and munition store of the Allies.

That is our story, and if any man cannot see that it is a wonderful one, he is not merely a pessimist, but blind.

What have we to put on the other side of the account? I am dealing for the moment with large results, and not with details. Where have we failed?

The Dardanelles.

In the whole world our most severe critic could only point to one place—the Dardanelles. But have we failed in the Dardanelles?

I believe that if we should never force the strait the enterprise has none the less been worth the undertaking. We have lost 100,000. How many have the Turks lost? Certainly not less. We have held up a great body of their best troops, who would otherwise have been operating against us on the Egyptian and Mesopotamian fronts or in the Caucasus against the Russians. General Ian Hamilton has taken the pressure off General Maxwell on the one side and General Nixon on the other.

But the greatest of all the results from the Dardanelles expedition is that it has united us with Russia as nothing else could have done. She cannot now say, as she might have said, that we thought only of our own empire. We have spent our blood and our ships in trying to force the gates which close her in. When the episode remains a historical reminiscence, like the passage of Admiral Duckworth in 1807, this great result will still remain.

Again, one sequel which may prove to be of vital importance may spring from the Dardanelles. It is our operation there and the consequent danger to their ally which has drawn the central powers on to their southern advance. The immediate result of this has been to bring into the war the Serbians, who for nearly a year had been practically neutral, and so to open up a new front, which has to be supplied by the Germans with men and munitions. It is tapping a fresh vein in a body which is already slowly bleeding to death.

What have they to gain there? Putting aside all megalomaniac visions of an advance upon India, what is their practical goal? Should they overwhelm Serbia, it will go to our hearts, but will make no difference in the war, since Serbia had, as I already remarked, been obliged to rest upon her oars for many months. What next could they advance upon? Constantinople, with a strong allied force intrenched upon their flank at Saloniki? Would the Turks really welcome an army of Bulgars and other hereditary enemies marching into their capital at the expense of their hereditary friends?

And if we assumed everything and suppose them at Constantinople, what then? How will they cross the Egyptian desert and meet the quarter of a million whom we could line up on the Suez Canal? What will it profit them to be strong in Asia Minor by the time that attrition has worn them down east and west and the ever-thickening allied lines are pushing inward for Berlin?

German Gains Shadowy.

The more steadily one gazes at these fantastic fears the more they shred into mere phantoms of the imagination. The gains of the German expedition are shadowy and distant, the losses are immediate and obvious, and it is the Dardanelles pressure which has drawn them forth.

But have we failed at the Dardanelles? It is surely too early to say. Mr. Winston Churchill has been criticised for saying that only a few miles separated us from victory. Never was criticism more carping and unintelligent. What he said was an obvious fact, as true today as then. Had he said a few weeks, or even months, criticism would be intelligible, but he said miles, which was obviously true. What he meant to convey, and what he did clearly convey, was that if we had the victory we could not be robbed of the fruits of it as the Germans were robbed of their Paris, but that the prize was in our hands the instant the success was attained. He did not underrate the formidable task. Still less would any one do so now. But we do not know the difficulties of the enemy. We cannot tell what weakening may occur or what change may come. We are ready on land and sea, and it is as true as ever that it is only a question of one successful pounce.

It is surely too early to write off the Dardanelles loss and to put it down as the one single item which should appear upon the debit side of our account, but I repeat that if there is no forcing of the strait, none the less the historian of the future may very well find that the operations have had far-reaching and fateful results.

Britain's Western Campaign.

On the military side, in our campaign of France and Flanders, great events have been so close to us and have confused us so with their successive concussions that one has to cultivate some mental detachment in order to get their proportion and their relation to each other or to the permanent values of history. So far as the British campaign is concerned, the following summary would in the main be correct:

The campaign began by defeats, honorable and inevitable, but none the less defeats, at Mons Aug. 23, and Le Cateau Aug. 26. This was followed by the victory of the Marne, Sept. 6-11, in which the honors rest with our French allies, and the drawn battle of the Aisne on Sept. 13, in which for the first time immoble lines were formed, a confession of failure upon the part of the invaders. There followed the long-drawn, scrambling action of La Bassée, Oct. 12-31, in which no result was obtained and immobility was again enforced. Simultaneously was fought the first battle of Ypres, Oct. 20-Nov. 13, in which the Germans were repelled, with very heavy losses, in their repeated attempts to capture that city.

This brought the fighting of 1914 to an end, save for the sharp fight at Festubert, Dec. 19-21, where the British sustained a reverse on the first day, which was equalized by a successful counterattack on the second.

The campaign of 1915 began with the costly British victory at Neuve Chapelle on March 10, involving the permanent capture of the village. There followed the local but intense fighting of Hill 60, which ended in a complete British victory at the time,

FREIGHT REFUSED BY RAIL AND SHIP

Jersey Central Railroad, Overwhelmed, Declares an Embargo for Two Weeks.

ALL OTHER LINES ARE TAXED

Southern Pacific Unable to Accept More Shipments for Its Vessels at Gulf Ports.

Munitions and food supplies for export to Europe congest every railroad and every coastwise steamship line running into this city.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey declared a two weeks' embargo against all freight, which it hopes to end next Wednesday, while the Southern Pacific Company is refusing new consignments for its vessels of the Sunset Route, both at New Orleans and Galveston. The Lehigh and the Erie are struggling to clear their sidings of the long lines of cars. The pressure on the New England railroads is enormous, for they traverse the great ammunition belt. The piers of the New York & New Haven are now surrounded by lighters on which men are working night and day to keep pace with the accumulating freight.

Although most of the railroads have issued no formal embargo, the word is passed along all the lines to the agents to hold back all the freight they can. The trouble is not due so much to the lack of cars as to the pressure at the terminals caused by recent labor troubles. About the harbor the conditions are at their worst, and the traffic managers are at their wits' ends to keep pace with the demands of shippers.

Strike Largely Responsible.

T. B. Koons, Vice President and General Freight Traffic Manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, said last evening that the transportation facilities for the last two weeks had been choked and that the embargo had to be declared, in order to give the road a chance to clear its terminals.

"From Easton to New York," he added, "one can see the evidences of the tremendous pressure on this road. The demand for foodstuffs alone is enormous. The bulk of the freight consists of war supplies of all kinds. The great number of engines from the Baldwin Locomotive works in Philadelphia, the heaviest kind of freight, is a big factor. Automobiles, lathes, shrapnel, shells, guns, all manner of munitions are glutting the system.

"The business was abnormally large even for perfect conditions. Then came the strike of longshoremen and the employes of contractors controlling lighterage in New York harbor. The fact that men were induced to stop work for only a few days resulted in piling up thousands of tons of material at all the freight terminals and along the water front. There are steamships enough to carry away the cargoes if we could only get the material on board.

All Roads Congested.

"That is why freight is being held back all along the line and the yards are crowded with the unloaded cars. However, we see light, and by next Wednesday the embargo will be lifted if all goes well. The labor troubles have been adjusted and the machinery is beginning to run smoothly again."

Inquiries at the yards of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company in Jersey City revealed the same state of affairs. The agent in charge said that the movement of grain and of foodstuffs toward New York had been unprecedented. Last Wednesday was the heaviest day for wheat shipments by way of Buffalo he had ever known. The elevators were filled to full capacity with the grain of the West, and there were long lines of waiting cars whose contents were yet to be lighiered to the steamships.

There were at one of the East River piers of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, yesterday afternoon nine lighters on which freight was being handled all at once. The New York Central, which handles many agricultural products from the West and from up the State, is having all that it can do to keep pace with traffic. The Pennsylvania Railroad has for days been regulating the traffic along its lines with the greatest care, and last night everything was reported as moving well.

Ship Lines Refuse Freight.

The congestion is nation wide, as is shown by the conditions with which the Southern Pacific Company is struggling. W. A. Worthington, one of the Vice Presidents of the corporation, said last evening that the congestion at New Orleans and Galveston was due to several causes.

"From California and many parts of the West and South," he said, "enormous quantities of food have been sent to New Orleans and Galveston for shipment to New York. Much of this freight consists of California canned goods. The steamships of our line have been unable to take all the cargoes offered, and, therefore, at those two ports we will not accept any more freight until next Sautrday.

"The storm at Galveston last August,

WOMAN IS KILLED BY FRIGHT IN RAID

Mrs. Emma Casey Faints When Police Enter Flat and Dies Later.

SEVEN HELD AS GAMBLERS

Detectives Swoop Down on Three Apartments, Alleged to be Poolrooms.

The doorbell of Miss Mary Ramsey's apartment on the second floor of 107 West 126th Street, near Lenox Avenue, rang a few minutes after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and a woman who opened the door saw Lieutenant Dan Costigan and half a dozen men of his Gambling Squad standing in the hall. She tried to slam the door, but Costigan put his foot against it, and then entered with his men.

In the front room about thirty women who had been drinking tea sprang to their feet screaming. Instantly the place was in an uproar. Half a dozen women slipped out of their chairs to the floor in fainting fits. Others rushed for the rear rooms, the windows of which opened onto fire escapes. But they encountered more of Costigan's men, who, with grinning faces, peered in at the windows from the fire escapes up which they had climbed.

Mrs. Emma Casey of 260 West Twenty-first Street, was among the throng in what the police say was one of half a dozen flats operated in Harlem by women gamblers for members of their sex. She collapsed at the appearance of the detectives, and presently was attacked by hemmorhage. Costigan called Dr. Jennings from Harlem Hospital, and the surgeon had Mrs. Casey put to bed in a room in the flat, saying she was too ill to be moved. A few hours later Policeman Barry of the West 123d Street Station, who had been left on guard beside her, telephoned for a doctor, and Dr. Brasted hurried from Harlem Hospital. He found Mrs. Casey dead.

Long before this, however, Costigan had emptied the flat of all but Mrs. Casey and those who stayed to attend her. He made prisoners of five women and two men, the latter found in a rear room of the flat, and let the other women go after taking their names and addresses. Among them the Lieutenant said were a mother and her eighteen-year-old daughter. There were a few young women in the throng, but most of them were between 30 and 50 years old.

Many of them gave addresses in excellent neighborhoods, and Costigan said the majority seemed to be more than well-to-do. All were panic-stricken and hurried from the place as soon as Costigan released them. In the street they had to run the gantlet of a hooting crowd which had learned of the raid and which blocked the street. There were no automobiles to carry them away, although residents of the neighborhood said it was no uncommon thing to see half a dozen motors drawn up outside the building in which is Miss Ramsey's apartment.

Besides Miss Ramsey, whose real name the police say is Bodkin, the detectives arrested Miss Kate Peterson, 200 West Fourteenth Street; Miss Evelyn Littlewood, 121 West 126th Street; Miss Catherine Gettings, 711 Eighth Avenue, and Lawrence Leslie, 107 West 126th Street, and Louis Simons, 99 Second Avenue. All were charged with keeping and maintaining a gambling house, and were locked up in the West 123d Street Station, where bail was given for them later.

Evidence against the place, and against five other apartments where poker games were run and bets might be made on the races, was obtained by Mrs. Ada Brady, a former police matron, but since last January a second grade detective. She took a friend, Mrs. Mary Garland, with her to corroborate her testimony, and yesterday Chief Magistrate McAdoo issued John and Jane Doe warrants for seven women and three men.

Those who were not found in the Ramsey flat were Mrs. Isabelle Dore of 162 West 128th Street, who is 65 years old; Margaret Smith, a maid employed by her; Mrs. Anna Stolts of 378 East 129th Street, the Bronx, and John Coleman, who gave his address as that of Mrs. Dore. Mrs. Brady took Detective Johnson to Mrs. Stolts's home, and he arrested her after he had kicked into another room and locked up there two fox terriers that attacked him. Then Detective Hughes went with Mrs. Brady to Mrs. Dore's and arrested her, her maid, and Coleman.

Complaints of gambling houses run by women for women have been received in anonymous letters at Police Headquarters ever since Sept. 23, and Mrs. Brady worked until ten days ago before she began to get the evidence.

According to her, the racing returns were telephoned to each flat from some central exchange that she could not locate and for which the police are still searching. It was the custom, she said, for the women to meet daily in different flats, learning at the conclusion of each afternoon or evening session where the next meeting was to be held.

Although only three flats were entered yesterday the police believe they have the managers of all the games.

Arthur Casey, husband of the dead woman, was notified by the police and went to the 123d Street Station to care for his wife's body. He said Mrs. Casey had had heart trouble for two years, and had been warned against excitement and exertion.

THREE HOURS IN REVIEW

New Jersey Delegation Wins the Greatest Demonstration.

LED BY WOMAN IN MOURNING

All Ages, from Seven Months to Seventy Years, Find Places in Long Line.

CHEERS FOR THE CAVALRY

Darkness Dims Beauty of Costumes as Last Ranks Pass Reviewing Stands.

The latest, biggest, and most enthusiastic of suffrage parades, and the one which, according to the leaders of the suffrage forces, will be the last ever needed to plead their cause in New York, marched up Fifth Avenue from Washington Square to Fifty-ninth Street yesterday afternoon, blazoned the whole city with the yellow of its banners, and brought out what seemed to be the larger part of the population of Manhattan Island to look at them.

The weather was cool enough to make marching comfortable, but not too cold to spoil the pleasure of the onlookers, at least during the first part of the parade. The armies of suffrage came from all the five boroughs, from across the river, and from many up-State counties. The marchers included men and women of all ages, from veterans in their seventies to babies pushed along in gocarts. While as a rule the men and women marched in separate organizations, it was not uncommon to see a family together—the suffragist husband or wife having at last won over the recalcitrant partner, and the baby in a carriage or carried papoose fashion in a basket on the back.

There were dozens of organizations in the parade. Besides the white recommended by suffrage leaders as a uniform there was a remarkable diversity of costuming. The yellow suffrage banners were interspersed with the blue, white, and orange of the city flag, the blue, white, and yellow of the Woman's Suffrage Party, and the green, white, and purple of the Woman's Political Union. And everywhere there were banners, mottoes, and placards announcing, with picturesque variety of phrasing, arguments for giving suffrage to the women.

Finished by Moonlight.

It was a long parade—begun in mid-afternoon and finished by moonlight. And while thousands had rifled away the avenue was still packed with onlookers when the men's brigade—some thousands this time in place of the valorous ninety-two who were jeered in the first of the parades only four years ago—came along just in front of the army of automobiles that ended the procession.

The parade left the square at 3 o'clock sharp and the head passed the official reviewing stand in front of the Public Library at Fifth Avenue and Forty-first Street at 3:40. It was ten minutes after seven—three hours and a half later—before the last of the automobiles crossed Forty-second Street. Mayor Mitchel, who had stood up all afternoon watching the paraders go past, had left at 6:20, but President McAneny of the Board of Aldermen and President Marks of the Borough of Manhattan, reinforced by Dudley Field Malone, were left to represent the administration to the end of the spectacle.

For all that it was the biggest suffrage parade, there was considerable diversity in the estimates of the number in it. The suffrage leaders had the names of something over 48,000 men and women who had said they would be there, rain or shine, and many who were not listed came later and got into line. The official counters for the suffragists had not reported last night to Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, chairman of the parade committee of the Empire State Campaign Committee, but Police Inspector Myers, in charge of the traffic squads, estimated the number at 50,000. Chief Inspector Max Schmittberger thought there were about 35,000. Anything between that number and 60,000 was the general estimate of people who stood up for three hours and a half along the line of march and watched the files of women, usually reaching from curb to curb, sweep up the avenue.

Times Count 25,340.

But an observer for THE NEW YORK TIMES, who kept tab on the paraders with the aid of a comptometar, got the following result:

Women marchers	20,789
Men marchers	2,539
Women on horseback	74
145 automobiles at six persons each	870
Musicians (57 bands)	1,068
Total	25,340

In the last suffrage parade on May 3, 1913, 9,600 persons were in line.

Anyway, it was undoubtedly the biggest and best suffrage parade, and undoubtedly it made a big impression on the crowds. And perhaps the thing that made the biggest impression, unless it was the sight of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw marching cheerily in disdain of the offers of automobiles made by other suffrage leaders, was the turnout of the New Jersey suffragists, who, after losing by a majority of 50,000 last week, came back with a big and determined delegation under the banner "Delayed but Not Defeated."

The crowds began to gather about Washington Square soon after midday. The bright sunshine and the bracing air combined to bring out both marchers and sightseers early. Under Washington Arch the International Woman's Suffrage Association, to which was assigned the post of honor at the head of the parade, was getting together under the protection of Troop 110 of the Manhattan Boy Scouts, part of the large force furnished by Deputy Commissioner A. G. Clarke. Down both sides of Washington Square North, along the western border of the park, in West Fourth Street, Washington Place, and Waverley Place, and in all the side streets off the lower end of the avenue the crowds were gathering under the banners of their organizations.

Long, Cold Waiting.

Hawkers selling yellow pennants, chrysanthemums of yellow paper, yellow balloons, and other suffrage emblems were everywhere, and the bustle of marchers hurrying about in search of the standards around which they were to rally kept a big force of police busy keeping the line of march clear. Down the side streets, incidentally, there was much sorrow later in the afternoon, for the parade was so long that some of the organizations did not march into the avenue from the side streets where they had mobilized till long after sundown, and there had been long hours of chilly waiting.

The College Women's League had started their band playing one-steps and, aided by a large can of coffee furnished by friends, they managed to pass the time very pleasantly, but the men who had volunteered to march for suffrage in some cases lacked the courage to stand still and shiver for suffrage, and when the Men's League, under James Lees Laidlaw, finally swung into the parade it was found that a large percentage of its members were missing. Many had drifted away in search of firewater.

There were 1,500 policemen on duty along the line of march to handle a crowd which Chief Inspector Schmittberger estimated at 250,000. It had banked the avenue on both sides when the parade emerged from under the Washington Arch at 3 o'clock, and at every cross street the throngs pressing forward to get a view down the avenue and too many to be handled by the three or four policemen on each side of a block, had bulged out and pushed a great semi-circular mass of people toward the middle of the street. All along the curb, despite the strenuous efforts of the police, the crowds were pushing off the sidewalks and overflowing the street, and when the parade, stretching from curb to curb, swung up the avenue it was evident that there was going to be a series of collisions.

Police Autos Force Crowds Back.

Ahead of the parade went Chief Inspector Schmittberger and Inspector Myers, each in a little automobile. They drove slowly, hugging the curb, warning the police along the line that they must keep the crowds back and hurling orders at the onlookers that made them shrink back to the pavement line. Thus they kept the avenue clear for a few blocks, but by the time the parade was approaching the lower twenties the crowds were bunched thick at every cross street, and would not give way.

Then the Inspectors tried new tactics. One on each side of the street, they drove slowly along the curb. People who were in the way hastily pushed back and regained the curb, often as the front wheels of the cars were almost on their feet. Schmittberger and Myers stood up in the cars and yelled at the crowds; the police lining the curb pushed and shouted and threatened, and now and then the Inspectors got out and helped the men push back the swarming onlookers. Then they drove their cars straight at the crowds that were pushing out from the side streets—driving headlong at the mob, with a terrific clamor of horns that made their approach the more terrifying. As the cars swung sharply off and skirted the edge of the crowd the front line of the throng bent back like a piece of whalebone, and crowding them close, urging, commanding, threatening, and pushing them back, the two Inspectors managed to get the street clear from curb to curb.

The worst trouble was at Twenty-second and Twenty-sixth Streets, but all the way through the Twenties and Thirties the two little automobiles went ahead of the parade and chased the sightseers out of the line. Motor Cycle Policeman Geidel was sent ahead to warn the police lining the streets that they would have to keep the crowds back, and in the Forties and Fifties the avenue was clear.

Woman Slaps Schmittberger.

At Thirtieth Street Chief Inspector Schmittberger had to get out again and help the police at the crossing shove back the crowd. In the front rank was a woman in red, who resented the unseemly haste of the proceeding, and slapped the Chief Inspector across the face. But apparently thinking that it was woman's day anyhow, he ignored her, and she stayed in the front rank and saw the parade through to the finish.

By the time the front ranks had topped Murray Hill the avenue was kept clear by the marchers, who spread from curb to curb; but once afterward the crowd at a cross street broke through and halted the procession, and in forcing them back a motorcycle policeman ran his machine into the crowd and caused a small panic that vanished after a moment with no casualties.

At 3:40 precisely the Mayor and the other city officials in the reviewing stand rose as the front ranks of the parade passed them. It was led by a platoon of mounted police, and then came the Seventh Regiment Band. Miss Ethel Stebbins, the grand marshal, followed on foot, and then came the International Woman's Suffrage Alliance, representing suffrage organizations the world over.

Among the mottoes which they displayed prominently were "King Albert favors votes for women"; "Denver votes; why not New York?" "Reykjavik votes; why not New York?"

For America First.

The International Alliance was followed by a group of women in red, white, and blue, headed by Florence Fleming Noyes as Columbia. They carried a banner with the motto "America First." The suffrage States were represented by women in white, wearing capes lined with blue and red satin. Miss Edith Wynne Matthison represented New York, following the twelve States, where women are enfranchised.

The banner of the National Woman's Suffrage Alliance was followed by the President of the organization, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, in the gown of a Doctor of Divinity. She drew the first outburst of general applause from the spectators, whose mood, at first the main one of raillery, began to assume seriousness at sight of her sprightly step and smiling face. The crowd continued to become more serious, too, as the other paraders passed by, until toward the end the spectators seemed for the most part as interested in the fate of suffrage as the paraders themselves.

The National Woman's Suffrage Association marched with clasped hands, swinging clear across the street from one curb to the other. Some of them, like many of the other organizations, had themselves girdled by a rope of evergreen garlands carried by the women on the outside of the crowd. Those who were not in costume nearly all wore the yellow sash with the inscription in black, "Votes for Women"; and the white parade hat was generally worn even by those who did not don white suits.

A line of marchers represented The Woman's Journal and Suffrage News—they wore yellow caps and aprons. Not far behind them came a big float, drawn by four gray horses, which were led by men wearing long red coats and high gray hats with red bands. On the float was Mrs. Philip Bolleau, wife and model of the illustrator, costumed as Victory; and with her, costumed as Liberty, Equality, and Justice and as the six continents in which suffrage is spreading, were nine other women who have been prominent in suffrage work.

Jersey Full of Hope.

Then followed a delegation of suffragists from Connecticut, and then New Jersey. People who had expected to see the Jersey suffragists disheartened by their last week's defeat were disillusioned, for some of their mottoes were, "Delayed, but not Defeated"; "New Jersey's Next Egg—100,333"; "New Jersey's Banner Town, Rutherford—Yes, 199; No, 413." A woman in purple, bearing a pair of yellow scales, represented Justice; another in yellow personified New Jersey, her arms bound, and escorted by three black-draped figures representing Prejudice, Crooked Legislation, and Indifference.

At the head of the Woman's Political Union of New Jersey marched in full mourning its President, Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, whose husband died about three weeks ago.

The passage of the New Jersey contingent drew a round of cheers, and set the crowd on edge. The Jersey delegation was followed by the Press and Publicity Council of the Empire State Campaign Committee, headed by Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, and bearing a banner reading: "President Wilson Wants Votes for Women."

Long Line of Teachers.

Then came the teachers' branch of the Empire State Campaign Committee, headed by its President, Miss Katherine Devereux Blake. The teachers marched sixteen abreast; most of them wore dark suits, with the yellow sashes making a slash of color straight across, and as they filled the avenue, a moving mass, it looked to the bystanders as if there were fifteen or twenty thousand of them. As a matter of fact they counted up to 3,140. One of their banners said: "You trust us with the children; trust us with the vote." After the long army of public school teachers, several divisions of whom wore cap and gown, came a body who announced themselves as "Public-Spirited Private School Teachers."

The first American flag was carried at the head of the New York State Woman's Suffrage Association by Mrs. Herbert Carpenter. In this division marched representatives from nearly all the counties in the State, Westchester and Nassau having the largest representation. After them came the Woman's Suffrage Party of Greater New York, marshaled by boroughs and forming the greater part of the parade. Manhattan came first.

It was marshaled by assembly districts, with here and there a separate organization inserted between. Hundreds of girls from the Washington Irving and Julia Richman High Schools marched under their respective banners; the Henry Street Settlement sent up a big delegation; the Equal Suffrage Committee of the Society of Friends marched under the banner of Peace and Persuasion, and cheers and a round of cheers greeted the French Committee of the Woman's Suffrage Party, which marched past with a band playing the Marseillaise.

All Carried City Flags.

Of the district delegations the one which made perhaps the best showing was that of the Nineteenth Assembly District. Every woman carried a city flag, and they marched in excellent order.

In the Manhattan delegation was a blindfolded figure—Mrs. Clarence Henderson—in white, representing Justice, her arms bound by a rope held by three men, modestly masked, who wore black, and were designated by the labels "Vice," "Ignorance," and "Prejudice." A gray-haired woman carried a placard which said "Getting there after trying forty years," and the crowd cheered vigorously.

The Women's Trades Union League, with polyglot banners, followed the Manhattan delegation, and was followed by the German-American Committee. Then came Brooklyn, headed by a line of girls dressed in the costume notable for its yellow and black striped skirt, which has become famous from the posters with which the suffragists have been advertising the election on Nov. 2. A row of girls further down the line carried parasols with the motto, "The Sun Will Shine for Us Nov. 2."

A battalion of girls from Bay Ridge, in a striking white and blue costume, made a break in the long ranks of yellow flags; a laugh was raised by a little covered wagon containing two children and decorated with the appeal, "We Want Our Mothers to Vote."

All the way through the procession at intervals were representations of the States of the Union—the suffrage States in white, the nonsuffrage States black, and Illinois, where there is partial suffrage, in a white dress with black polka dots. Such a pageant in the Brooklyn delegation was surmounted by the banner, "Make New York White."

Behind Brooklyn came the Bronx and Queens, the Patrolmen's Wives, the Letter Carriers' Wives, and Richmond. This was the last of the Woman's Suffrage Party of Greater New York.

By this time darkness had fallen and the elaborate costumes were somewhat less effective under the street lights. But that did not detract from the effect caused by the appearance of the Equal Franchise Society, headed by its President, Mrs. Howard Mansfield, and marshaled by Miss Elizabeth Burchenal.

Its members all wore white, with sashes of light blue, bearing the name of the organization in silver letters, and they marched with a splendid military formation that was by far the best of any of the organizations in the parade. After them came the College Women's League, uniformed in cap and gown, and bearing the banners of more than a dozen colleges and universities.

The women classified according to occupation were headed by a large battalion of nurses, marching under a banner with the name of Florence Nightingale. Then came doctors, dentists, lawyers, explorers, authors—there was an extraordinarily large number of authors—dancers, singers, social workers, and, finally, life-savers. They were real life-savers, too—teachers of swimming.

The public had to take the occupations of most of those in this division on trust, but not so with the singers; they marched up the avenue singing marching sons, and now and then when the procession halted to let cross-town traffic through the crowd took up the airs.

Printerettes Out in Force.

In this division marched the "printerettes"—wives, sisters, daughters, and mothers of the members of Big Six—Typographical Union 6—bearing proudly a banner which reminded the crowd that Big Six was the first to demand equal wages for equal work, and that it had taken this stand in 1869.

The Women's Political Union was next in line, marching under its banners of green, white, and purple. It had had a parade of its own over on the east side—beginning at Houston Street and Second Avenue, marching up that avenue to Twenty-second Street, and then crossing to Fifth Avenue to join the main parade.

One of its features was the suffrage van driven by Miss Mildred Taylor, drawn by two white horses decorated with the colors of the Union and preceded by the "Van Guard"—a party of women who have campaigned with Miss Taylor all Summer. There were three occupational groups here—explorers, artists, and librarians. All the bands in this division played the same air—"Democracy," the composition of Miss Agnes Stout.

After the Women's Political Union came the Men's Equal Suffrage League, commanded by its President, James Lees Laidlaw. The men who had survived the rigors of the climate marched up the Avenue singing and cheering—many of them walked with a military carriage apparently acquired not so long ago at Plattsburg, and not a few of the under officers in charge of sections of the line shouted military commands at their men.

As they approached the grandstand everybody got ready to salute Sergeant John Purroy Mitchel, and Will Irwin, who became acquainted with the details of military etiquette on the stricken field of Ypres and elsewhere in foreign parts, took his station at the corner of Fortieth Street and told everybody as they came along just what to do. But the Mayor had fled, and George McAneny received their salutations.

And after the men came the automobiles, six abreast, carrying the suffrage enthusiasts who were too sick to walk—and their husbands, judging from the appearance of some of those [illegible]. The parade went on to the Plaza. As its leading ranks reached the opening at the corner of the parks the girls representing Liberty and the enfranchised States grouped themselves around the fountain, while fifteen bands in unison played "The Star-Spangled Banner." Then the procession moved on and broke up at Sixty-first and Sixty-second Streets.

AS WOMEN SAW THE PARADE.

Proud of Numbers and Beauty and Good Effect on Crowd.

The suffrage women drew a long breath of satisfaction last night. The big parade had been a success in effect and numbers and beauty, and they felt that it would never again be necessary to make another such demonstration to show that the women were really in earnest in their desire to vote.

They also asked if the city fathers would ever again be willing to sit three and one-half hours on a chilly day, or even on a pleasant one, to look at such another demonstration. Its length and comprehensiveness was a surprise even to the women themselves.

At 3 o'clock Dr. Katharine Bement Davis and her civil service girls were standing ready to march at one of the side streets a few blocks above Washington Square. At 6 o'clock they had been ten minutes on the way, and had reached Twenty-second Street. It was so with all the later divisions. They had stood in the chill wind for hours, and they marched with more vigor than the women who had gone long before.

The women had predicted when the enrollments began to grow that the head of the parade would be disbanded before the last divisions started. This came so true that the women on a float in one of the first divisions reached Fifty-ninth Street, returned to Washington Square, where they donned their street garb at the house of Mrs. Philip Lydig, took a taxicab, and returned to the Plaza, and had then an hour and a half of the parade to watch.

Every Rank Represented.

It was not only pride in the showing they made to the voters that rejoiced the leaders, but the great solidarity among women which the parade showed. There were women of every age in it, and little children, some of them in their mothers' arms; there were women of every rank of society, every political and religious belief, every art, profession, and trade, and they were all joining hands in their desire for citizenship.

The New Jersey women made a great impression upon the spectators, and they also impressed the other women marchers. They represented the suffrage spirit. They had gone through defeat and come out of it undaunted.

Another feature of the parade which appealed was a fine Junoesque woman of the finest mother type holding to her breast a big baby boy. He was such a boy as a mother of that type would give to the world, but a heavy burden for weaker arms. She was in the group of the labor women with their red badges, which made a picturesque feature among the marchers, though they came late in the afternoon just as darkness was falling. They had waited hours, and the mother and child with them, but she marched every step of the way with her baby, cheered on every hand.

There were other babies in the parade in their mother's arms, and several pushed in carriages. It was expected that a large number would be out, but the cold winds undoubtedly prevented.

The greatest number of children in one body were in the children's auto van of the Woman Suffrage Party. Rose O'Neill decorated the van for the occasion, and the warmest-looking baby in the whole parade—and none of them looked cold—was the big Kewpie which swung from the front of the van dressed in cold breezes and nothing else.

The most splendid division of the parade, the women thought, and probably the spectators, represented the States where women vote. They were represented by a group of fine-looking young women of the Boadicea type, or perhaps that was suggested by their close-fitting, rather warlike, headdresses of gold. The name of each State was in a panel running lengthwise down the front of the costume; the inner part of the cape-like garment that was worn showed the stars and colors of the United States flag; they wore golden sandals on their feet, and, with their hands extended on each other's arms, there was something fine and free about them as they swung along.

Spectators Respectful.

There was little outside excitement in the parade. The spectators were universally respectful. There was comparatively little applause, but dots of suffrage yellow were to be seen here and there all along the route of the march. There were no unpleasant demonstrations.

A great effort had been made to make the parade dignified. Even Uncle Sam, who was to have been a feature with Miss Columbia, was omitted at the last moment for fear there might me something grotesque in the representation. There were not as many handbags in the parade as their have been in previous ones. There were a half a dozen or more which seemed to be in one division. But in the others the women found other places to tuck away their handkerchiefs and their carfare for returning home. One woman carried a camp stool. There were many others among those who had long waits who wished that they had.

MEN MARCHERS WERE BRAVE.

Stood in Cold Four Hours—Then Traffic Broke Their Ranks.

Afar off a band struck up "Tip Top Tipperary Mary" and James Leeds Laidlaw, President of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage, on the back of a very restless horse, gave the order that brought the male paraders from East Thirteenth Street into Fifth Avenue and the line of march. It was nearly 6 o'clock. The electric lights were on along the avenue and only the automobile section of the parade was waiting to pass into the line.

It had been a time to test the loyalty of the 2,000 or more men who answered the call to parade. Since 2 o'clock a majority of them had been standing in Thirteenth Street waiting for the signal that was to set them into motion. The band ahead of the men's division struck up as the head of the line of marchers swung from the side street. It had been intended that the men at this point should lustily sing, to the tune of "John Brown's Body,"

We will vote for Suffrage,
We will vote for Suffrage,
On next Election Day.

The marchers sang, but not with lusty voices, and the song was almost drowned out by the universal cry of "We're off at last." However, the song was not abandoned, and more than once on the march it swelled out with vigor.

Many Mottoes on Banners.

Beside the banners of the various organizations represented in line, there were banners at intervals upon which were inscribed sentiments that would appeal to the voter. Here was one: "The home is the bulwark of the nation. Give it two votes instead of one." Well up in the line was this: "Be real sports and let them vote."

Another was inscribed: "We trust our women. Do you?"

Upon another banner was: "A vote for suffrage is a vote for justice."

Upon a great blue banner carried outspread by a score of men was inscribed in yellow letters: "Vote for woman suffrage in the State of New York."

During the long wait the bands played well-known airs at frequent intervals and the men danced to keep themselves warm. By the time word came to move the lines had been formed and broken up a dozen or more times. Time after time false alarms sent the men running from all directions to their places in the ranks. Finally the cry was raised so often that it was not heeded. In consequence, when the time really came to go forward there was a wild scramble upon the part of those who had left their places, and this caused some confusion, but all was soon straightened out.

By this time, however, the men had become acquainted with those about them, and a sort of afternoon reception was being held upon the street. The marchers discussed everything from politics to the war in Europe, the latter apparently being the favorite topic. When they were not discussing things in general the members of the league were singing. They sang solos and in chorus.

Every man in the long line wore a yellow chrysanthemum in his buttonhole and was armed with either a yellow or a blue suffrage pennant.

Controller in First Line.

There were about 2,500 men in the line. Ahead rode Colonel Frederick S. Greene, Chief Marshal, and the valiant marchers in the first rank were Controller Prendergast, Supreme Court Justice Guy, Judge Wadham, Herbert Parsons, Everett Colby, Robert Underwood Johnson, Immigration Commissioner Frederic C. Howe, Tenement House Commissioner Murphy, and Oswald G. Villard.

It was planned to have a company composed of veterans who had marched in 1911, but when some 200 had claimed the honor of having taken part in that first march the Captains gave up. Among those who captained the various companies were George Middleton, George Creel, Will Irwin, William W. Mackay, and Dr. Allen McCurdy.

Behind the first company marched two dozen men each holding the side of an outspread American flag. Behind these color bearers walked men of all occupations. A body of white-coated milk wagon drivers of the Sheffield Farms Company kept sending up their cry, "We want a union! We want a union!" and back of them came a group of college and university men who at intervals broke into the unintelligible cries of their particular alma maters.

There was more respect shown for the men marchers as well as for the women by those on the sidewalks than at previous parades. This was shown when the head of the Men's League got fairly into stride in Fifth Avenue. The veterans who had marched in the days when the men were saluted as "Lizzie" sensed the change, and saw in it an outward effect of the fight women have been making for the right to vote. There were many—mostly very young working girls and men, also very young—who glibly saluted the men and mildly jeered as they went along, but compared to other days this was of small account.

Halted Often By Traffic.

It took the central body of the men's division just forty minutes to reach Twenty-third Street. Stops were frequent as the lines were halted to allow traffic across town to pass. By the time Twenty-third Street was reached the men were entirely cut off from the front section, where a band was merrily playing a marching air.

At Thirty-fourth Street even the faint strains of this band could no longer be heard. The same thing happened with the division that brought up the rear. This became separated from the detachment ahead, and soon such a distance intervened that all chance of "catching up" was lost. Fortunately this section had a band to cheer it along the way.

Shut off from music before and behind the unfortunate central division stumbled along, keeping step to the shouts of "Right, Left, Right, Left," as best it could. Some kept no step at all. In this division marched William N. Loew, 70 years old, a veteran of the civil war, who kept stimulating the men to military performance with command and warning of "right dress." Mr. Loew was one of the oldest men in line, if not the oldest.

Ahead marched his daughter, Mrs. Rosalie Loew Whitney, wife of the Secretary of the Public Service Commission, and further ahead and commanding a company of her own marched his granddaughter, Mrs. H. A. Constant. Mr. Loew was very happy and very enthusiastic, and said so. A conspicuous figure in the division was Percy Richards, a singer with a fad of going without his hat and coat. He looked cold, but said he was not.

The crowd that lined the sidewalk cheered the men at Twenty-second Street and gave a Chautauqua salute. "Hurrah for the men!" shouted a stout woman who stood under a street lamp waving two suffragette flags. As she repeated her cry the crowd took it up, and for a block each way ran the cry "Hurrah for the men!" Down the line the college men caught it and turned their college cries loose. This pleased the spectators, and the "hurrah" grew in volume, and so did the college yells. When the order came to march again both sides were still shouting.

Dared to March for $1.

After crossing Twenty-third Street the delay had opened such a gap in the ranks that the men in the rear section had to run two blocks to catch up with those ahead. Three times on the march they had to double quick and this pleased the crowds greatly. All sorts of good-natured advice was shouted and some of the stout marchers were guyed in the most personal way.

"Look who's here!" shouted a tall thin man at Twenty-sixth Street. "Look who's here!" he kept repeating in a voice that could have been used for a fog warning. For a long time he kept this up and varied it with more or less good-natured chaff that caught the fancy of both the marchers and spectators.

Two young women stood near a corner and argued loudly whether one of them would be willing to march if the other gave her a dollar. That they were not suffragists was apparent.

"I'll bet you would not go if I gave you a dollar," insisted one.

"Yes, I would. Try me and see," replied the venturesome one.

Opposite the pair and within a few feet of them there came to halt a distinguished-looking man with a Votes-for-Women badge pinned upon his coat. He listened for a second or two and taking from his pocket a dollar bill smoothed it out and advanced to the two young women.

"You may march with me," he said gravely, holding out the bill to the girl who would not take a dare. She would not accept the offer, but stepped back into the now laughing crowd with a very red face.

"Now will you be good," said her companion and a policeman laughed.

"The offer was made in good faith," said the distinguished looking marcher gravely as he stepped along briskly.

At Twenty-ninth Street the line halted and the traffic policemen let through the crosstown traffic. From the seat of a truck a driver looked down upon the marchers with good humored contempt.

"You guys ought to be home, scrubbing the floors," he announced.

The men shouted back an answer, but the truck and its driver had passed on.

Found Reviewing Stand Bare.

It was 6:45 o'clock when the central section of the Men's League passed before the grandstand. Word had been passed along to be sure and salute in passing the stand, but by the time the main body of men reached the stand it was apparently deserted except for a few women defying the chill wind. The marchers, however, saluted just the same.

On the way to the stand the men had to make another run to close up the gap in their ranks. This time they had to run over a block, and this was too much for Mr. Loew. He droped back into the extremely rear ranks.

If the men needed a reward for the long wait and the bandless march it came after crossing Forty-second Street. Here were most of the women who had already completed the march. They stood on both sides of the street and waved flags and cheered the men.

The men reached the disbanding point in East Sixty-first Street at 7:15 P. M.

"From every standpoint this has been the most successful parade ever held here in behalf of the cause," said Captain Middleton after the dismissal order had been given. "Even those who had the affair in charge had no idea of the number of men and women who were going to turn out. The defeat in New Jersey has only spurred the women to greater effort in this and in other States. It is worthy of note that after the defeat in New Jersey the enrollment in the Men's League for the parade doubled. Every one who has had anything to do with the parade is much encouraged."

SUFFRAGE FIGHT ON IN PENNSYLVANIA

Advocates for Amendment Claim Majority at Polls Nov. 2, While Antis Predict Defeat.

FEWER WOMEN INTERESTED

Activity in the Contest Does Not Compare with That in New Jersey—Liberty Bell Featured.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—With the final test at the polls only ten days off, the fight for and against the enfranchisement of women in Pennsylvania is now at its height. Pennsylvania has thrice the population of the neighboring State of New Jersey, where woman suffrage went down to defeat last Tuesday. Of women who have attained voting age, and for that reason should be vitally interested and presumably active if they coveted the right to vote, there are more than thrice as many in Pennsylvania than there are in New Jersey, and yet a day given over wholly to observation of developments in the suffrage struggle in this the biggest and the busiest city in Pennsylvania has failed to disclose anything to approximate the activities that marked the finish of the suffrage struggle in New Jersey.

There are fewer women in Pennsylvania actually interested in suffrage than there were in the smaller State of New Jersey. There are fewer women interested in the fight against woman suffrage here, too, than there were in New Jersey. This the antis of Pennsylvania freely admit, following up their admission with the explanation that they regard their case as safe with the jury of men voters that will hand down the verdict at the polls on Nov. 2.

Neither in the suffrage headquarters here nor in the headquarters of the antis was it possible for the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES to elicit any information to show the number of women actually enrolled on either side of the struggle. In the headquarters of the Woman Suffrage Association of Pennsylvania a young woman declared that there were "thousands" on the membership roll. In the headquarters of the antis the male campaign manager stated that they did not care to give out any information which might prove useful to the enemy.

On the admission of ardent workers in the suffrage campaign the woman suffrage issue has not made as strong an appeal to the women of Pennsylvania as it has in either New Jersey or in the State of New York. Mrs. George A. Piersol, who is at the head of the Philadelphia branch of the Woman Suffrage Association, in discussing this feature with THE TIMES correspondent, said that she had found the men much more responsive than the women.

"The men are much more ready to understand what we are aiming at than the women," said Mrs. Piersol. "Again and again when we ask women how they stand on this vital question, we get a reply something like this: 'I am on the fence, but my husband believes in it and is going to vote for it.'

"It is hard to have women fail to appreciate what we are trying to do for them, but it is perhaps only natural, after all, that, shut from contact with life as most of them have been, they should be slow in waking up to the importance of this issue. It is almost comforting, in view of it, to know that the men will have exclusive say at the polls on Nov. 2."

"Do you xpect to win?" Mrs. Piersol was asked.

"We hope to win," said the suffragette leader.

There are seventy-six counties in Pennsylvania. Early in the campaign the apathy among the voters with regard to woman suffrage in remote localities was most marked. It takes something to stir people in the backwoods of Pennsylvania. The woman suffrage workers decided to try. It was in this thought that the replica of the Liberty Bell—the real article is away on a visit to the Panama-Pacific Fair—had its origin. The women went to Troy to have it made. It is an exact copy.

They call it the justice bell and it has just completed a long journey through the rural counties in western and northern Pennsylvania, attended by suffrage orators, who claim that the bell, though silent, had sounded a tocsin which attracted crowds and aroused interest and helped to point a lesson which will lead to a veritable uprising among the men voters in rural districts in favor of the movement.

Mrs. Roessing, President of the Woman Suffrage Association, before leaving for her Harrisburg home today made the hopeful prediction that the woman suffrage amendment would win.

The anti-suffrage leaders do not hesitate to say that the suffrage amendment will be beaten by not less than 70,000; Mrs. Horace Brock, President of the Pennsylvania Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, puts the majority at a much larger figure.

SIMON DENOUNCES CAVELL EXECUTION

Home Secretary Says England Never Imposed the Death Sentence on Women Spies.

TRY THEM IN CIVIL COURTS

Women Prisoners Are Never Court-Martialed, but Have Full Legal Privileges.

MRS. CAVELL IS BRAVE

Sustained in Her Grief by Pride in Her Daughter's Heroic End—"Cavell Day" Proposed.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Sir John A. Simon, British Home Secretary and former Attorney General, in the course of an interview today, declared that the fate of Edith Cavell, executed by the Germans authorities at Brussels, had, and could have, no parallel in the records of Great Britain's treatment of persons accused of military offenses.

Even in cases of clearly proved espionage, Great Britain has, according to the Home Secretary, meted out to women no sentences of death.

"No woman," said he, "who has been tried for any military offence in this country has suffered the death penalty since the war began, or has ever been sentenced to death. In this country a woman, whatever her nationality, is always tried by a civil court."

The Home Secretary explained that evident differences existed in conditions in Belgium and in conditions in England, and that in occupied territory like Belgium the administration of the law was expected to be slightly different.

"But," he continued, "the Cavell case was not some sudden discovery calling for a drumhead court martial on the field of battle. This was Brussels, where the Germans claim to have established an orderly Government comparable with their Government at home and have appointed there a Civil Governor."

Asked regarding the method of dealing with military accusations against women in England, the Home Secretary replied:

"In the first place the accused person is brought before a tribunal which holds a preliminary inquiry, taking a summary of the evidence. The accused is always assisted by a lawyer, and a complete record of the evidence, and all documentary, is given to the accused, who is then allowed an interval to prepare for defense.

"If the accused is a woman the trial always takes places before a civil tribunal; if a man, he has the right to claim trial before a civil court, instead of by court martial, if he is a British subject. At the trial, whether military or civil, the lawyers for the defense have the same opportunities given the accused in the ordinary course of peace times."

Sir John said that there had been no cases in England precisely similar to that of Miss Cavell, but in cases of espionage, where the proof of guilt was indubitable and overwhelming, the same traditional privileges were allowed the accused.

Ten Years for a German Woman.

"In the last case involving a woman in this country," he said, "the offender was of German birth, though technically the subject of another country, owing to marriage. She was acting in association with a male spy, and was detected traveling to various points, in order to collect information about the navy defenses. The evidence against her was overwhelming, and did not depend solely on witnessing, but also on documents in her possession and letters written by her and her associate.

"Going through the preliminary procedure as previously described, she was tried in September by three civil Judges of our High Court and a jury, and was convicted, not of harassing German soldiers, but of deliberate, persistent spying for the purpose of providing the enemy with important information. Her male companion was condemned to death. She was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment."

Sir John explained that in addition to the privileges for an adequate defense already mentioned, an opportunity was always given for reconsidering sentence. In the case of a court-martial, reconsideration always took place in a civil court. In such a case as that mentioned, the condemned person had the privilege of appealing to a court of criminal appeal, and of demanding consideration of her case by the Home Secretary, who would advise as to the prerogative of mercy. In the particular case referred to the woman did not appeal.

The Home Secretary was asked what cognisance was taken by the British Government of inquiries by neutral diplomats in this country in connection with trials for espionage or similar offenses. To this he replied:

"In any case when the accused claimed to have connection with a neutral country we have not waited for application to be made to us. We have thought it right to give the neutral embassy information of the arrest. It has happened that in several cases the accused was carrying what he alleged to be a United States passport. In such cases, as in others, the American Embassy has been consulted, and solicitors, as counsel for the defense, have been retained, with the embassy's approval."

In answer to a question as to whether execution could in Great Britain follow sentence as quickly as in the recent case in Belgium, the Home Secretary said:

No Precipitate Executions.

"Execution never follows sentence here without a proper interval. Indeed, there was a case not long ago when on the eve of execution postponement was requested in order that some further representations could be considered. Sentence was postponed for a week, and the whole case was reviewed in the light of the new material.

"In a case now pending the accused says he wishes to call evidence from the other side of the world. We do not know whether the evidence will be helpful, but we have postponed final trial from August to December.

[This is perhaps a reference to the case of Kenneth Triest, the young Princeton student held in England on a charge of espionage.]

"Mind you, I am not claiming any credit for the British Government for our procedure. There is nothing unusual, to my mind, in taking care that accused persons have the fullest opportunity for their defence.

"The thing which strikes Englishmen familiar with our procedure as most incredible in the Cavell case is the calculated indifference with which the inquiries of the American and Spanish Ministers were treated. If the excuse is suggested that in war time severe or harsh measures have to be taken, our own experience is enough to show that it is possible to combine regard for the rights of the accused and respect for humane considerations with effective punishment of hostile offenses of the most serious kind.

"It would have seemed impossible for the Germans to have done anything to increase the horror they have produced by their behavior in Belgium; it would have seemed impossible also for them to have done anything which could cement more closely the bond of sympathy between England and the Belgian population. But they have accomplished both seeming impossibilities by one horrible act of brutality."

TO APPOINT A "CAVELL DAY."

Nationwide Tribute Planned—Asquith Will Attend Services.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The National Liberal Club is initiating a movement for the setting aside of a day to be known as "Cavell Day," on which the nation collectively will pay homage to the memory of Miss Cavell.

The memorial service next Friday, which was meant to be an unobtrusive tribute to Miss Cavell, is developing national proportions. Premier Asquith and other members of the Cabinet have announced their intention of being present at St. Paul's Cathedral, and public bodies and the leading hospitals throughout the country will send delegations.

MISS CAVELL'S MOTHER PROUD IN HER GRIEF

Comforted by the Thought That Her Daughter Died a Martyr.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sunday, Oct. 24.—The aged mother of Miss Edith Cavell has received a letter of condolence from Queen Alexandra and a telegram from Sir Edward Grey, in which the Foreign Minister says: "She has died, as she lived, devoted to the service of her country."

According to The Weekly Dispatch, Mrs. Cavell said to a friend who had remarked that pride in the possession of such a daughter ought to outweigh her grief:

"Yes, as you say, my daughter has died the death of a martyr, and that thought is sustaining and certainly does make me proud; but I am also a mother, with a mother's feelings, and, for all my pride in my daughter's heroism, I cannot help feeling sorely grieved."

Bertha Bennett Burleigh, daughter of the famous war correspondent, who met Miss Cavell when in Belgium in the early days of the war, says in The Weekly Dispatch:

"My mind is so crowded with memories of my exciting experiences among the Germans—three or four times I was in great danger of my life—that I cannot remember much that she said to me in her actual words; but these words I have never forgotten, nor the great force with which she said them: 'We are prepared to do all we can to help them to recover from their wounds; but to be their jailers—never!'

"She was referring to an order which had just been issued by Governor von Buttlar, stipulating six buildings which alone were to be recognized as hospitals or ambulances. She explained to me that the nurses, including herself, had refused to give an undertaking that they would also act as guards of their wounded. This means that she was not guilty of any sort of bad faith in doing whatever she could for the wounded, even to the extent of helping them to get away from the control of the German brutes. Certainly it was not for lack of the sharpest possible watchfulness that men were smuggled out of the country. Guards were stationed outside every hospital."

GIRL SHOT GERMAN SNIPERS.

German Newspaper's Charge Contradicted by British.

BERLIN, Oct. 23, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—An article appears in the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung today under the heading, "English Press Confessions." This newspaper, as quoted by the Overseas News Agency, says:

"The Manchester Guardian published an editorial on Oct. 18 about the heroic deeds of a French girl, which were certified by a British officer. This girl shot with a revolver from behind two German soldiers who could not be reached by the British.

"The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung observes that this deed was contrary to the laws of war, but was glorified by the French and English press. If this girl had been taken by our troops and shot by process of law, the English press would never stop talking about the barbarous ways of the Germans in making war, just as it is doing now because an Englishwoman in Belgium who was found guilty of treason has been executed."

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The article referred to by the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung in its comment on the case of Miss Edith Cavell, published in The Manchester Guardian, said that a French girl of 17 years had performed an act of heroism in a village captured by the British. According to this account, she helped to care for wounded soldiers who had been placed in a cellar.

The Guardian said that German snipers fired on this improvised hospital, and that the girl, taking a revolver from a wounded British officer, climbed out of the cellar and shot the snipers.

QUICK WORK SAVED COUNTESS

Wilson's Sunday Cable Prevented Her Execution on Monday.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—In connection with the Kaiser's pardoning the Countess de Belleville and Mlle. Thulier, it is learned here that Ambassador Sharp cabled President Wilson late Saturday asking him to intercede on the request of Mme. Waldeck-Rousseau, who is a relative of Mlle. Thulier. President Wilson received the message Sunday morning, and, it is said, cabled the Kaiser in time to stop the execution on Monday.

The Pope and the King of Spain telegraphed the Kaiser similar appeals.

OFFSETS TO CAVELL KILLING.

Germania Herold Finds Them in Alleged British Atrocities.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 23.—The Germania Herold of this city, in commenting on the execution of Miss Edith Cavell, says:

"If she was really of such extraordinary intelligence, she must also have been clear in her own mind as to the terrible danger in which she placed herself by using her beautiful profession as a nurse as a cover for hostile acts against the country which is conducting the Government in Belgian. One may have any opinion about her method of acting; one may even feel a certain measure of sympathy for the fearless and patriotic Englishwoman who risked her life in order to help her fatherland. No doubt it was very hard also for the German court martial to render the sentence of death. But it was an iron necessity.

"The German officer is accustomed to suppress his personal feelings when it is a matter of fulfilling an imperative duty. A court martial may take no regard of the person of any one who is guilty of the transgression of which this Englishwoman was accused; such a one is doomed to death, no matter of what sex. And all the English hypocrisy is needed precisely now, when members of the English navy, through the testimony of impartial Americans, are charged with brutal murder of helpless German seamen, to raise such an outcry about the execution of this Edith Cavell, who, at the moment in which she committed the fateful act, must have known quite well that she had forfeited her life in case she were caught."

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 23.—The comment of the Wächter und Anzeiger on the execution of Miss Cavell is as follows:

"Miss Cavell was a British subject on Belgian soil under German government. Professing to be a charity worker, she insisted on abusing the privileges of this calling to do recruiting work for the ranks which deal death to German soldiers. She was a belligerent of her own volition, trying to do as much harm to Germany as possible, and feeling herself protected by being a nurse and a woman. Prison punishment dealt out to Belgian women for the same offense, did not deter her. The work continued. The German authorities had to stop it, in duty to their own men's lives. It had to be done by sternest punishment, after the milder forms had proved unsuccessful. British women should not go to foreign territory under German rule in war time to conduct war in their own way against Germany. Their place is inside their own lines."

Jusserand Thanks Lansing.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Ambassador Jusserand of France today formally thanked Secretary Lnsing for having successfully interceded on behalf of the two nurses, Countess de Belleville and Mlle. Thulier, condemned to death for violation of the military regulations in Belgium. Ambassador Gerard mde a personal appeal on President Wilson's instructions to Emperor William on behalf of the two nurses and saved their lives.

DEATH'S TRIANGLE IN RUSSIAN POLAND

J. O'Donnell Bennett Describes the Desolation Thirty Miles West of Warsaw.

MANY PLACES OBLITERATED

Fine Trenches, Built to Last for Long, Abandoned by the Russians.

PEOPLE ARE COMING BACK

Cheerful if Home Consists Only of Half a Chimney, a Brick Stove, and Trees Around the Ruins.

By JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

SOCHACZEW, Russia, Sept. 25.—On a bright Autumn day I fared by roundabout ways thirty miles to the west of Warsaw and found myself back in the "triangle of death," where I used to watch the field sieges last Winter.

The triangle of death is empty now, but more deathlike than it was when men were dying there every hour. The fields were white then. Now they are yellow and rank with weeds, for there was no planting in the triangle of death last Spring. The whole region is very silent. It is difficult to convey an impression of the desolation, the loneliness, the stillness that brood over the scene. And yet, perhaps, I can convey it:

It is as if the land were a human being that had been fearfully beaten and left for dead.

This grim six months' work is done, and the work that shall make the plain smile again has not been begun. An occasional party of refugees is the only sign of life along the broad roads.

The triangle of death is tipped on the north by the considerable town of Sochaczew, (population, about 10,000,) on the south by Skierniewice, (12,000,) and at its apex on the west by Lowicz, (15,000). Its base is the twenty-mile line running north and a little east from Skierniewice to Sochaczew. The three points—Sochaczew, Skierniewice, and Lowicz—are important both in peace and war, and they remain so in the present deathly quiet in which is neither peace nor war, but "occupation." Hence they are well garrisoned with troops and are the centres of considerable forwarding activity.

But within the triangle of death there is not much left that is worth guarding. Its area—bounded by the twenty-mile line on the east, the fourteen-mile line on the northwest, and the twelve-and-one-half-mile line on the southwest—never comprehended anything but farms and sparse hamlets, and before the war there was hardly a less interesting region in Polish Russia. On this country-side there was nought to arrest the attention or touch the imagination of the traveler except the little town of Zelazowawola, where Chopin was born, and the truth is that that place lies a little outside the triangle.

On the Rawka-Bzura Line.

But now this is historic ground and I was glad to get back to it, though the hours spent in it have been sad ones. For I am again on the old Rawka-Bzura line which held for more than six months—from Christmas time until late in July—until finally the Russians, threatened by Hindenburg on the north and threatened in their rear by Mackensen on the south, fell back to their Blonie line, where, with the unwearied optimism that makes them like any place in Russia where the Germans allow them to tarry, they declared they would stay till doomsday and that Wrest saw might consider itself safe as long as that. This, they added, was "our real line."

Well, I was in those trenches of the abandoned Blonie line yesterday, and better ones I never saw. Of massive log construction, and reinforced by their transverse timbers, they show no sign of falling in despite Autumn rains, and they will stand for several years. Determined men could certainly have made a brilliant resistance there. But there was no brilliant resistance in front of Warsaw. By bombardment and by the threat of envelopment the Germans simply shouldered the Russians out.

This beautiful Blonie line, which was to have held till doomsday, held about two weeks. It is exactly half way between Sochaczew and the centre of Warsaw, and behind it is still another line of admirably constructed trenches which cut deep into the plain just in front of the western environs of the town. Those trenches were never stormed. The Germans found them empty when they came up to them.

Between the triangle of death and Warsaw the devastation is terrible, for in that tract it was not a case of leisurely field sieges, but of a swift advance, which hurled back and knocked down everything that stood in its way. The fine town of Grodzisk, which lies between five and six miles straight south of the town of Blonie, where the Blonie line centred, was fearfully shattered, and dozens of tiny hamlets in that part of the plain are simply obliterated. Many and many a one I have passed that has only a single wall of a single chimney left to mark its site. The rest is just a crumble of brick. At one such place I stopped. The farmer, his wife, his mother, and his four children had come back home.

Home was half a chimney, a brick stove at the base of the chimney, the trees around the ruins, and the fence inclosing the little plot of ground. The rest was the wide sky. [Deleted by censor.] But the baby was flourishing and gurgling, the mother was proud, and the pot was boiling.

The whole family were puttering about over bits of cooking and washing. One gathered sticks, one fed the fire, one stirred the pot, one sorted bricks, one shooed the flies off the baby. All were disgustingly dirty, which they could not help, and all were doing the best they could under conditions that made any kind of effort heroic. Commiseration did not seem to be the required note, nor even appropriate, but pfennigs and chocolate were thankfully accepted, especially by the baby, who tried to swallow the first, and did swallow the second.

Rebuilding Ruined Bridges.

Dire as is the ruin I encounter everywhere, I also behold heartening signs of rehabilitation. All over the Warsovian plain—on the Vistula, on the Narew, on the Bug, on the Bzura, and on the Rawka—bridges are down, but bridges are building. The work goes on days, night, and Sundays, and sometimes it comprises the raising and readjusting of the tremendous spans of steel bridges, sometimes the construction of new timber bridges, and sometimes both simultaneously, for at many points the carpenters have not quite finished the planking of a new timber bridge before the ironworkers have brought their derricks and furnaces and sledges into play on the twisted girders of a steel structure. (Deleted by censor.) It involves the transportation from Germany of enormous quantities of material, and what with the motley array of cars, the various uniforms, the workmen's camps, the sidetracks and the switch yards, it looks as if a circus had been strewn all the way from Lowicz to Brest Litovsk and beyond. There are long strings of the little brown Belgian third class passenger cars and scores and scores of green freight cars with the Belgian lion and the words "Etat Belgique" painted on them and lettered with the names of Louvain, Ghent, and Bruges. Most of them are loaded with steel and timber for bridge building and track laying, but some of the wicker baskets that hold 15-centimeter shells. To such uses has the rolling stock of the Belgian State railways come.

Sees No Starving Peasants.

Over on the westerly side of the triangle of death, at Lowicz, where I spent my shuddering New Year's Eve in a room without a pane of glass in it and was later quartered during some wonderful days with the Czernelowski family, I see again the bombarded tower of the ancient abbey church, but where the icy wind used to sweep in from the bleak plain I catch now the bright red of heavily hung apple trees. That did not indicate the presence of a starving peasantry to me, but then I have only seen the region and not heard passionate harangues about it in New York and Chicago.

Beyond the borders of the triangle of death the landscape is a dreary monotone of roofless churches, shattered villages, dismantled and destroyed factories, bridges blown to spars and tracks uptorn; within its border lies dead man's land—just miles of crumbling trenches and rusty barbwire entanglements and lonely graves and tracts of pine wood blasted by fire.

It's a strange thing that I was glad to get back here, and when I tried to think out why that was I decided that it must be because in a kind of crazy way I had been happy here—happy with excitement—for when I last traversed these fields they were not dreary or lonely, but throbbing and blazing with great fighting in a world-shaking cause, and life was very big down there to the south at Bolimow the Austrian guns were roaring all day and half of the night, and the ammunition carts were streaming out from Lowicz, and the flyers were circling far above in the wintry sky and flinging out their smoke signals like pretty banners.

miles south of Shabatz on the Save, to the Serbian lines east of the Morava and about twenty-five miles south of the Danube, the Austro-German armies are attacking the strong Serbian defenses, and Berlin claims some success in these operations.

For the Bulgarians, the capture of the fortified City of Negotin, in Northeast Serbia, is claimed by Berlin. The same report shows the Serbians are attempting an advance southeast of Pirot, along the Belgrade-Nish-Sofia railroad.

The official statement of the German War Office says:

At Vishegrad (Herzegovina) we forced a passage across the Drina and the enemy was driven from the heights south of this place.

The army of General von Kövess stormed the enemy's positions between Lukavika and Kosmai mountain, twenty-five miles southeast of Belgrade.)

The army of General von Gallwitz has driven the enemy across the Jasenica, east of Palanka, and has thrown the Serbians east of the Morava out of their positions on the Alexandrova-Orbyevo line, (twenty-five miles south of the Danube.) More than 600 Serbians were taken prisoners.

Giving way to pressure from both sides the Serbians also are retreating from their positions on the line of Kosulica mountain—Slatina height, (about ten miles south of Shabatz.)

Bulgarian troops took possession of Negotin and Rogljevo. Bulgarian attacks are in progress to the east and southeast of Kniazewac, (all in northeast Serbia.) Southeast of Pirot (southeast of Nish) they have repulsed Serbian advances with sanguinary losses.

An official statement from Sofia received by way of Amsterdam yesterday is as follows:

In Macedonia the enemy is being pursued further. On account of the extraordinarily bad weather, operations on certain portions of the front are being retarded.

The Serbian Minister to Greece announced yesterday that the German operations in the north of his country had been temporarily suspended. The Serbians are said to have assumed the offensive and at certain points to have forced back the invaders. The German entrenchments, he says, extend only a few kilometres along the line south of Belgrade.

The Minister states that the Serbians repulsed the Bulgarians, who entered Vranya. French and British Military Attachés arriving from Nish also say that Vranya was not occupied by the Bulgarians, who simply made a cavalry raid there and were driven off. They further declare that the Serbians have entered Bulgarian territory.

The Serbian Legation in Paris received yesterday an official dispatch, dated Oct. 21, giving the Serbian military situation up to Oct. 20. It follows:

EASTERN FRONT: A column advancing toward the village of Kraljevo Selo was repulsed by the Serbians and is retreating toward the village of Ochliane.

Greece's apparently authentic demand that allied soldiers to insure her safety, rather than Allied concessions to expand her dominions, constituted her price for aligning herself against Central Powers and Turkey, carries the implication that she regards the forces landed at Saloniki as far from adequate for the purpose.

Rumania's stipulation governing her entry into the war in behalf of the Entente Powers has, according to report, narrowed to a similar, though more specific, demand for 400,000 allied troops to insure her against invasion. France, it is argued in some quarters here, could hardly spare the men, and so the burden would necessarily fall on Russia and Great Britain, primarily Great Britain.

The fact that a Russian ship participated in the bombardment of the Bulgarian coast is welcomed in England as an incident which will dispel the idea supposed to be held by many Bulgars that they are fighting Serbia only, and not their former ally, Russia.

HEAR OF ALLIES' TROUBLES.

Germans Now Saying It Is Impossible to Save Serbia.

BERLIN, Oct. 23, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Five trains containing Anglo-French troops on their way from Saloniki to Serbia have been called back by order of the chief commanders and have returned to Saloniki, according to a dispatch from Greece to The Cologne Gazette.

The sanitary conditions of the Entente troops in the Balkans, the message adds, is bad. Transports in the harbor of Saloniki, it is said, cannot debark their soldiers because there are no barracks ashore.

"Opinion in military and political circles in regard to the Serbian situation," says the Overseas News Agency, "is as follows:

"Since Field Marshal von Mackensen's army has carried out the most difficult task of forcing passage of the Danube and Save Rivers and, sweeping southward irresistibly, has carried the war to the principal prepared positions of defense, presenting an iron wall to the invaders; since the Bulgarian army is driving a wedge into the heart of Serbia and the Serbian railway system in the north and central districts, as well as the principal southern line of the Vardan Railway, has been cut, it may be said without exaggeration that there is no longer any possibility of successful intervention on behalf of Serbia. The offensive of the German, Austro-Hungarian, and Bulgarian armies cannot be hindered."

RUSSIAN TROOPS LAND TO FLANK RIGA ARMY

Force Put Ashore at Domenness Northwest of Port Prussians Menace.

LONDON, Sunday, Oct. 24—Official admission was made in the German official war bulletin yesterday that Russian troops had landed at Domeness in Courland, where they are in a position to flank the German columns driving at Riga.

The Russian official bulletin in describing the landing says the German force was defeated and had forty-three killed.

The Berlin communication says:

Army Group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg—Russian vessels appeared on the northern coast of Courland and bombarded the ports of Detraggo, Domeness, and Ipoen. The Russians also landed weak forces near Domeness.

Repeated Russian attacks, delivered with strong forces, in the region south of Sadewi remain fruitless. At Duki they led to fierce hand-to-hand fighting.

Army Group of Prince Leopold of Bavaria—South of Lake Wygonowalze an enemy attack was delivered against our positions on the Ogipsky Canal. The attack was repulsed.

West of Czartorysk our attack is making further progress. Kolki has been occupied by us and more than 600 prisoners taken.

This official statement was issued by the Russian War Office last night:

On the western front there were several actions near Schmarden, west of Shlok, but these had no effect on the general position. Infantry and rifle fire continued in the forest in the region east of the village og Olai and the Mitau road. On the left bank of the Dvina, south of Iksikul, the Germans several times took the offensive, but unsuccessfully. Along the remainder of the front as far as the Pripet region there is nothing important to report.

Fighting on the left bank of the River Styr continues. In actions near Komarovo, below Kolki, and near the town of Kolki itself, we captured, according to supplementary reports, an other twenty-one officers, six hundred men, seventeen machine guns, eight trench mortars, and two searchlights.

On the Caucasus front on the bank of the River Tchoruk, north of Lake Tortum and south of the village of Khorassan, there was a fight between advance guards on Oct. 21. On the remainder of the front there has been no change.

In the operations of the Baltic fleet our landing party, near the town of Domeness on the coast of Courland at the entrance to the Gulf of Riga, on Oct. 22 defeated the German force protecting that point and captured prisoners and material. A German officer and forty-two men were found dead on the battlefield. We lost only wounded.

The Austrian bulletin says of the operations on the Russian front:

Except for some fruitless attempts to attack by the enemy yesterday near Novo Alexiniev, there were no important events on the front south of Kolki. On the Styr the fighting took a favorable course. Our troops stormed the Village of Kukli, west of Czartorysk, which was particularly stubbornly defended. We made more than a hundred prisoners.

In a repulse of Russian attacks on the Upper Szczara, announced yesterday, an Austro-Hungarian division, reinforced by German batallons, captured ten officers and 1,600 men.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 23.—Russian military authorities regard the situation along the entire front of, approximately, 675 miles as favorable from their point of view. Three days ago the German efforts between Mitau and the Gulf of Riga presented a serious problem. At the present time the status of affairs in that sector is considered by the Russians as satisfactory. The Germans have been checked and their sphere of action is being narrowed constantly.

RUSSIANS TO LAND IN BULGARIA SOON

Czar's Adjutant Quoted as Saying Expedition Will Arrive Within a Fortnight.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Rumanian newspapers, as quoted in a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Zurich, say that the Russian General Visnoliko asserted: "In a fortnight, at the latest, Russian troops will land on the Bulgarian coast."

SALONIKI, Oct. 22.—It is learned on reliable authority that the Russians are sending two expeditions against Bulgaria by way of the Black Sea.

BULGARIAN PREMIER SEES SWIFT VICTORY

Occupation of Macedonia, He Says, Is the Limit of His Present Plans.

SOFIA, Oct. 20, (via London, Oct. 24.)—(Delayed.)—Bulgaria's future military actions were outlined today by Premier Radoslavoff to an Associated Press correspondent. The Premier said:

"Our future military actions depend upon the conduct of the Entente powers toward Bulgaria. The limit of our operations, according to present plans, will be reached when Macedonia is occupied, which task already is half completed. Should the troops of the Entente powers invade Macedonia or Bulgaria they will find us ready and able to defend ourselves. I am satisfied to see that the campaign against the Serbians is progressing most satisfactorily. Our troops are doing their duty with their old-time dash and are not far from a point where Serbian resistance must collapse."

Premier Radoslavoff said that the Entente powers failed to win the Bulgarians' support because they proved incapable of understanding Bulgaria's position, and insisted that Bulgaria should attack Turkey, which nation had just ceded to Bulgaria the Maritza Valley.

The Premier declared that Bulgaria had no interest in attacking Turkey, since Macedonia was no longer Turkish territory, and, moreover, Bulgaria was entitled to Macedonia upon ethical grounds.

"The course adopted by the Entente powers and the attitude of their newspapers alienated the sympathies of the Bulgarians," Premier Radoslavoff said in conclusion, "and I can only say that our relations with Rumania and Greece are the best possible, and I have no reason to believe that a change is likely."

SHIPS OF FOUR POWERS SHELL BULGAR COAST

Serious Damage Reported to Harbor Works at Dedeaghatch—Rest of Town Spared.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—An official communication was given out by the French Ministry of Marine this afternoon announcing that the warships of the Entente Allies bombarded on Thursday the Bulgarian port of Dedeaghatch in the Aegean Sea. The statement said:

"The Allies' squadron bombarded the warehouses and wharves at Dedeaghatch on the afternoon of the 21st, but did not fire upon the residential quarters of the city. Besides this, the fleet destroyed a number of military posts along the Bulgarian coast."

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The British Admiralty today issued the following statement concerning the bombardment of the Bulgarian coast:

"The bombardment of the Bulgarian coast was carried out by an allied squadron composed of British, French, and ussian ships on the afternoon of the 21st.

"A number of military positions were shelled and serious damage was inflicted on the harbor works, the railway station, and on shipping at Dedeaghatch. Great care was exercised by the allied squadron to avoid firing upon any points other than those known to be of military importance."

BRINDISI, Oct. 23, (via Paris.)—The Italian squadron is taking part in the blockade and bombardment by the Entente allied warships of the Bulgarian coast in the Aegean Sea, according to a wireless message received here today.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 23.—An official statement from Sofia, received here today, says:

During the afternoon and evening of Oct. 21 British and French ships bombarded the Aegean coast, especially the open towns of Porto Lagos, Maironis, Makri, and Dedeghatch, which have no fortifications whatever. These operations of the hostile fleet were without military significance.

The only Russian warship in Aegean waters, so far as is known, is the cruiser Askold.

DENIES TREATY REPORT.

German News Agency Says von Buelow Did Not Win Bulgaria.

BERLIN, Oct. 23, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The Overseas News Agency issued today a denial of the report that Bulgaria and Germany had concluded an agreement for Bulgaria's participation in the war by means of negotiations carried on last Spring between Prince von Bülow, then German Ambassador at Rome, and the Bulgarian Legation there.

though the garrison was afterward driven out by poison on May 5.

Then came the second battle of Ypres, from April 22 to May 24, one of the great battles of all time, in which the Germans failed again in their main objective, to capture the town and break the line, but did succeed in taking four heavy guns and some prisoners from us, besides gaining about two miles of ground along a front of twenty miles. It may therefore be fairly described as a German success. Before this fight had ended a second battle had broken out further down the line—the battle of Richebourg, May 9-24, which began by a bloody repulse of the British attack, but ended by a considerable and permanent gain of ground.

Then followed the fighting around Hooge, which continued with about equal fortunes during the whole Summer, the Germans having marked success on July 30-31, while the British won distinct victories on June 15-16 and Aug. 9.

Finally came the battle of Loos on Sept. 25, which can even now be hardly said to have finished, but which certainly has been a British victory, involving a gain of ground, prisoners, and guns.

Such, in bare epitome, is our military record up to date. It is to be remembered that for the first six months the Germans had a very marked preponderance of numbers, and that in the second half year, when the numbers had been equalized, they had an even more marked preponderance of guns and munitions. By the splendid exertions of the Allies the numbers in the west are now in our favor and the munitions at least on an equality.

What, then, may we not expect from the future?

Very Few Mistakes Made.

Not only have we nothing to reproach ourselves with and a very great deal upon which to congratulate ourselves in actual war, but we have, as it seems to me, made remarkably few mistakes. Beforehand, thanks to the firmness of Mr. McKenna (First Lord of the Admiralty, 1908-1911) in the matter of the eight great ships, and the driving power of Mr. Churchill (First Lord from 1911 to 1915) in the years immediately before the war, our navy was ready as it had never been before for a supreme struggle. Of the four army corps, which were the most that we had ever thought of sending abroad, two and a half were in time for the first clash, and the others followed. We played our part as we said we would play it, and we won our game, so far as we can count gains and losses, between Germany and ourselves.

If Mr. McKenna and Mr. Churchill put us in a strong position upon the water Lord Haldane (ex-War Secretary) forged the weapon which was to do such great service upon the land, the British military machine as we and the Germans know it. The splendid Territorial Army, the officers' training corps, which has been of such vital service, the conversion of the expeditionary force into a practical reality—all sprang from his clear and far-seeing mind. When one remembers his long defense of the territorials, the gibes to which he and they were subjected, the ridicule with which his assertion was met that they would have time after the outbreak of the war to become good troops before taking the field, and when one sees how entirely his forecast has been borne out, one does not know which is the more surprising—his foresight or the ingratitude and perverseness of so many of his fellow-countrymen. Future generations will, I think, look upon Lord Haldane as one of the saviors of the country.

After the outbreak of the war we have also been extraordinarily fortunate in our leaders. If one searched backward through the glorious files of British history one could not pick on a man who was so fitted by nature and training for the supervision of such a war as Lord Kitchener. His cold, mathematical brain, his power of thinking in terms of the year after next, his enduring, inflexible will power, his freedom from politics—all of these qualities make him an ideal leader in such a war.

And what a collaborator in Mr. Lloyd George, who supplies exactly what a soldier lacks—the touch with the democracy, the power of the burning word, acquaintance with practical conditions of British life!

With such men at home, and with our leaders on sea and land, from Admiral Jellicoe and Field Marshal French downward, we can surely face the future with a light heart. Our troubles have never really been our own, but have arisen from the fact that the secret preparations of the central powers have made them for a limited time more powerful upon land than their neighbors. The margin of strength which is wanted we have to supply. By a miracle of organization and national spirit we shall be able to do so.

The Dangers in Pessimism.

The worst of this unreasonable, pessimistic criticism is that it takes the heart out of men who are conscious of their own good work and makes them feel as if good and bad were alike. Also, it depresses the public and makes them vaguely think that all is wrong when nearly all is right. The conduct and handling of the navy have fortunately been largely immune from carpers, but take as an example the continual reiteration of such phrase as "The muddling of the War Office." The extraordinary efficiency of our War Office has been one of the surprises of the war. Was it muddling when it sent an expeditionary force abroad with such celerity and completeness, with a commissariat which all agreed to be unequaled and with transport and medical service which are the envy of our allies?

We talk with appreciation of the tenfold expansion of our army, but Lord Kitchener does not do such things by a wave of a wand. They are carried out by the hard work and organizing power of the War Office, which has expanded itself to tenfold duties within a year.

As to the munition question, it is one which came as a surprise to us, as to all the world, but it is notorious that there were economical, and not administrative, reasons for the delay in high explosives. Free trade has no doubt many advantages, but it has its corresponding defects, and if you depend upon production in your own land you are likely to have such a crisis as we have successfully surmounted.

We take our history morning by morning, and often the morning seems a dark one. It is not thus that it is written hereafter. We see every swirl and backwater, but the man of the future will see only the main current of the stream. There is no cause there for pessimism, but rather good reason why we should be on our knees, thanking the Power that guides our destiny for evident proof that Great Britain still has the old clear brain to plan and the old strong arm to strike.

WHY BULGARIA JOINED TEUTONS

King Ferdinand's People Informed in an Anonymous Manifesto, Officially Circulated.

DOESN'T TRUST THE ALLIES

Germany Never Broke a Treaty, Document Says, and Is Now Fighting to Uphold One.

SERBIA PERIL TO HUMANITY

Document Expresses Hatred Toward Her and Insists Bulgars Must Be on Winning Side.

The text of a manifesto disseminated in 20,000 copies by the Bulgarian Ministry of M. Radoslavoff, to explain why Bulgaria joined Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Turkey in the war, was published in the Frankfurter Zeitung of Oct. 8, a copy of which was received by THE TIMES yesterday. The manifesto, brief parts of which alone have been cabled here previously, contains a full and frank statement of why considerations of pure self-interest dictated the Bulgarian Government's decision to cast its lot finally with the Central Powers and against the Quadruple Entente.

The wording of some paragraphs of the manifesto seems to indicate that it was written anonymously. It laments the fact that there were still in Bulgaria Russophil politicians who regretted that Bulgaria had not earlier "joined in the bloody circular dance, and that the Bulgarian people has not offered thousands of sacrifices for the establishment of a 'Greater Serbia.'" These persons alone, it says, do not know what a war really is; that it is a struggle for political supremacy or territorial expansion. Russia, it says, is fighting for Constantinople, France for Alsace-Lorraine, England for commercial supremacy over Germany, and "Italy, Serbia, and Montenegro simply for loot." On the other hand, it asserts, till then at least no one had heard the central powers announcing how they were going to divide up foreign territories, as their foes were doing.

Races Not Fighting for Ideals.

The manifesto points out economic and political reasons why Bulgaria must side with the Central Powers and Turkey instead of with the Quadruple Entente:

"Today we see races that are fighting, not indeed for ideals, but solely for their material interests," it says. "The more, therefore, we are bound to a country in a material way, the greater is that country's interest in our maintenance and increase, since thereby that one will profit who helps us and is tied to us by economic bonds.

"If, therefore, we are to change our previous policy for indefinite, unsafe, and to us even unknown advantages, that means the ruin of our agriculture and trade, and indeed everything that we have built up in thirty-six years, the reconstruction of our entire business as a people, and the seeking of new export markets for our goods."

In this connection the manifesto cites statistics of Bulgaria's import and export trade with the various belligerent countries of the present war for the years 1907, 1908, and 1911, showing that in those years the central powers and Turkey enjoyed ever increasing import and export trade with Bulgaria as compared with the amount of its export and import trade with the Entente countries.

"The figures show that our trade, our interests, and our economic life are inseparably linked with Turkey, Germany, and Austria-Hungary," says the manifesto. It drives home this argument by pointing out the vast proportions of its foreign trade that consist of live stock and dairy products, saying that for the export of this it is dependent solely upon Turkey, while its exports of grain can go to any country in the world with equal advantage. It refers to the great hardships imposed on Serbia when Austria-Hungary, resenting the Serbian pro-Russian policy, placed obstacles in the way of the Serbian live stock exports, and it adds:

"What would become of Bulgaria if Constantinople should become Russian and we should lose the Constantinople market? We have seen that almost our entire export trade in live stock, cheese, kashkawal, flour, &c., goes to Turkey—that is to say, to Constantinople. If, now, Constantinople is conquered by Russia, it will introduce there its autonomous protective tariff, and will make impossible the present exports of Bulgarian products to Constantinople. Even as Bulgaria cannot now export anything to Russia, so it will be unable to export anything to the Russian Constantinople. There are no other export markets for these products at present, and such cannot be easily found.

"But if we go against Germany, it would for sanitary and veterinary [sic] reasons immediately cut off the imports of Bulgarian eggs and make more difficult our tobacco imports. All this would cause an economic crisis in Bulgaria such as we have never before witnessed and of which we can scarcely form a conception. Our live-stock industry, as well as all mills that have been set up in Varna and Burgas to grind flour for Constantinople, will be ruined. Our finest and most useful industry will be destroyed, and the millions invested in them lost. The live-stock industry is the basis of our agricultural life."

France Refused a Loan.

The manifesto calls attention to the German loan recently made to Bulgaria, adding that after the Balkan war, when, "humbled, but not destroyed," Bulgaria asked France for a loan, the request was refused categorically, unless Bulgaria would recognize the Bucharest treaty and agree "not to carry on an independent policy," and to throw ourselves completely into the arms of the then Triple Entente, which would dispose of us as it pleased.

"Our Russophiles were at that time raging," it continues, "and demanded the unqualified acceptance of the terms. Now we can see and realize how diabolical were those plans and suggestions and how Bulgaria would have become a plaything in the hands of Russia and France and would have disappeared from the face of the earth. In those heavy days for Bulgaria Germany came to its assistance and gave it the required loan without any political conditions whatsoever. Every impartial Bulgar is in duty bound to confess that through this loan Germany saved us from bankruptcy, as well as from political subjugation. The war has shown how mighty Germany, and even Austria-Hungary, is in an economic sense. If these States, therefore, desire it, they have always the power to render us valuable support. They have done so till now, and we have no reason to suppose that they will not support us also in the future. On the contrary, from the assurances in German newspapers and statements of German statesmen, we can with full confidence count upon German financial help. Even as we write these lines we are informed that Germany has again granted us a loan of 125,000,000 lewas ($25,000,000) for the defraying of current debts, without any political conditions.

"Our greatest foe today is Serbia. It has subjugated the purely Bulgarian Macedonia and is administering it in a barbarian manner never before witnessed. For the Macedonian populace there are no laws and no human rights of any sort. This populace is, without exception, exposed to slaughter; the streams are red with blood; women have been violated, and the male population suitable for military service has been sent into the field to die for the creation of a 'Greater Serbia.' One need only profess to be a Bulgar in Macedonia to be beaten to death like a dog, so great is the hatred of Serbia toward Bulgaria. After the wars the Serbs had grown so arrogant that the transit of a Bulgar through Serbia—no matter who he was—was absolutely dangerous to his life, because in that State, which, according to our Government organ, Narodni Prava, is ruled by liars, there exist no laws for Bulgars. If we do not more quickly deliver our brothers in Macedonia from the unbearable, cruel, and bloody yoke, not a Bulgar will be left in this purely Bulgarian land. Things are, moreover, already in such a condition that Bulgaria cannot possibly exist next to a 'Greater Serbia,' inasmuch as the latter, which lays claim to our country up to the Jantra, will continually challenge us until it destroys us.

What the Allies Offered.

"We do not know the wording of the famous note which the Quadruple Entente has delivered to the Bulgarian Government; but from what has been said and written in the newspapers, these facts are seen:

"1. That Russia and its allies give us nothing for our neutrality, but, on the other hand, demand that we shall take part in the war as soon as possible.

"2. That Bulgaria is to turn over its armies to the Quadruple Entente, placing them fully at the Entente's disposal, leaving the Entente to command them and send them wherever it seems advisable.

"3. That the Bulgarian army must conquer Constantinople and then hand it over to Russia; and,

"4. In return for all this, Bulgaria is permitted to retain the territory up to the Enos-Midia line, and it is promised some obscure and insufficient compensations in Macedonia, but only in case Serbia is sufficiently compensated by Austria.

"That means: give your army, so that me may mix it up with our wild hordes and send them out for destruction on the various scenes of battle; and then, when Serbia has grown great and has taken South Hungary, Croatia, Dalmatia, Bosnia, and Herzegovina, and has grown to a state of from fifteen to twenty millions, Bulgaria will get a small bit of land.

"This shows most clearly how strongly the Quadruple Entente is allied to Serbia; how it is unwilling to persuade the latter to make concessions, and how it mocks our legitimate demands. The Triple Entente is known for its noise and its making of alarms. It is known, too, that during our last negotiations for a loan they published secret notes and even meddled in our internal affairs merely in order to evoke disturbances in the country to win Bulgaria for the Quadruple Entente. In this respect Germany and Austria-Hungary work quietly and without noise, so that we do not know in all their details their proposals to Bulgaria, but nevertheless from those which we can read in their newspapers and from what well-informed persons have told us we can with certainty state that the promises of Germany and Austria-Hungary to Bulgaria for its neutrality are, in the main, as follows:

"1. All of Macedonia, including Skopie, Bitolia, Ochrida, &c.

"2. Friendly mediation between Bulgaria and Turkey for the purpose of ceding the line to Dedeaghatch and the territory west of the right bank of the Maritza. This agreement with Turkey is expected in a short time.

"Still further territorial promises have been made to us at the expense of Serbia by the Central Powers, in case of our active military assistance. These promises are in accordance with our demands for a common frontier with Austria-Hungary along the Danube. The present war has shown how absolutely necessary it is that we should have a direct and immediate connection with Hungary in order that we may be independent of a Serbia that has gone crazy, (sic.) But also other parts of Old Serbia have been set forth for us in prospect.

"Here we can see clearly the Quadruple Entente, in return for slight, uncertain, and undoubtful advantages, demands great sacrifices from us, and that Germany and Austria-Hungary give us clearly and categorically to understand the things they are willing to give us in return for incomparably slighter sacrifices on our part. But the question has another side as well: We do not believe in promises of any sort any more anyway, and still less those of the Quadruple Entente, which took up Italy as an ally after it had in such treacherous fashion trampled under foot its word of honor and broken a thirty-three-year-old treaty of alliance. On the contrary, we have full reason to believe in a treaty with Germany, which has always fulfilled its treaty obligations and is fighting the whole world merely in order to live up to its treaty obligations to the Austro-Hungarian monarchy.

"Serbia can grow 'great' only at the expense of Austria-Hungary or Bulgaria. A Greater Serbia is of great use to Russia, but a detriment to Germany and Austria-Hungary. A Greater Bulgaria disturbs the interests and aspirations of Russia, but can be useful for the interests of Germany and Austria-Hungary. Even for this reason those States, if we hold to them and even help them, will be of assistance to us in the creation of a Greater Bulgaria, which will absolutely include the whole of what is now Serbian Macedonia, a part of old Serbia, and the whole Turkish territory on the right bank of the Maritza.

Allies Won't Coerce Serbia.

"The course of events shows us quite clearly that neither Russia nor its allies will oblige or compel Serbia to cede something to Bulgaria. There can be no talk of a previous occupation of the ceded territory by us, since Serbia is unwilling to cede anything except a small strip of territory, and this only after the war in case it is compensated a hundredfold along the Adriatic coast. It is clear that the Quadruple Entente, even at the cost of Constantinople, is unwilling to compel Serbia to give us Macedonia. But our wish, our hope, our ideal, is above all else Macedonia, and only thereafter the lands which were stolen from us in Bucharest.

"The attainment of this ideal can and will ensue only if we give up our neutrality.

"A Greater Serbia is dangerous for the peace of Germany and Austria-Hungary, and therefore those States do not wish and cannot wish the creation of a Greater Serbia. On the contrary, this disturber of the world's peace must either disappear from the face of the earth or must be compelled to live on under conditions that will make it impossible for it to set the world permanently aflame. Serbia, anyway, constitutes a danger to humanity, and no civilized person can desire its continuance. For this reason, Austria-Hungary and Germany will labor with all their might to make Serbia harmless. But this can be carried out in part only if all of Macedonia and a part of Old Serbia is given to Bulgaria. Diminished in this manner, Serbia will have to keep quiet; it will be more pliable, and will be harmless for us as well as for its neighbors and the whole world.

"That Germany and Austria-Hungary ask only what is good of Bulgaria is evident from the fact that heretofore they have evoked no schism, no revolts, no civil war among us, as the Russians have several times tried to do.

"Finally, we must hold to that group of the powers which will win the victory in the present war, since only so can the important territorial extensions and further developments be insured. From the developments of the operations in the various theatres of the war, on the front against France and Belgium as well as the fronts against Italy, Russia, and Serbia, one recognizes more clearly day by day that victory is inclining on the side of Germany and Austria-Hungary. We need not linger long over the question, inasmuch as it has become clear to the point of certainty for every observer that Russia, which has lost fortresses like Warsaw and Ivangorod, will soon be overthrown, and then the turn will come for France, Italy, England, and Serbia. Germany has proved that it is so strongly organized in a military and material sense and can dispose of such enormous, superior, and inexhaustible forces as will enable it soon to overthrow its foes.

"Under these circumstances Bulgaria would commit a crime against herself, it would simply be committing suicide, if it did not side with the Central Powers, since these alone are the ones who can make it possible for us to realize our hopes for the unification of the Bulgarian people."

REPORTS ITALIAN SHIP SUNK

Athens Hears Steamer Was Victim of Austrian Submarine.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—The Temps publishes a dispatch from Geneva giving an Athens report that an Austrian submarine has sunk an Italian steamship.

The name of the vessel is not given.

ITALIAN ATTACKS GAINING GROUND

strong bodies of the enemy have been attacked, defeated and routed, abandoning many dead.

Victories Along the Isonzo.

All along the Isonzo, from Caporetto to the sea, (about fifty miles,) after an intense artillery preparation our troops, on the morning of the 21st, began an attack on the enemy positions, which were protected by several lines of trenches strongly held. Under a violent and concentrated artillery, machine gun, rifle and bomb fire, our infantry dashed forward constantly and took, at the point of the bayonet, important positions: First, in the Monte Nero zone, the very strongly defended Trincerone, below the summit of Mrzli; second, in the Tolmino section, numerous positions, well guarded by trenches, on the height of Santa Lucia; third, north of Gorizia, a solid redoubt on the slopes of Monte Sabotino.

On the Carso likewise strong enemy lines have been pierced at several places, enemy detachments have been annihilated or dispersed, and twenty-five officers and 1,184 men made prisoners.

UDINE, Italy, Oct. 23, (via Paris.)—The Italian Army is making a general attack along the whole line from Switzerland to the Adriatic.

In the preceding five months of the Austro-Italian war the efforts of the Italians have been directed at the penetration of Austrian territory and capture of strategic points for the purpose of securing Italy against the possibility of Austrian invasion. In the opinion of the Italian General Staff, this has been accomplished, and the war is now entering its second phase.

It is estimated here that the Italians have taken 25,000 prisoners during the war and have put out of action upward of 100,000 men in all. Italian losses, including killed, wounded, and prisoners, amount to about 45,000, according to official figures, which is the lowest percentage shown by any of the belligerent nations.

King Climbs a Captured Peak.

VERONA, Oct. 23, (via Paris.)—King Victor Emmanuel, accompanied by General Brusati, climbed to the snow-covered crest of Rauchkofel Mountain yesterday. The snow was deep and the temperature below zero.

The King's trip was made to congratulate the Alpine troops who had just captured several Austrian positions. The ascent was difficult, and hitherto has been undertaken only by hardy and experienced mountaineers.

FRENCH TAKE TRENCH; BLOCK GERMAN RUSHES

Win at Close Quarters in Lorraine, Repulse Souchez and Tahure Attacks.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—French forces yesterday seized a German trench in Lorraine after a hand-to-hand fight, and frustrated two German attempts to carry positions at other points in their lines—one in the Souchez district and the other in Champagne, near Tahure.

The text of the French afternoon communication follows:

Yesterday evening troops of the enemy endeavored to come out from their trenches in the southern part of Bois en Haché, and near the fort at Givenchy. They were immediately and easily dispersed.

In the Champagne district, also, strong reconnoitring parties of the enemy, supported by the firing of shells, which irritate the eyes and produce suffocation, endeavored to take possession of our positions in the vicinity of the Butte of Tahure. These parties were everywhere repulsed, and virtually destroyed by the first fire of our infantry and machine guns.

On the front in Lorraine French forces, after a stubborn hand-to-hand conflict, occupied a trench held by the enemy at a point near the junction of the roads running between Leintrey and Gondrexon and Amenoncourt and Reillon.

The night passed in relative calm on the remainder of the front.

There is nothing of importance to report since the preceding communication.

The Belgian official communication says that calm prevails along the Belgian front.

The Berlin official report merely says:

There is no news from the Western theatre.

KING GEORGE'S APPEAL WINS MANY RECRUITS

Has Marked Effect on Enlistments in England and May Settle Conscription Question.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The King's appeal for recruits has had a marked effect on today's enlistments, according to the London papers.

Its ultimate effect, with a fair trial of the Earl of Derby's plan, may decide the mooted question of conscription.

Horatio W. Bottomley, Liberal Member of Parliament, speaking at Hackney, said that he had discussed the new recruiting scheme with the Earl of Derby, who told him that his experience already had convinced him that the voluntary system would be saved.

The Earl of Derby added, according to the speaker, that this was something to be proud of and that he confidently anticipated that by the end of November he would have sufficient recruits to meet all requisitions.

FREIGHT REFUSED BY RAIL AND SHIP

the closing of the Panama Canal and the consequent turning of more business to the railroads and the loss of one of our steamships are all factors in this situation. Hence the congestion of freight in the cars at Galveston and New Orleans. We have fifteen steamships and are chartering several more. This week we expect to have a steamship leaving those ports every day.

"There is no trouble as far as our land lines are concerned, and there has been no lack of cars. The business is very large, and there is a big movement of freight by land. When conditions are deranged at the Southern ports, as they have been, it is hard to get enough steamships for the service and to get them loaded. Two weeks ought to be enough to clear things up and to get traffic in good running order."

The American Railway Association, which gathers statistics as to the number of empty cars, is making an investigation of conditions for an early report.

BRITAIN NAMES SUSPECTED SHIPS

Ten American Vessels Among 47 Against Which Charterers Are Warned.

ALL BOUGHT BY A. JENSEN

He Failed to Obtain American Registry for Them Last June, but It Was Granted Later.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—There was posted at the Admiralty today a list of forty-seven neutral vessels, ten of which fly the American flag, and a warning to British shippers to be careful in chartering these ships, which are suspected by the authorities of being either controlled by German capital or engaged in an unneutral service.

Any ship on the list which provides evidence to the contrary will be immediately removed from the list, say the Admiralty officials. It is difficult for an ordinary charterer to procure evidence that he is using a ship which might bring him into conflict with the law against trading with the enemy, so the Admiralty is endeavoring to safeguard him; but, recognizing that the presence of the name of the ship on such a list works a real hardship, every effort will be made to include only those which cannot show there is no reason to include them in the list. Vessels on the list promising to trade only with the Entente Allies or in an unsuspected neutral trade, will be eliminated from the list.

The ten American ships on the list belong to A. Jensen or to the American Transatlantic Company. Their names are: Allaguash, Ausabti, Genesie, Hocking, Kankakee, Maumee, Seneca, Spyros, Vallianos, Winnebago, and Winneconne.

The following nations are represented on the tabooed list: Denmark, eight ships belonging to the same company as do the above-named American vessels; Norway, eighteen ships; Sweden, two; Spain, one; Holland, four, and Brazil, four.

A deal for putting ten to twelve Danish, German, Norwegian, and Greek steamers of various sizes under American registry was made by Richard Wagner early last June at Washington and was frustrated for a time by the refusal of the United States Government to permit it. It was asserted by Mr. Wagner that he had purchased the vessels to form a fleet for the newly formed American Transatlantic Company, with offices at 17 Battery Place, of which he was the President.

It was understood in Washington that not one dollar of American money had been invested in the company, and that the sum, alleged to have been more than $1,000,000, had been provided by Hugo Stinnes, who is well known at Hamburg and Mulheim as the owner of a fleet of freight steamers.

Mr. Wagner said that the steamers had been renamed Gotland, Lapland, Guiland, Vestland, Gronland, Nyland, Vinland, Finland, Djursland, Cleveland, Sydland, and Lapland. He told the Federal authorities in Washington that when he visited Denmark last January an opportunity was offered to him to obtain an interest in several steamers which, after investigation, he decided to take up. He said the idea was to transfer the steamers to American registry and trade under the Stars and Stripe with South America and other neutral countries where freights could be obtained.

There was some trouble in Copenhagen between the vendors and the Danish Government, Mr. Wagner said, and he afterward purchased the steamers through Albert Jensen, whom he met in Germany.

The American Transatlantic Company was incorporated last March in Delaware with a capital of $2,000,000, and Mr. Wagner said that every dollar subscribed was American money. Eugene T. Chamberlain, United States Commissioner of Navigation, objected to the transfer of the steamers purchased by Mr. Wagner from Jensen because they were not entered in the official Danish registry of merchant vessels or at Lloyds. Investigation showed that they had flown the Danish flag only a short while and had been purchased by Jensen from other countries.

It was also discovered that Hugo Stinnes had placed considerable capital at Jensen's disposal in January, when Jensen was a coal merchant in Copenhagen. Then Jensen was imprisoned in the Spring by the Danish Government for smuggling copper from Norway into Germany. The funds provided by Stinnes were handled by Theodor Lehr of Rotterdam.

The transfer of the steamers purchased by the American Transatlantic Company through Richard Wagner, its President, was held up until July 31, when Acting Secretary of Commerce Sweet notified him that certificates would be granted to him as President of the company for the eleven steamships that had been bought in Europe to engage in transatlantic freighting.

CLAIM BIGGER SHIP HARVEST.

Germans Insist They Have Destroyed 564 British Vessels.

BERLIN, Oct. 23, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—"Competent German authorities deny the official announcement made in London on Oct. 20 that only 183 British merchant vessels and 175 British fishing vessels had been sunk by submarines up to Oct. 14," says the Overseas News Agency. "These authorities state that up to the middle of October, 289 English trading ships had been sunk, and that up to Sept. 14, 275 fishing vessels had been destroyed, as shown by statements published from time to time in English newspapers.

"These reports do not disclose all the facts, and the actual number of ships sunk in reality is still larger."

GERMAN WARSHIPS IN BALTIC.

Will Convoy Steamers with Cargoes from Swedish Ports.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 23.—The newspaper Dagens Nyheter says a German naval convoy is expected to arrive in the North Baltic immediately to escort German steamers on their home journey from Swedish ports.

At least thirty steamers are believed to have been held up at these ports.

GERMAN RAIDERS OR FILIBUSTERS?

States are being met at sea and armed with guns of medium calibre for raiding purposes.

The latter theory originated when a british tank steamer arriving in a South American port reported that on her way from Tuxpam, Mex., she was fired upon at sea by a small boat. The belief exists in some quarters here that a base of operations has been established on an island near the coast of Haiti, where guns have been accumulated for use on small boats that are brought there from the United States.

Great Britain and France have maintained a patrol of cruisers in the Caribbean, and the seas are being scoured for suspicious craft.

Seek a Wireless Interloper.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 23.—On the theory that a wireless message flashed from Baltimore was connected with the flight of the six interned German naval officers from Norfolk, the Department of Justice is seeking William Russell, who said he was Chief of the Wireless Division, Seventh Regiment, National Guard of New York. Russell made use of the radio of the Marconi Station on the roof of the American Building. This was a few days before the Germans fled to sea in a small yacht, and, according to one theory, were picked up by a wireless equipped steamer standing off along the Atlantic seaboard.

CUTTER SEEKING ZEALANDIA.

Escaped Officers, if Raiding Commerce, Liable to Execution as Pirates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The United States revenue cutter Miami, assigned to the Gulf of Mexico, has been instructed to find the American steamer Zealandia, which, according to E. W. Streeter, a New York ship broker, has been fitted out as a German raider to prey on British commerce in the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea. Agents of the Department of Justice in Florida have been instructed to look out for the vessel. If the charges are true, those aboard the ship could be punished for violation of the neutrality laws.

No information has been received in Washington to confirm the report that the officers of the interned German auxiliary cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm, who left Norfolk in a motor yacht and are supposed to be bound for a tropical country, were taken on board the Zealandia. If these escaped men or others should engage in the business of destroying commerce, they might be subject to trial for piracy, the extreme penalty of which is death.

SUSPECTS A GERMAN PLOT.

Norfolk Selected for Internment as Base for Spying, Says Official.

Norfolk was selected with a purpose for the interment of the German converted cruisers Prinz Eitel Friedrich and Kronprinz Wilhelm last March, according to the view of an unnamed Government official interviewed in this city yesterday.

"Officers of the two German cruisers have treated us like children," he said, "and have pulled the wool completely over our eyes. Some of these German officers, who took a delight in telling how they sunk the American clipper ship Frye, have been entertained at dinner aboard American men-of-war at Norfolk by American officers of German descent, and also by a few others who have been entertained in return aboard the German ships. It is safe to assume that during these social events the Germans were alive in picking up information about the American navy of use to the Kaiser.

"The Germans realized that Norfolk was a most valuable port to intern at, for there, and within a few miles of the city, the officers and men have had the free run of one of the most important sections of the United States, of which they have undoubtedly now gained a thorough knowledge for a possible future emergency. There is the Norfolk Navy Yard, the Washington Gun Foundry, the powder plants, the ship building plants, the Government proving ground at Indian Head, Fort Monroe, important railroads and other industries of great importance which an enemy would wish to destroy in war time. Months of study of all this by German military men on the spot might afford a very fruitful field.

"Chesapeake Bay is just as easy to get into as it was a hundred years ago, so far as coast fortifications go, and our German friends have not been slow, it is safe to say, in making themselves fully acquainted with this part of the universal coast. New York, Philadelphia, and other ports and their vicinities, undoubtedly have been visited in the interest of the Fatherland.

"I believe a part of the scheme in having the cruisers intern at Norfolk was to provide crews and officers for steamers that might be secured at Swedish or other neutral ports, and, with concealed guns under the coal cargo, be met near the American coast by officers and men from the interned cruisers. You may yet hear of a surprise attack on a British or French steamer by these wily Germans. It is likely that quite a number of men from the interned cruisers have been allowed to get away to await developments, their places aboard being taken by loyal Germans, selected from among landsmen. Besides, there are a number of Germans at different ports on German ships waiting for the war to end, who might be used to man any auxiliary cruisers that might manage to take the high seas for a time.

GREEK GOVERNMENT DEFENDS ITS STAND

Says to Enter the War Now Would Ruin the Country and Not Save Serbia.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—The Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following dispatch, under Friday's date, relative to the attitude of Greece concerning the war:

"All the evening papers publish an identical note, said to be an exact representation of the Government's viewpoint in the situation. The note expresses surprise at the intervention of the powers in the relations between Greece and Serbia, the faculty of interpretation of the treaty of alliance of those countries belonging exclusively to the contracting parties, the accord having been freely concluded without the intervention or guarantee of a third party.

"'It must not be forgotten,' says the note, 'that Greece is an independent nation that disposes of its fate in full sovereignty.' The note goes on to say that the Austro-German attack on Serbia releases Greece at least from the obligation of armed intervention, and that independent of that attack it is materially impossible for Serbia to give Greece the support of 150,000 men stipulated in the treaty in case of war with Bulgaria, and that the Entente powers have not furnished a contingent equivalent. The note adds that the specialists best qualified consider that the Balkan expedition would require at least 400,000 men, and that under these conditions Greece would ruin herself without even the consolation of saving Serbia.

"'On the other hand,' says the note, 'Greece offers all the service she can render in allowing the free passage over its territory of the Allies' troops going to the Serbian front, and in maintaining her own army on a war footing.'

"The note expresses the gratitude of Greece for the offers made, though not yet concrete, and thanks England for the offer of Cyprus. It recalls the Greek sympathies for the Entente and the benevolence of the neutrality maintained thus far. It ends by saying that Greece does not forget that a State, no matter how small, has the absolute right to regulate itself its own fortunes."

ATHENS, Oct. 22, (via Paris, Oct. 23.)—The Foreign Office denies both the reported Serbo-Bulgarian understanding and the existence of pourparlers for such an understanding. The Nea Hellas, an Opposition organ, notwithstanding this denial, insists that negotiations are proceeding.

In discussing Great Britain's offer to cede the island of Cyprus to Greece, the newspaper Patris, a supporter of the Venizelos party, says that the refusal of Premier Zaimis is not of a definite nature, and expresses the belief that the powers of the quadruple Entente again will approach the Greek Government. The Nea Hellas says that it is evident the Greek Government will not accept and has decided to remain absolutely neutral.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Commenting upon Greece's continued unresponsiveness to the Entente Allies' proposals and the possibility of the Allies' cause being again circumvented, as it was in Bulgaria, The Pall Mall Gazette today says:

"If Greece's sovereign remains convinced that Germany and her allies have the upper hand, what is there in his past conduct to insure that he will not make a treacherous attack on our forces at the first sign of their sustaining a check elsewhere? There is every need for the Allies to place their relations with Greece on a footing which will prevent further surprises."

DEATH TOLL IN ALLIES' DRIVE

Four-fifths of One Command Fell in a Single Day.

Some idea of the intensity of the recent drive of the Allies may be gathered from extracts from a private letter from London. Describing injuries received by his son, the writer says:

"He had four bullet wounds from machine guns and another from a splinter of shell. They had a pretty bad time; went into action at 4:30 A. M. with 1,100 men and thirty-five officers, and at roll call at night 210 men and five officers were left.

"We have our successes; the submarines have been squelched. They caught and sank three in one day the week before last. Why they don't publish them I don't know. They have sunk fifty-four certain, and possibly seven more."

ALL OF GERMANY'S FOOD IN GOVERNMENT HANDS

Federal Authorities Take Control of Prices and Supplies Throughout Empire.

BERLIN, Oct. 23, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The German Federal Government today decided to assume control of the price and supply of victuals throughout Grmany. Up to the present time the State provincial authorities had been considered competent to handle the food situation.

The German Government now considers it necessary, the Overseas News Agency says, to equalize the position of the various sections of the empire as to the distribution and the price of victuals, which are abundant, but under different conditions in the various States and provinces of Germany.

New regulations will be made in order to avoid differences and to distribute in an equal manner food throughout Germany, thereby assuring for the coming months full supplies at reasonable prices in all districts.

Conferences are being held by the Government authorities, and it is expected that the decisions regarding the measures to be taken will be announced in the near future.

WOMAN ATTACKS PRINCE.

Leopold of Coburg Reported Shot and Burned with Acid.

ROME, Oct. 23.—Prince Leopold of Coburg, a nephew of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, was burned with acid and wounded with a revolver by a woman friend, the daughter of a Viennese police Captain, according to a dispatch from Vienna.

It is stated that the woman committed suicide by shooting.

The condition of the Prince is most grave, and he is likely to lose his sight, it is said.

FINDS ONLY INTRIGUE IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

J. H. Thomas Wants a Declaration from Asquith That He'll Stay in Office.

DERBY, Oct. 23.—"I appeal to the Prime Minister to take an early opportunity of stating plainly in the House of Commons that he is not going to be hurled from his high position by any intrigue, whether started at Carmelite House or elsewhere," said James H. Thomas, Labor Member of Parliament for Derby in addressing a labor recruiting meeting this afternoon.

Premier Asquith was necessary to the country in the present crisis, Mr. Thomas said, and he told his hearers that King George's message was a rebuke to those who had done their best to belittle the voluntary system, which, he predicted, would enable the country to win the war.

Mr. Thomas said he found a keen desire among the workers to get on with the war, while "in the House of Commons there is nothing but gossip, slander, and intrigue."

It was James Henry Thomas, M. P., Assistant General Secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, who declared in the House of Commons on Sept. 15 that every lodge of the railway union had informed the Executive Committee that on the introduction of conscription the men would stop work.

"If the conscriptionists want an industrial revolution," he said, "let them proceed with their agitation."

The speech caused a great sensation in England. Mr. Thomas later defended it in an interview, calling the conscription agitation a "wicked attempt to embarrass the Government."

Luxemburg Cabinet Resigns.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 25 (via London).—A dispatch from Luxemburg in the Cologne Gazette says that the Ministry of the Grand Duchy has resigned, owing to the difference of opinion with Grand Duchess Marie.

"Originations"

Reminiscent of the Bertha—with all its quaintness and softness of line, there's a bit of neckwear, in creamy lace, accentuated by the tiniest of jet buttons.

An oddly meshed lace has been used in a wide flaring collar. And there are matching cuffs, banded in moire.

Centered with cloth of silver, set in foliage of silver, an exquisite rose of flower-colored velvet, at $1.25

When Margot laces are used in the fashioning of the newest neckwear there's a graceful softness of line that's wonderfully becoming. Especially attractive, this buttoned-right-up-the-front stock of Margot lace. A fall of Margot lace forms the deep jabot, too! $5.95

For the sautoir or to be worn on the flexible link bracelet, a watch of gold plate or sterling silver, priced at $6.75

Black chiffon velvet has been draped into a mounting of black and white—the result, a new handbag. The design, embroidered in steel, accentuates this newness.

Great high crushed stocks of panne velvet have fan-shaped loops at the back. Some of these new stocks are attractively edged with fur. And some of them are softened with pointed flares of Margot lace.

There's a hint of the heather in the soft plaidings of these new velvet bags. But the clasps of amethysts, sapphires and rhinestones contribute a note instantly French. $8.50

And now comes a velvet rose, from France, of course, edged with silver cloth. So very new, the petals are still dew-sprinkled. But the dew drops are of the practical sort, tiny seed pearls that defy the sunshine.

A handbag of blue moire silk is strapped across the back and clasped with an enamel button that carries out the harmony of color scheme.

MELLEN MAY BE DEFENSE WITNESS

Reported He Will Take Stand in Behalf of Old New Haven Associates.

THINKS THE ROAD DID WELL

Defendants Want Ex-President to Tell Things the Government Hasn't Asked.

It developed yesterday that Charles S. Mellen, former President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, may be a witness for the defense in the trial of William Rockefeller, Lewis Cass Ledyard, and nine other past and present Directors of the New Haven on a charge of conspiring to monopolize the traffic of New England. Mr. Mellen has been testifying for the Government the past week in the Federal District Court, where his old associates are on trial. He was granted immunity from prosecution for his testimony for the Government.

Under the rules of evidence, it may not be possible for counsel for the defendants to develop all the facts they wish to establish by the cross-examination of Mr. Mellen, and therefore the defense may call him as its witness. De Lancey Nicoll, of counsel for the defense, said last night that no conclusions had been reached as to who would be called as witnesses for the defense.

In the past week Frank M. Swacker of the Government's counsel accused Mr. Mellen of being hostile to the prosecution, and asked Judge Hunt to caution him against discrediting the Government's case. It is believed that Mr. Mellen would very cheerfully take the stand for his former associates.

Thinks New Haven Did Well.

While he is not a reluctant witness for the Government, he considers everything he can tell could be proved just as well from the records of the company. He has several times thrown out suggestions in his testimony to show he considers the New Haven's achievements were quite laudable. The building up of a great transportation system was his life work, and, whatever legalists may say of it, its completion, he seems to consider, was to the benefit of the public, quite as much as of the railroad company.

If Mr. Mellen is cross-examined by the defense before he leaves the stand, it is expected that it will be by Charles F. Choate of Boston, the last counsel to join the large force of the defense. He is very familiar with the transportation situation in New England, as his father was closely connected with the Old Colony System, so he is well qualified to bring out the contention of the defense that all the New Haven did was for the benefit of the public, even if it was technically illegal.

Mr. Mellen is approaching in his testimony the end of the first period of his services with the New Haven, and the Government wishes to break off his examination at the time when he went as President to the Northern Pacific. He will probably be a day or two more under direct examination before the Government has worked up to that point, and then, if Judge Hunt will permit it and the defense desires it, it can cross-examine him on the testimony that he has already given.

There was an interval after Mr. Mellen left, during which the New Haven had no Second Vice President, but he held that office from 1901 to 1906, and he will be asked to testify to the steps which the Government alleges the defendants took in that period toward the monopolization of the New England transportation facilities.

Troubles of Joy Company.

According to the bill of particulars, these are concerned largely with the Joy Steamship Line. This had been established in 1899 to operate steamboats between New York, Providence, and Boston, and was a formidable competitor of the New Haven. So, it is alleged by the Government, the defendants conspired with certain corporations to hamper it. Thus the New Haven, it is charged, agreed on June 15, 1901, with the Providence, Fall River and Newport Steamship Company that the Joy Line should not lease the Commercial Wharf at Newport. On Aug. 28 of the same year the New Haven agreed with the Pennsylvania and Long Island Railroad Companies that the Long Island should refuse to sell or lease the Joy Line the steamer Shinnecock.

About June 27 the New Haven induced the Ocean Steamship Company not to ship freight by the Joy Line to Providence, and to divert it to the New Haven, and in August of the same year the Ocean Company undertook to decrease the number of its sailings to Boston, and to cut the freight rate by 2 cents a hundred pounds "for the purpose of injuring the said Joy Steamship Company," the bill of particulars alleges.

In July 1901 it is charged that William Rockefeller in particular and the New Haven agreed with the Standard Oil Company, H. M. Flagler and the Florida East Coast Railway Company that the Florida concern should not charter the steamship Cocoa to the Joy Line, and a month later the New Haven made a similar arrangement with Mr. Flagler and the Florida East Coast Railroad concerning the steamship Martinique.

About July 18, 1902, it is charged the New Haven and Pennsylvania made a bargain to keep the vessels of the Joy Line and of the Philadelphia & New York Transportation Company from running through the Delaware and Raritan Canal, and on April 22, 1903, it is asserted by the Government, the New Haven entered into an arrangement with the Pennsylvania, the Erie, the Lehigh Valley, the New York Central, the Jersey Central, the Baltimore & Ohio, and the Lackawanna that none of them would make any through traffic arrangements with the water competitors of the New Haven, including the Joy Line.

Todd May Testify Next.

The New Haven, it is charged, had already in 1900 made an arrangement with the New York Transfer Company and one Hopkins that they would not handle Joy Line baggage in this city and at Providence, and so the Government will try to show that having hampered and worried the Joy Steamship Company in every possible way all these years, it bought its stock through the New England Navigation Company in December, 1905.

It has been already charged in the civil suit brought by the Government against the New Haven and others that this purchase was kept secret for two years, and that during that period the Joy Line was operated ostensibly as an independent concern. It attacked the Enterprise Transportation Company, which had been organized in 1905 to run steamers between New York, Providence, Fall River, Narragansett Pier, and Newport, and the result was that it was soon forced out of business and its property was bought up by the Joy Line. The complete ruin of the Enterprise Company did not occur during the time Mr. Todd was in office, but the first step that the New Haven is alleged to have taken against it, an agreement with the Pennsylvania not to make joint rates with the new steamship line, was made before he left the company.

Percy R. Todd, President of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad of Maine, and the successor of Mr. Mellen as Second Vice President of the New Haven, has been seen about the Federal Building for the last week, and is expected to be the next witness called by the Government.

TO AID JEWISH CHARITIES.

Plan for Central Investigating Body to Promote Efficiency.

A meeting of the council of Jewish Communal Institutions, of which Leo Arnstein is President, will be held in New York at the end of October or early in November, to consider the desirability of establishing a Bureau of Philanthropy to act as a central investigating body for the study of social problems affecting the Jewish community in New York numbering more than 1,000,000.

The council states that "the charitable activities of the Jews are carried on by about 100 organizations of considerable size, a host of small societies of a local character, and a great variety of mutual benefit societies and lodges. Their total expenditures are unknown, but it is certain that the budget of the larger organizations alone today exceeds $3,000,000.

"No survey," it is contended, "has ever been attempted to determine what are the needs of the community and what its resources to meet those needs, what duplication there is, what fields of work are wholly or partially uncared for. There is no Jewish organization whose function it is to study the underlying causes of poverty and its effects as it concerns the Jewish people, with a view to preventive action. While there are a number of relief giving institutions, child caring institutions, hospitals, &c., there exists no agency devoted to the study of general charitable problems of the community, no agency equipped with trained workers, prepared to investigate in behalf of the community or of a special institution, or to help in the solution of new problems constantly arising."

It is proposed "to gather and record available information on the philanthropic requirements and existing provisions; to analyze and interpret the data so secured and to serve as an agency equipped with trained workers, capable of undertaking and carrying out investigations into philanthropic problems in behalf of the Council of Jewish Communal Institutions, the Kehillah or other existing institutions."

SUBWAY STATION CROWDED.

Columbus Circle Asks More Entrances and Exits.

Residents and business men in the vicinity of Columbus Circle have sent a petition to the Public Service Commission, the Board of Estimate, and the Interborough asking for additional entrances and exits at the Columbus Circle subway station.

At a conference last week Paul H. Zagat, Chairman, presented reports showing the growth of the Columbus Circle section. Principal Paul of De Witt Clinton High School said 4,295 boys used the subway station at the Circle daily. W. R. Sill of the Century Theatre said that out of 30,000 persons attending the performances there weekly over 50 per cent. used the Circle station.

The following committee to urge additional subway facilities was appointed: Henry C. Copeland, N. L. Ottinger, A. F. Berry, Edgar J. Lauer, M. F. Huberth, R. W. Meade, Ned Weyburn, John Reisenweber, Jacob Wertheim, H. A. Schmidt, P. H. Zagat, and W. T. Black.

SEES GERMAN MIGHT IN LAND CREDITS

David Lubin Says They Give Farmers a Deeper Interest in Government.

David Lubin, who has been the representative of the United States in the International Institute of Agriculture, which meets annually in Rome, Italy, since 1908, and who played a prominent part in the founding of that organization, has a novel idea regarding the method by which universal peace will ultimately be attained. He has been in New York for the last few days and expects to go to Rome to attend the sessions of the institute early in 1916.

"There are possibilities in the fight for rural credits in this and other countries which may not seem apparent at first glance," Mr. Lubin said when seen at the Astor. "The system of rural credits in use in Germany is largely responsible for Germany's great power and for her ability to withstand vast pressure. Agitations for the adoption of the same system, or variations of it, are being carried on in most of the fifty-five countries that are represented in the International Institute of Agriculture, and although these systems may not be adopted at once, it is inevitable that they will be put into effect in the not very distant future.

"Without going again into the details of the German rural credit system, or Landschaft, (which Mr. Lubin explained in a recent article in THE SUNDAY TIMES,) something of its political effect can be described. It is generally agreed, and experience with the Landschaft has supported the belief, that the political conservatives are to be found among the farmers of every nation—the men who own and till their property. The Radicals, the Socialists, Anarchists and others, are to be found in the cities, principally among men and women who have no property to be protected by the Government that they condemn. There is another class, however, which is readily inoculated with the germ of radicalism. This is the class in the country which has no property and yet works at farming, the class of renters.

"An unpleasant list of statistics that face us in the United States at the present time is the list showing the amazing increase in farm renting. Something less than 50 per cent. of our farm land at the present time is worked by renters, while the owners live in the cities, or the land is owned by companies or commercial organizations. This is due partly to the fact that farmers' sons prefer to move to the cities and rent their land, or sell it to others who will rent it. The reason is that the advantages in the country are not sufficient to hold the men born there. In Germany the Landschaft has increased these opportunities in the country. It has made it possible for the farmer to make money, to borrow without inconvenience and without jeopardizing his property unnecessarily, and it has brought the farmers together with a mutual interest in the Government. This has created a thing that is unknown in this country—a powerful agrarian political party, which keeps close watch on all Government matters and exerts itself to see that the interests of the farming class are protected.

"As a consequence of this system one hears in normal times in Germany the complaint from the big financial interests of the cities that 'that awful Agrarian Party is devouring us!' It is a healthy complaint from the national point of view. In America the complaint is reversed. The cry one hears is from the farmers, and it is that 'Wall Street is devouring us.'

"What a nation needs is a perfect balance of the different interests, so that neither party can 'devour' the other. With every party fighting for its rights, there is progress, and all of the parties advance together. The effect of a class that is 'satisfied' is to be found in Morocco; the members of the 'satisfied' class wear gunnysacks for clothing and never register any concerted complaint against the Government.

"When scientific methods of financing the farmer and giving him equal opportunities generally with the man who moves to the city are adopted in this and other countries, the effect will be the same that it has been in Germany, and powerful agrarian, or land parties will spring up as political factions, offsetting the effect of the radicals of the nation, whose efforts, when properly balanced with the efforts of other parties, also make for genuine progress. This will have the effect, I believe, of stabilizing the Government.

"The labor parties have already found it advantageous to co-operate with the labor parties of other countries. The agrarian parties will find a similar advantage. The third big party, composed of business interests, will, I believe, find similar advantage. Chambers of Commerce already are demonstrating the effectiveness of international co-operation in many matters. In my belief, the ultimate international working together of these three parties will have more to do with procuring universal peace, among all civilized nations at least, than any measures of disarmament or superarmament or international police or peace conference treaties that could be devised by all the coming generations."

SLATON BACK IN GEORGIA.

No Attempt to Molest Ex-Governor for Frank Commutation.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 23.—Ex-Governor John M. Slaton, who left for a trip to the Pacific Coast soon after his term of office expired on July 1, returned to Atlanta on Oct. 4 and has resumed the practice of law.

When the ex-Governor left Georgia excitement was intense owing to his commutation of the death sentence of Leo M. Frank, and it was predicted that he would not return to the State, or if he did that personal harm would befall him. Neither prediction has come to pass. The ex-Governor has been here for three weeks going about his business, and no attempt has been made to molest him.

Even Mr. Slaton's friends feared that an attempt might be made to harm him, and when he returned guards in plain clothes met him at the station, and these ever since have remained on duty at the home of Mrs. W. D. Grant, the mother of Mrs. Slaton, where the ex-Governor and his wife are staying. Three guards are constantly on duty.

Very little attention has been paid by the State press to Mr. Slaton's return. Even Tom Watson, who was exceedingly bitter against Slaton because he commuted Frank's sentence, has not even alluded in his paper, The Jeffersonian, to the ex-Governor's return. Watson repeatedly had asserted that the ex-Governor never would return to Georgia.

Ex-Governor Slaton was a guest this afternoon at a luncheon given in honor of President C. H. Markham of the Illinois Central, who is here with Directors of the road. New Yorkers present were C. A. Peabody, President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company; J. W. Auchincloss, Cornelius Vanderbilt, J. C. Parrish and W. Luttgen, a member of the August Belmont firm.

ARLINGTON SPEAKS WITH PARIS AGAIN

TEST CONFIRMED BY FRANCE

Chief of Her Military Radio System Reports Officially That Experiment Is a Success.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Captain Sayles, naval attaché, watched all night at the Eiffel Tower in the wireless telephone test. The military authorities permitted the exclusive use of the tower From 5:20 to 5:50 this morning these communications were heard by Captain Sayles and Engineer H. E. Shreeve:

"How are you getting along over there? How is the weather? How are you, Shreeve?"

The experiment will be continued

Dr. F. B. Jewett, Assistant Chief Engineer of the Western Electric Company, who in the absence from the city of John J. Carty Chief Engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is superintending the wireless telephone experiments, said early this morning that it was very probable that wireless telephonic conversation had again been heard from Arlington to Paris, as plans had been made to repeat the tests so successful on the first occasion. The arrangements were for the operators at Arlington to talk from shortly after midnight until shortly before 1 o'clock.

At 1 o'clock this morning a cablegram was sent to Paris notifying the operators there that Arlington had talked, and in quring whether the conversation had been heard. The answer to this message will determine the success of failure of the test. Dr. Jewett said that these tests would be repeated between midnight and 1 o'clock for an indefinite number of successive nights.

Report to French Government.

The following statement was given out yesterday by the Chief Engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company:

"The success of the wireless telephone experiments conducted by the engineers of the Bell system was publicly announced in Paris on Friday by Lieut. Col. of Engineers Ferrie, the technical director of military radio telegraph for the French Government.

"The announcement was made in French and the following translation sent by Lieut. Commander Sayles, the United States naval attaché, was received today by John J. Carty, Chief Engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, under whose direction the experiments were carried on:

Paris, Oct. 22, 1915.

The American station at Arlington was provided with a special wave generator developed by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the Western Electric Company, and arranged in such a manner as to permit the making of wireless telephonic emissions. The aforesaid companies, being accredited with the Department of War by the United States Embassy in Paris, appointed one of their engineers, Mr. Shreeve, to attempt to hear these telephonic emissions at the radio telegraphic station at the Eiffel Tower by means of a receiver which is equally of their invention.

Words Heard Repeatedly.

All the experiments made have been followed in every detail by the undersigned and by Captains Brenot and Pinsinin and Lieutenant Vaibreuze, all officers of my service. The first series of experiments carried out in June, 1915, gave no results, probably by reason of the electrical perturbations naturally very intense at this season of the year. The second series, in October, 1915, has achieved greater success. It has been possible to hear and understand very distinctly, and repeatedly words such as "one," "two," "three," &c., "good-bye," &c. Depending upon the intensity of the electrical perturbations which are prevalent, and the condition of the atmosphere at this time, these words were heard more or less distinctly and more or less loudly. These results, although imperfect, are extremely interesting, and there is every reason to believe that they will be improved upon.

Lieut. Col. of Engineers FERRIE,
Technical Director of Military Radio Telegraphy.

In the absence of Chief Engineer Carty from New York, Dr. F. B. Jewett, Assistant Chief Engineer of the Western Electric Company, who has been intimately associated with all the work leading up to the successful demonstrations of long distance wireless telephony, said that the official statement of the French Government, issued by Colonel Ferrie, was in accordance with the arrangements made at the time the experiments were started.

When the experiments in Paris were first undertaken, as a result of the courtesy of the French Government in placing the Eiffel Tower station at the disposition of the American Telephone and Telegraph engineers for a limited period each day, Colonel Ferrie was fully apprised of the nature of the development work that had been undertaken. Both he and his assistants, Captains Brenot and Pincimin, were very much interested in the new developments and have been in constant attendance throughout all of the work. Before the experiments were undertaken it was arranged with the French officials that the work would be carried on until they were thoroughly satisfied as to its successful outcome. The official statement which Colonel Ferrie has made for the French Government is, therefore, conclusive evidence that this has now been accomplished.

Mr. Jewett said that the tests between Arlington and Paris were being continued regularly, and that since the first announcement of successful transmission Mr. Shreeve had reported further satisfactory reception of speech from Arlington.

Mr. Espenschied, the company's engineer in Honolulu, who is listening each night at the time of the tests to Paris, reported yesterday that he, together with Rear Admiral Boush and Lieutenants Lando, Zane, and Green, United States Navy, were able on Friday night's test to hear all of the messages from Arlington clearly and distinctly three feet away from the telephone receiver.

Congratulations from Edison.

Mr. Jewett also mentioned a fact which is of extreme interest to engineers conversant with wireless transmission; namely, that owing to wireless conditions at Eiffel Tower all of the transmission between Arlington and Paris, and the later transmissions to Honolulu were on a wave length about half that normally employed for long distance wireless telegraphy. The fact that successful transmission, such as has been reported from Paris, and in the last cablegrams from Honolulu was made with this short wave length, emphasizes the remarkable character of the achievement.

"Accept my hearty congratulations on your wonderful success in connecting New York and San Francisco by telephone and my thanks for the privilege of talking across the continent. I heard both the voice and music perfectly."

LATEST WIRELESS FEAT PLEASES MARCONI MEN

Godfrey Isaacs Gratified That U. S. Navy Is Pushing Transoceanic Talks.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The linking up of the Arlington station with the Eiffel Tower by wireless telephone, the news of which was conveyed here by cable, caused the Marconi wireless officials to express the opinion today that the day was not distant when the whole of Europe would be in wireless telephone touch with all America.

Godfrey Isaacs, General Manager of the Marconi Company, said to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent:

"It is an intensely interesting development of wireless telephony, but no more than was to be expected. If the war were not on, Mr. Marconi would now be in telephone touch with the chief points on both continents. The American Navy alone is able to conduct these experiments now between America and Europe, because of war restrictions on private concerns, and it is a satisfaction to know that it is going ahead so that no time may be lost in perfecting the system that the Marconi Company knew would eventually be established.

"In the early stages of wireless telephony it is to be expected that the talking can be done only spasmodically; but in time it will be perfected so that there will be only a slight delay.

"Mr. Marconi intends to work on a wireless telephone system across the Atlantic after the war so that it will be as serviceable as the wireless telegraph is now. In time to come there is no doubt whatever that the wireless telephone between the continents will be a practical means of communication."

EXPERTS DISAGREE ON CHARLTON'S SANITY

His Deposition Made in New York Militates Against His Present Defense.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COMO, Oct. 23.—A long time was spent today in written and oral discussions between the alienists in the Charlton murder case. The experts for the prosecution contended that Charlton had always been in best of health and had possessed perfect mental equilibrium, and had never, before, during or after his crime, evinced any mental aberration such as to diminish his responsibility. The best proof, it was held, was that since he had been imprisoned at Como nobody had ever detected the least alteration in him, but, on the contrary, he had always appeared a normal, tranquil, and thoughtful man.

The experts for the defense, basing their opinion largely on the statements of American physicians as to the epilepsy suffered by Charlton's younger brother, wrote voluminously and spoke at length to prove that when he struck Mary Scott, and for hours also afterward, Charlton was under the influence of an epileptic fit, and therefore totally irresponsible. To meet the objection that there had been no recurrence of epilepsy while Charlton had been confined here, they said that the prison served as a sort of sanatorium, where the accused experienced no mental or physical exhaustion and had no opportunity for indulgence in liquor or other excitements.

COMO, Oct. 23.—Baron Sciacca, the judge presiding at the Charlton case, read a deposition made by Charlton in New York soon after his arrest there. This deposition was regarded as of importance because, although it contained the admission that Charlton killed his wife, it did not mention the epileptic coma into which, according to a later deposition, he passed after committing the deed.

The New Mode in Silk Petticoats is now well defined in the late Autumn and early Winter styles and conforms to the wide and shorter models decreed by Fashion. To this dictate a number of beautiful styles have been developed in effective plaids, in Dresden effects, in plain or fur-trimmed taffeta, while in the extremely dainty models are those fashioned of lace and be-ruffled satins, crepe de Chine, or Georgette crepe, designed for wear in the evening, or with negligees. The prices cover a wide range and will be found to meet individual requirements. These charming styles may be seen in the Department on the Second Floor.

B. Altman & Co.

by special arrangement with the Commission for Relief in Belgium will hold, to-morrow and throughout the week

An Exhibition and Sale of RARE BELGIAN "WAR LACES"

These exceedingly beautiful specimens of the lace industry of Belgium will be shown on the Fifth Floor, and a cordial invitation to call and inspect them is extended to all who may be interested.

Included in this collection are examples of Flandre, Rosaline, Mechlin, Venetian Point, Droochel, Duchess, Bruges, Point de Paris, and other varieties of old laces, which from now on will be very difficult to duplicate. A great many pieces have been completed since the beginning of the war.

In the Fur Department

(Third Floor)

an extensive collection of luxurious Fur Garments and small Furs presents an unequalled opportunity for inspection.

Of notable interest are the matched Skins in Silver Fox, Natural Blue Fox, Cross Fox, White Fox, Smoked and Slate-colored Foxes from which a personal selection may be made for orders to be specially executed.

The Department for Imported Underwear

Weekly importations of exquisite French Underwear, characteristically Parisian in elegance, refinement and dainty perfection of detail, continually augment a distinctive collection of Undergarments. Included are several of the Season's Novelties, among which are now being shown the loveliest of Bridal Sets, fashioned of the sheerest Linen Cambric, and enriched with hand embroidery and real Valenciennes laces.

AGED ENGLISH BARK SAILS HERE FOR OIL

War Drives Port Jackson from 33-Year London-Australia Route.

TRAINING SHIP; NO CADETS

Youngsters All Gone to Fight Germans, Captain Maitland Says.

After ploughing the seas for thirty-three years between London and Australia by way of the Cape of Good Hope and homeward round Cape Horn, the four-masted iron bark Port Jackson has been driven by the war to come to New York to load case oil for Adelaide, South Australia. She is under the command of Captain Charles Maitland, a grand-nephew of the commander of the British frigate Bellerophon, which conveyed Napoleon to St. Helena after the battle of Waterloo.

Captain Maitland has spent all his life in clipper ships, and is making his last voyage to sea. The Captain is fitting out his ship at Pier 11, East River, foot of Gouveneur Lane.

The Port Jackson is a fine type of the old iron sailing vessel of the early eighties, with plenty of deck space, lofty spars and painted ports on her sides, a relic from the old frigate built ships, which were painted that way to deceive pirates into the belief they carried guns. She has double topgallant yards and royals above her topsails on the fore, main and mizzen masts, and carries a spanker and a gaff topsail on the jiggermast. Five years ago the Port Jackson had a large house built on the deck amidships to accommodate thirty-five cadets to be trained as officers under the Lord Brassey scheme for the upkeep of the mercantile marine. Captain Maitland said yesterday that the war took all the cadets he had on the ship, but there are six youngsters who will arrive next week from Liverpool on the Adriatic to join her.

The boatswain and the steward are each over 70 years old, and have sailed with the Captain for many years. There are four mates and twenty-two able seamen on the Port Jackson, and six boys from the training ship Warspite, which is anchored in the Thames at London.

The Captain said that with all canvas set and a good breeze on the quarter the ship can made about 13 knots through the water, and he expects to make the run by way of the Cape of Good Hope to Adelaide in 90 to 100 days.

One of the articles in his cabin of which he is very proud is a silver loving cup won in January, 1911, in Sydney, New South Wales, by his cadets in a lifeboat race on the Paramatta River against the crack boat's crew of the North German Lloyd cadet ship Herzogen Cecilie.

"It was a three-mile course," he added, "and my boys beat the Germans by half a mile."

The Captain said that when he first went to sea there was nothing to eat but salt beef and salt pork and hard biscuits. Now, sailors get fresh bread, vegetables, milk, pickles, butter, and even jam.

On the Port Jackson's deck houses there are four big coops which will be filled with poultry, and twenty pigs, as well as sheep, will be carried in the pens when the ship sails for Adelaide about Nov. 15. She usually carries two or three passengers in the cabin who go for their health, and Captain Maitland hopes to have one or two this time to play whist or chess with and to keep him company.

CHICAGO BROKER MURDERED

P. R. Voorhees of Chicago Is Shot Dead in His Home.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23. — Franklin R. Voorhees, head of a prominent brokerage firm by the same name, was shot and killed by one of two men whom he surprised tonight in his home on the Hyde Park Boulevard.

At first it was thought the intruders were robbers, but later the police were inclined to doubt this.

Ralph Voorhees, 21 years old, son of the broker, told the police late tonight that his father acted as agent for the French and British Governments. Voorhees, his son said, supplied glycerin and other stock yard products, used in the making of high explosives.

BRINGS BIGGEST BEEF CARGO

Also Reefer Snakes, Which Tie Captured Men In Armchairs.

The Lamport & Holt steamer Vauban arrived yesterday from Buenos Aires with 39,522 quarters of frozen beef. This represents 10,000 head of cattle, and it was said by the agents to be the biggest shipment of beef ever brought by one steamer to this port.

The Vauban also brought a variegated consignment of snakes from the island of Trinidad, including the reefer snake. This reptile was given its name by sailors on account of its fondness for wrapping itself around objects and tying a reef knot with its head and tail. Planters in the interior of the island have frequently been tied in their armchairs and kept prisoners for hours by reefer snakes which come out of their dens when a strong breeze is expected. Rum and cocoanut milk are the only things that will charm the reefer snakes and make them loosen their deadly grip and cast themselves adrift, so to speak.

THOROLD AVERY HOME.

English Boy, Detained, Leaves Ellis Island with Parents.

Thorold Avery, the 9-year-old English boy, who arrived on Friday from Liverpool, unaccompanied by his parents on the Baltic and was taken to Ellis Island, has been released by the Immigration authorities after a brief detention.

His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Avery, who live in Brooklyn, met him at the pier and went to the island with the boy, where a special board of inquiry was convened and passed upon the case. The law demands that all aliens under 16, unaccompanied by their parents or legal guardians, must go to Ellis Island.

"Not until you take this hand-made Luncheon Cloth into your own hands can you realize its real value. It is the REAL MADEIRA hand embroidered. The illustration cannot even indicate how fine the eyelets are worked, how handsome the blind embroidery and how carefully the Rose Point Scallops are made. This Cloth was ordered made to bring Fifteen Dollars; it turned out so exquisitely that it looks a big Twenty Dollars' worth, and even the well-posted will judge it worth around that figure. It will make an ideal Wedding Present, Birthday or Christmas Gift should you have no immediate use for it yourself. It will cost you only $9.00 at this Special Sale, because we bought it among other things for spot cash at an Importers Close-out."

DRESSES FOR EVERY OCCASION

Four models, each so amazingly smart that the woman of fashion will recognize at a glance that these are Dresses of distinction.

Coat Dresses, Street Dresses, Afternoon Dresses, Evening Dresses, typical of the mode at its best and newest. Specially purchased for this timely sale and offered at prices much below the usual for Dresses of such very evident style and quality.

Evening Dresses
$39.50

Delightfully picturesque Dancing Frocks of Gros de Londres in lovely shades. Bodice of silver lace is veiled with black tulle and the puff sleeves are caught with pink roses. Below a girdle of silver galloon falls the bouffant skirt, draped in pannier fashion and with the new apron effect, so quaint and pretty.

Afternoon Gowns
$19.50

A conservative model of satin striped Bengaline silk, rather tailored in its effect and on very smart lines. The bodice is box pleated, corded and button trimmed and has a military collar and vestee of soft white satin. The skirt features a wing draped tunic in an extremely new and graceful effect.

Coat Dresses
$33.50

Fur trimmed and decidedly of the Russian type, this clever model is of velveteen and serge. The belted blouse of the velvet has the highest of choker collars, and cuffs of nutria, the same fur edging the flaring skirt of the coat. Serge makes the broad girdle and the well-cut skirt.

Serge Dresses
$25.00

A Redingote model of fine serge with panels of silver braiding inset at hip and silver soutache outlining the satin collar and finishing the military fastenings. Sleeves and underbodice are of soft black satin.

Misses' Dresses—Specially Priced

Dancing Frocks

Taffetas, chiffons, satin charmeuse and nets, in lovely girlish models with quaint bodice effects of silver lace, of tulle, of delicate creamy laces, adorned with tiny roses, ruffles and frills, gleaming ornaments of crystal and pearl. Skirts of the most graceful and picturesque draped effects.

Special. . . . . $19.50, $25.00 and $29.50

Street Dresses

Models in which velveteen and silk are smartly combined. Bands of fur effectively finish the cuffs, collar and skirt of a model with blouse and flounce of velvet, and a deep sailor collar of white satin. Plaid silk in green and blue is used with velveteen, with silver braiding adding to its style.

Special at. $22.50

BIG SLIDE MEANS A BETTER CANAL

Gen. Hodges, Former Engineer on Great Ditch, Sees Danger Prevention.

CHANNEL WILL BE WIDER

Final Security Is Only a Matter of Digging Hills Back Far Enough.

TROUBLE LONG FORESEEN

Details Given of General Goethals's Great Task in Making Gaillard Cut Safe.

The great slide in Gaillard Cut of the Panama Canal which has choked that part of the great Isthmian waterway with millions of cubic yards of rock and dirt, until the channel is only about twenty-five feet in width, while the depth has been reduced from forty-five feet to varying depths of from three to fifteen feet, was clearly foreseen as long ago as October of last year. For months before the sudden plung of the great mass into the canal General Goethals, Governor of the Canal Zone, and his associates worked day and night keeping the channel clear, their calculations being such that had the slide continued its way slowly the engineering staff would have been able to free the threatened part of the cut as fast as the dirt and rock came into it.

This statement was made to THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday by Brig. Gen. H. F. Hodges, U. S. A., who until his promotion to his present rank, last year, was Assistant Chief Engineer of the Canal, and who knows every foot of the waterway from the Atlantic to the Pacific terminals. General Hodges, who has kept in close touch with the situation caused as a result of the great slide, talked of the problem confronting General Goethals. For the benefit of the pessimistic, it can be stated that instead of irreparably damaging the canal the great slide will in the end make the canal a safer water course, and when it is removed the danger of a recurrence will, to a great extent, have been eliminated.

General Hodges, who now commands the North Atlantic Coast Artillery District, which embraces all of the fortifications from Fort Totten north to Maine, with headquarters at Fort Totten, talked at his headquarters yesterday with a representative of THE TIMES, while before him were copies of the reports made to the Government by the Panama Canal officials concerning the Gaillard Cut slide.

Foreseen Last October.

"What has happened," said General Hodges, "was clearly foreseen as far back as October of last year. That is, we saw that the mass was slowly moving into the prism. It was, of course, impossible to foresee that it would be so suddenly dislodged and plunge in its entirety into the Cut, blocking it to traffic and causing the great tie-up that has followed.

"When it was discovered that the rock and earth involved in the slide was moving, the most powerful of dredges were put to work removing the rock and other material as fast as it came into the threatened part of the Cut. All went well and the dredges were able to keep the channel comparatively free until in the early part of September, the mass of sliding material suddenly began to move so fast that the block followed. Unfortunately it came with a rush and the dredges were entirely unable to cope with the situation. The result is what the world has since learned and the problem now is to get it out. You may rest assured the problem will be successfully worked out and the Canal, when it is again clear, will be a better canal than it ever was before.

"About 10,000,000 cubic yards of matter were involved in the slide. The fact that it was in motion was, as I have stated, known to the Canal engineers since October of last year. For months, until the sudden rush of September, the movement was very slow. That it was moving could be detected by the dropping particles. The east side of the slide is north of what is known as Gold Hill and north of Contractors' Hill on the west, a part of the western area being the site of the old village of Culebra, now occupied by a part of the Panama Canal garrison, and known as Camp Gaillard.

General Goethals's Big Problem.

"Since Sept. 20 until the present time the slide has been in continuous motion, the length of the channel obstructed being about 1,300 feet. The width at the worst point has been reduced to about 25 feet and the depth to between 3 and 15 feet. The finished width of the channel at the point where the trouble is will be 300 feet, and the depth 45 feet. These figures indicate the size of the problem confronting General Goethals and his men.

"The canal force is now working day and night to free the channel and make possible the reopening of the canal to traffic. The most powerful units in the dredging fleet are being used, among them the powerful fifteen-yard dipper dredges Gamboa and Paraiso, while a third dredge of similar capacity, the Cascadas, which left Philadelphia for the Canal Zone several weeks ago, is undoubtedly also at work now. These three dredges should be able to take out an average of from 12,000 to 15,000 cubic yards of earth a day each. The dredging work of these powerful vessels, it should be pointed out, is supplemented by smaller dredges, and with all the units at work, the monthly output should be in excess of 1,200,000 cubic yards of material.

"Of course the space is contracted, and it is sometimes difficult to find good positions for all the units of the dredging fleet. The material, as fast as it is dredged out, is loaded into scows and towed about ten miles to the dumping grounds in Gatun Lake. The material is almost entirely of rock. The rock is of a formation which crumbles after a period of exposure to the air. In places this rock is quite hard, and blasting is necessary in its removal. Not infrequently the buckets take up masses of rock that are so heavy that in order to remove them from the buckets surface blasting has to be resorted to before the buckets can be freed.

Report on the Great Slide.

At this point General Hodges read portions of a report, the accuracy of which he said he subscribed to and which indicated clearly the tremendous job that now confronts General Goethals. In part this report read:

"This suspension of traffic was the most serious which has occurred since the Canal was blocked in October of last year by Cucaracha slide. In fact, this and the suspension in August have been the only occasions since October, 1914, on which there was complete stoppage of navigation. At other times large vessels have been delayed for several days, but at the same time the vessels of medium draft were sent through without delay.

"After the elimination of immediate danger at the base of Cucaracha slide the larger dredges were stationed at the bases of the east and west Culebra slides, which, moving toward each other, had made considerable aggressions on the channel since the opening of the canal to traffic. The dredges were able to keep pace with the encroachment at the time, and even slightly to increase the channel in spite of it; but under occasional accessions of momentum to the moving masses the material slid into the channel more rapidly than the dredges could excavate it.

"The width between the outer limits of the breaks on opposite sides of the cut is greatest at Station 1,787, where it amounts to 2,975 feet. On the east side the break extends back 1,825 feet from the centre line of the channel, and the surface at the outer limit of present breaking is 350 feet above the sea level. The greater part of the movement at this time is from the west side. On July 1 it was estimated that 5,000,000 cubic yards were in motion on the west bank in this section and 4,000,000 cubic yards on the east bank. * * *

"From Sept. 1 to the morning of Sept. 13 the total excavation from the Culebra slides was 291,082 cubic yards, and from the cut, 380,127.

"An idea of what this quantity means is afforded by comparison with one of the chambers of the canal locks. To fill one of the chambers 1,000 feet long by 110 feet wide to a depth of 72 feet would require 295,333 cubic yards. The 15-yard dipper Gamboa set a new high record for dredges in hard material in the twenty-four hours ended at 6 A. M. Sept. 23, turning out 15,145 cubic yards. The Paraiso, mate of the Gamboa, made herself a high record of 15,650 cubic yards in the twenty-four hours ended at 6 A. M. Sept. 27.

Situation on Oct. 6.

Another report dated Oct. 6, among other things, says:

The vigorous work of the men of the dredging division continues. In the twenty-four hours ended at 6 A. M. Oct. 5 the Paraiso established a new high record for a day by turning out 17,185 cubic yards. This was an average of 5,728 cubic yards by each of the three shifts, and at the rate of 716 cubic yards an hour.

The development of high records during the period in which navigation has been suspended is an interesting example of continued work at high pressure by an organization of ambitious workers, and of the way such an organization of men, spurred by the sense of a common cause, develops greater and greater efficiency.

On Sept. 6 the Gamboa made a total of 12,545 cubic yards, which surpassed anything done on the Isthmus before that time in hard material. In the month of September the dredging fleet excavated 1,062,588 cubic yards from the cut, setting a new high record for its work in that section. In addition, 63,006 cubic yards were rehandled.

"Is there any doubt in your mind of the ability of the canal force to get the best of the great slide?" General Hodges was asked, after the extracts from the above reports had been read.

Will Be a Better Canal.

"You may rest assured," he replied, "that they will get the best of it, and when they do the excavation will be a prism much larger than the originally proposed canal prism."

"Will it be a better canal after the cut is cleared of the present slide?" was another question asked General Hodges.

"Yes, I am sure it will," was his answer.

"And I want to say," General Hodges added, "that what has happened in the Canal Zone proves how absolutely foolish it would have been to have built a sea level canal. A sea level canal would have been eighty-five feet deeper, and that meant a cut that much deeper, and with the creation of a problem the seriousness and extent of which can now be easily appreciated."

"When will the canal be open to navigation again?" was asked.

"I am not ready to answer that question," he said.

The latest report from the canal shows that 83 vessels are tied up awaiting passage. Of these 45 are on the Atlantic and 38 on the Pacific side. The cargo held up on the Atlantic side is about 167,000 tons, and on the Pacific side about 189,000 tons.

SUITS WILL FOLLOW LAST PANAMA SLIDE

Shippers' Claims Likely to be Blocked by Limitation of Liability.

CANAL TO BE OPEN JAN. 1

Dredges Doing Fast Work in Gaillard Cut—Small Vessels May Go Through Before 1916.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Oct. 23.—Shipping agents here said today that their clients in the United States were preparing to make claims for many thousands of dollars against the Panama Canal for losses due to delays and other causes following the recent slide near Gaillard (Culebra) Cut.

The steamship companies are now gathering information on which to base their claims, which will undoubtedly be very large, although it is impossible now to estimate the total. The officials of the Panama Canal admit that they have received recently many letters regarding the payment of such claims. The answer has been that the United States Government is not responsible for any losses except those that are due to actual damage to ships while in the canal locks under an act of Congress specifically limiting the nature of claims that may be allowed.

PANAMA, Oct. 23.—Although an official statement is lacking, it has become known that the Panama Canal will again be ready for traffic not later than Jan. 1 next. Major Gen. George W. Goethals, Governor of the Canal Zone, continues to maintain an attitude of reticence, declining to commit himself on any definite date for reopening the canal, in view of the uncertainty of slide conditions in the Gaillard Cut.

General Goethals expressed gratification today at the progress being made by the dredging fleet, which is coping with a tremendous task, in view of the vast quantity of earth set in motion by the last slide. Although General Goethals would not set a date on which he thought the canal might be reopened, other canal engineers expressed the conviction that a sufficient channel would be obtained considerably before the first of the year which would permit the passage of light draught vessels.

These engineers pointed out that the channel was originally closed for a distance of 1,300 feet, and that since the last great slide dredges had restored a 30-foot channel practically half of that distance and at a width sufficient for the passage of small vessels.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—At the Panama Canal office here it was said tonight that the various shipping agents reported as intending to bring suit against the Government for losses caused by the closing of the canal by the slides at Gaillard Cut would have no ground for action.

The Government, it was said, had never guaranteed that the canal would be continuously open for use and had assumed no obligations that would make it liable for delays in making the passage. All regulations have from the first given full and fair notice of this.

There were in all nearly ninety vessels tied up at Gatun and Balboa when the emergency freight rate was made to relieve the situation. Several vessels went back out of the canal and have sailed through the Straits of Magellan or around the Horn. No tolls were required for locking these vessels back out of the canal, and all tolls that were paid by vessels caught by the slide were refunded.

EDITOR FALLS TO DEATH.

Loses Balance and Drops 14 Feet in Elevator Shaft.

A fall of fourteen feet down an elevator shaft in Hoboken yesterday morning injured Nathaniel S. Phelan, city editor of The Hudson Observer, so badly that he died in St. Mary's Hospital two hours later. Phelan went to The Observer building early and reached for the cable to bring the car to the first floor. He lost his balance and fell to the basement, where the janitor found him unconscious.

Phelan lived at 255 Union Street, Jersey City, with his wife and one child. He was 35 years old and well known in newspaper circles throughout New Jersey. He was born and educated in Pawtucket, R. I.

AUTO MAY BETRAY BANDITS.

Disabled Car Resembles That Used in Holdup of Erie Train.

An automobile, resembling that used by the bandits who held up an Erie train at Glen Rock, N. J., Wednesday night, was found yesterday at the Park garage in East Boulevard, Weehawken. The car has a dark green body, and appears to have seen hard usage. It was towed to the garage Friday in a disabled condition by parties unknown to the proprietor, George Cox, or his employes. Cox was absent from the garage, according to his statement, when the car arrived. Repairs were ordered on the car, so employes of the garage told the Weehawken police, and it was to be called for.

The only difference between the car and the one reported to have been used by the bandits is in the license number. The bandits' car was said to have had New York license No. 17,600. The car at the Park garage has a New Jersey license of the same number. It is believed that the "N. Y." on the license plate was probably taken for "N. J." through error by those who saw the bandits' car.

A patrolman was put on guard at the garage and if any of the men who left the automobile show up and cannot give a satisfactory statement they will be arrested.

DANIEL REEVES, Inc.

This name is a sign on 66 separate grocery stores—61 of which are on Manhattan Island and 5 in New Jersey.

The name is also a sign on a big warehouse at 451 to 455 West 125th Street, near Amsterdam Avenue, which is the supply depot for the 66 stores.

What meaning has the name to you?

1. It means quality and purity in everything that is sold to you.
2. It means very fair prices on every standard food article that can be bought in any honest grocery store or that any honest manufacturer makes.
3. It means one price to all and that price spot cash to everybody.
4. It means equal service to all by polite salesmen who take pride in their work and in keeping themselves scrupulously clean.
5. It means a clean store where articles are kept clean all of the time and delivered to customers in a clean manner.

No individual grocery store—no chain of grocery stores—can possibly give a greater variety of pure food articles to the public than the DANIEL REEVES, INC., STORES.

No individual grocery store—no chain of grocery stores—can buy better or sell better than the DANIEL REEVES, INC., STORES.

DANIEL REEVES, INC., keeps pace with what the food manufacturers are doing and with the public's desires in the matter of pure foods.

DANIEL REEVES, INC., is going ahead as fast as possible trying to keep up with the growth of this community.

Fifteen years ago there was only one store at 141st St. and 8th Av. During eleven years the number grew to 35 stores. During the last four years 31 more stores started. Other stores are now in process of being leased.

We guess we will catch up to the growth hereabouts in a year or so, because our stores are prospering and people in neighborhoods want our kind of grocery store. We believe in the neighborhood store—going to the people instead of having them come to us.

As evidence of the fairness of our prices, we mention:

Kirkman's, Gold, or Babbitt's Soap, 7 cakes for 25c.

You know the high standard of these makes of soap.

Hecker's or Gold Medal Flour, 24½ lb. bag, 80c.

We sell no flour privately labeled. It must be a well known and good brand before we will sell it.

Coffee—a Special Blend of South American Coffee, per lb., 19c.

We can recommend this coffee as being good enough for anybody to drink. Roasted and blended in our own warehouse.

Luckenbach Company Says the Panama Railroad May Force It to Sell or Change Registry.

VESSELS WORTH $7,000,000

Charge Made That Freight Rates on Isthmus Have Been Raised to a Prohibitive Level.

Announcement was made yesterday by H. F. Hamilton, traffic manager of the Luckenbach Steamship Company at 44 Whitehall Street, that the rates made by the Panama Railroad Company for the transshipment of freight across the Isthmus since the closing of the canal were so prohibitive that unless they were modified the company would have to go out of business.

"We have at the present time ten steamers of 6,500 tons, each carrying a crew of fifty all told," said Mr. Hamilton, "and have four new steamers of 11,000 gross tonnage under construction, which are to be completed next year. Until the canal was closed we were operating a steamer from New York to San Francisco every seven days, and starting back eight days after reaching San Francisco. Since the closing of the canal it has taken twenty-five days to land the freight in San Francisco, which is an additional seventeen days at $1,000 a day, or a total of $17,000 for the extra time.

"In the first circular issued by the Panama Railroad Company on Oct. 8, it was stated that the freight would be carried across the isthmus from Panama to Colon or vice versa at $3 a ton, inclusive of all charges.

"On Oct. 19 a new circular was sent out by the railroad canceling the previous rate and giving a classified scale of rates for transfer without wharfage, stevedoring, or any of the charges that had been included in the former $3 a ton rate. This meant that our total expenses per ton, including all charges for loading and unloading, amounted to $9 a ton, which makes it prohibitive.

"The rates will not be so hard on foreign vessels because, before the Canal closed, they had to pay on weight and measurement, and now they pay on weight only. Under the new La Follette Seamen's bill the operation of an American steamer of 6,500 tons costs $2,500 more a month than a foreign owned ship of the same tonnage.

"We have written to E. A. Drake, the Vice President of the Panama Railroad, protesting against the increase in the railroad tolls, and telegrams have also been sent to him by the Italian-Swiss colony of San Francisco, the Guggenheimer Company of San Francisco, the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, and many other important commercial bodies.

"All the fruit canning companies make their contracts including freight charges in the Summer, and we have been obliged to inform them that we cannot operate the service and pay the heavy charges demanded by the railroad. If our steamers are taken off it will mean a loss of millions of dollars to these companies."

"Edgar F. Luckenbach is going to Washington on Monday to make a final appeal to Secretary of War Garrison, and if this does not have any result I expect that he will sell the ten steamers belonging to the Luckenbach Line and go out of business, or put them under a foreign flag. These vessels are worth now about $7,000,000. It looks as if the Administration was trying to drive all American-owned vessels off the sea in order to demonstrate the necessity for Government-owned ships to carry the trade of the United States."

Mr. Hamilton added that the Tehuantepec Ship Railroad was out of commission and there were 4,800 carloads of freight waiting at Galveston, which had been sent from New York for California on the Mallory steamers, so that the only way open now was the Straits of Magellan.

The four new steamers under construction at Fore River and Camden ship yards, Mr. Hamilton said, are to be twin screw, oil burning, electric turbine, freight-carrying vessels built on the latest plans with a speed of fourteen and a half knots, to make the voyage to San Francisco, (via the Canal,) in nineteen days.

FIND HARVEY J. HERMAN DEAD IN PHILADELPHIA

New Haven Man, Who Was Soon to Have Married, Commits Suicide in a Hotel.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—Harvey J. Herman, adopted son of George M. Griswold, a wealthy New Haven manufacturer, who vanished last Sunday on the eve of his wedding, committed suicide today by inhaling gas in a room at the Hotel Jameson, Broad and Filbert Streets.

He registered at the hotel on Sunday as "J. H. Husted, Trenton." He remained in his room almost constantly, leaving only occasionally to take a walk. This afternoon his body was found lying on the bed. The windows and cracks around the doors had been stopped, and gas was flowing from a jet. When the clothing was searched only 5 cents in cash was found.

The body was identified by a wallet bearing the name "Harvey J. Herman." Griswold was notified at once of the discovery of the body.

On the day he vanished, Mr. Herman, who was 34 years old, was supposed to be going to visit his fiancée, Miss Edith T. A. Todd of Waterbury, Conn. When he failed to arrive at the expected time a general search for him was begun. He was Financial Secretary of the Edgewood Lodge of Knights of Pythias at New Haven, and the tens of thousands of Knights throughout the country were asked to aid in the search. His accounts with the Griswold Company and the Knights of Pythias were found to be in excellent shape.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 23.—The family of George M. Griswold of Westville have accepted the theory that the man who committed suicide in Philadelphia today was their foster son, Harvey J. Herman. Mrs. Griswold said tonight that she felt confident of that fact. Mr. Griswold is believed to have gone to Philadelphia.

The Griswolds have believed for several days that Mr. Herman did not mean to go to meet his intended bride in New York Sunday when he left here. His conduct made them suspicious, although they said that they knew of no reason why he should not have kept his engagement to be married. Miss Todd, his fiancée left the Griswold home here on Wednesday and has since been at her home in Waterbury. She has been employed in an office in Brooklyn for several months.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERBURY, Conn., Oct. 23.—Miss Edith Todd, the fiancée of Harvey J. Herman, is thought to be on her way to Philadelphia to identify his body.

Her father, J. Eugene Todd, said today:

"We know of no reason why Mr. Herman should have committed suicide, nor does my daughter."

STIMSON ANSWERS THE BUDGET CRITICS

New Constitution Ends the Waste of State Money and "Pork Barrel."

BUSINESS METHODS USED

State's Expenses Have Increased 600 Per Cent. in 30 Years and Population 82 Per Cent.

In reply to the criticism of the opponents of the proposed Constitution that the budget plan gives the Governor too much power in his great control over the State's purse strings, the Citizens' Non-Partisan Committee for the Adoption of the Constitution yesterday issued a statement prepared by ex-Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, who was the Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Constitutional Convention. He says that if economy is to be effected in the New York State administration some one man will have to be awake nights to accomplish it and that the Governor is the only man upon whom that responsibility can properly rest.

"No surer way could be found for inviting extravagance and waste than the present system of State appropriations," said Mr. Stimson. "The estimates for the next year are made up by over 150 departments, boards or bureaus. They are shoveled into the Legislature. There they are considered in the privacy of a committee room and the final appropriation bills are passed in the hurry and confusion of the final hours of the session. Millions are voted away in minutes, while the bills appropriating these millions are not even printed in final form and the men who vote for them—nine out of ten—don't know what they are voting for.

No One to Blame for Waste.

"No single officer of the State undertakes the public responsibility for making these estimates; and in this respect we violate the fundamental principles of civilized government and of all successful business. The only way to stop waste is for the people of the State to know exactly whose fault it is if waste occurs. So the proposed Constitution provides that the estimates of all administrative departments shall be first submitted to the Governor and shall be revised by him. The responsibility for securing an economical and systematic plan for the budget of the State is thus laid squarely on his shoulders.

"When the Governor has reduced the estimates he formulates them into a budget, which is simply a financial plan showing how much money is needed and where it should come from, together with the balance sheets of the State's resources and liabilities and statements of the expenditures of past years for the purpose of comparison. The Governor then transmits the budget to the Legislature not later than the first day of February. He and his department heads have the right to appear before the Legislature and discuss the budget. The Legislature has the right to call them and ask about items of the budget. The Legislature can cut down the budget, but cannot add to it, and when they act upon the budget, their action is final.

"Thus responsibility is placed squarely upon the Legislature to make the final decision as to how much money shall be appropriated. They cannot swell the appropriations bills with 'pork' in reliance upon the Governor's veto to cut them down, as is done now. The result of this good system will be that instead of having appropriation bills reported and passed in a few hours at the close of the session, they will be brought to the attention of the whole State early in the session and will be debated, not in the secrecy of a committee room, but on the open floor of both houses.

"After the Governor's budget is passed a limited power of appropriation is left in the hands of the Legislature, subject to the Governor's veto. This power will be sufficient to correct a case where the Governor has clearly gone wrong in his budget. But it cannot be made the means of destroying the economies of a good budget without the taxpayers of the State being made aware of it.

Closes the "Pork Barrel."

"The proposed Constitution also stops 'pork barrel' appropriations. Appropriations for local improvements have been a source of great abuse in the past. The State's money has been wasted on bridges, buildings, and dredging of streams and other local improvements which should have been paid for by the county, town, or village which alone is benefited. It has been found easier to bleed the State Treasury than to make such improvements at county expense, which would have to pass the scrutiny of a vigilant local body of taxpayers.

"The proposed Constitution provides that hereafter no public moneys shall be appropriated for the construction of any work until plans and estimates of the cost of the work shall have first been filed by the Superintendent of Public Works, together with a certificate by him as to whether or not, in his judgment, the general interests of the State then require that such improvement shall be made at the expense of the State. This amendment makes it somebody's business to report upon a question which too often in the past has been nobody's business.

"It was the general consensus of the convention that this amendment would do more to stop a prevalent form of legislative graft than almost any other amendment proposed in the Constitution.

"Somebody has got to stop the waste of State money. Twenty years ago we had almost no State debt; today we have a State debt of $156,000,000 and a contracted authorized debt of $231,000,000. If the State, municipal, and county debts of New York were spread over the acreage there would be a debt of $48 an acre throughout the State. The expenses of running the State have increased 600 per cent. in the past thirty years while the population has increased 82 per cent.

"The convention was greatly impressed by these dangers. And for that reason it proposed serial bonds to replace the old sinking fund system by which a loan was not paid off until the end of the period of years for which it was issued. Of course, interest was paid all this time. With serial bonds, if the issue be for twenty years, one-twentieth of the issue must be paid off each year. If this is adopted whenever an administration incurs debt in the future, it cannot unload the responsibility of payment on to some future administration; on the contrary, it must right away make provision for the repayment of the first year's bonds.

The Serial Bond System.

"Our sinking fund system is inaccurate, complicated and uncertain. In some years we have collected too much from the taxpayers; in other years too little. The serial bond system substitutes an accurate and easily ascertained figure of liability. There is no possibility of a miscalculation.

"The control of the vast sinking fund gives to a State officer a chance for political manipulation. He can invest in the securities of any town, village or city he wishes to favor, and the temptations to make such investments for other motives than the safety of the fund are enormous. The serial bond method abolishes this risk and this temptation. The serial bond is cheaper in the saving of interest.

"If the present canal debt of $118,000,000 had been issued in serial bonds instead of in sinking fund bonds, the State would have been saved ultimately over $46,000,000 in the cost of settling that debt and in interest. The proposed Constitution also gives authority to refund present sinking fund State bonds with serial bonds. If the canal debt be thus refunded, the State will thereby be saved $30,000,000.

"In the past we have issued fifty-year bonds for the construction of highways. Some 30 per cent. of the proceeds of these bonds has gone into the construction of surface of highways which cannot last more than from four to eight years. This means that for more than forty years after the benefits of the issue have gone, the taxpayers will be paying interest on the loan. It is the worst kind of waste. If the new Constitution is adopted, the life of the bond must be adapted to the life of the improvement.

"Taken as a whole, the financial proposals of the new Constitution seek to stop the growing extravagance and corruption which is gnawing at the vitals of our State Government by introducing the much-needed principles of responsibility and publicity. They seek to bring into our public business the same methods of foresight and planning and adjustment of expenditure to revenues that have been long familiar and indispensable principles of common sense in the affairs of successful American business."

CULLEN FINDS MORE FLAWS.

Replies to Root and Appeals to Voters to Kill Constitution.

Edgar M. Cullen, former Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, has written an open letter to the voters of the State answering Elihu Root, who was President of the convention, and who took exception to Mr. Cullen's criticisms. Mr. Cullen said he was against the proposed Constitution because the convention refused to incorporate in the Bill of Rights this provision reported by its committee:

"Nor shall any military tribunal exercise jurisdiction over a civilian unless engaged in military or naval service while the regularly constituted State courts are open to administer justice."

Senator Root in his reply wanted to know why ex-Judge Cullen didn't raise an objection to the omission before the convention, and said because he didn't do so he should not raise an objection now.

"Suppose," writes Mr. Cullen, "the appropriate committee of the convention had reported a prohibition of polygamy, and the convention had rejected the provision on the ground that polygamy was right and proper, can any one doubt what disposition the people would make of a Constitution proposed by that convention? In that case, as in the present, the objection would be not that the prohibition did not appear in the Constitution, but in the 'how and why' it failed to appear. In the hypothetical case the people would reject the Constitution because its adoption would constitute an approval, at least by indirection, of polygamy.

"The point in the present case is precisely the same. My objection to the Constitution is not that it fails to incorporate a prohibition against the unwarrantable action of military commissions, but that the prohibition was rejected because the convention decided that military commissions should not be prohibited from trying civilians though the civil courts were open, and in my letter I quoted to you from the official record the exact language of those who spoke for a majority of the convention."

Couldn't Protest at Time.

Ex-Judge Cullen said the reason he did not make an appeal to the convention at the time was because he was far away at the bedside of a relative dangerously ill. Of the reasons for the rejection he said he did not learn until he was able to get a copy of the Convention Record and read the debate. He writes:

"It was then too late for any appeal to the convention, so I have been compelled to make it to the people. Further, can any one imagine that my appeal would have been efficacious where Mr. Wickersham's, Mr. Marshall's, and Mr. Stimson's failed? If I am subject to reproach in this respect, what is to be said of the first day of the convention who, though absent at the time, must have been almost immediately aware of the action that had been taken? 'Where was Roderick then? One blast upon his bugle horn were worth a thousand men.'

"It is said that the proposed Constitution is of such transcendent merit that whatever may be its omissions it should be adopted for its affirmative provisions, and I am challenged to point out a fault in it. I had not expected to go beyond the subject in which I feel most vitally interested, but I accept the challenge. The most censorious critic of the new Constitution cannot deny that it contains much of a constructive character. But whether that quality is a merit or a fault depends on the structure which has been constructed."

UNGER FEARS A "JOKER."

Suggests That Corrupt Judge Could Free Malefactors.

A. B. Unger, who was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, sees in the proposed amendment which says "Any person may waive trial by jury on a charge of felony punishable by not exceeding five years imprisonment, or of an indictable misdemeanor" an opportunity for rich malefactors, who may have influence with a judge, to escape paying penalty for their crimes.

"The sinister significance of this change," he said last night, "is that every powerful bank wrecker and monopolist offender whose influence is strong with the judge and who dreads a jury trial by common people will waive jury trial. He will then be tried before the judge. Do you think that any poor, uninfluential man will forego the privilege of being tried by a jury of his peers? I have had real experience in the practice of criminal law and I am willing to say that unless the defendant thinks he has some influence with the trial judge he will not under any circumstances forego his right of securing the unanimous opinion of twelve honest citizens."

BATTLE PRAISES NEW LAW.

Nonpartisan and Just Except Reapportionment Article.

George Gordon Battle, Democrat and law partner of Senator O'Gorman, said yesterday that he was going to vote for the proposed Constitution. He said that when, as a partisan Democrat, he had first viewed the Constitutional Convention it looked like "an assemblage of thorns and thistles from which neither grapes nor figs could be expected," but that after a careful study of the Constitution he had come to the conclusion that a miracle had been performed.

He said he would vote "no" on the apportionment article because it was unfair to New York City, but that he was strongly in favor of the main body of the Constitution.

"At first I was inclined to look with suspicion upon the work of a body so overwhelmingly Republican as was the Coinvention," he said. "I knew that there were flagrant evils in our State Government, but I had little hope that a convention apparently so completely controlled by gentlemen whose sympathies lie with the vested interests of the country would evolve a progressive scheme of fundamental law for our State.

BROWN TO VOTE "NO."

Senate Leader Says Constitution Makes Governor Autocrat.

President Pro Tem. of the Senate Elon R. Brown of Watertown, N. Y., dictator of the upper house in the session of 1915, and one of the most influential Republicans in the State, has issued a statement opposing the adoption of the proposed Constitution. He says it would make the Governor "the most powerful autocrat north of Mexico."

The Senator's statement says in part:

"The most conspicuous of the changes is the provision conferring upon the Governor the appointment without confirmation by the Senate of nearly all the State officers, with unrestricted power of removal, and giving to him the initiative in all appropriations, which may not be increased either in amount or items by the Legislature.

"The Legislature is shorn of power by conferring it upon the Governor and upon cities and counties.

"The scheme of the new Constitution is extravagant. The mandatory expenses amount to a fixed charge of at least $500,000 per annum.

"The new Constitution should preserve to the people of the whole State the greatest practicable power of doing their will under a representative form of government and not shackle popular expression by artificial and untried experiments in autocracy."

Will Debate Constitution.

The Bronx Good Government Club will have a debate upon the proposed Constitution next Friday night in the Bronx Board of Trade Building, 137th Street and Third Avenue. Henry K. Davis, a lawyer, will speak in favor of the Constitution, and Professor Thomas S. Lonergan, author and lecturer, will speak against it. At the close of the debate the speakers will answer questions.

Louis Marshall to Speak.

Louis Marshall will speak on the "New Constitution" at the Franklin's Men Club meeting in the Young Men's Hebrew Association auditorium, Lexington Avenue and Ninetieth Street, next Sunday night. Felix M. Warburg will preside.

Appeal for Poor Family.

A paper-box maker has died of heart disease and has left his widow and four little children destitute. The mother is far from strong, and the baby is only a year old, so that she can do nothing more than attend to her home. The family will be entitled to assistance under the Widows' Pension bill. The Widowed Mothers' Fund Association, 102 Bowery, wishes to care for the family for the next two months, and appeals for $58. Donations may be sent to Mrs. Henry Zuckerman, 80 Broadway, New York, or to the office of the association. Thanks are offered to Elizabeth P. W. for $10, A. W. S. for $5, Sonia H. for $2 and E. M. for $1 in response to a previous appeal.

SHEPARD HEIR LOST TO HIS PARENTS

PRISON CLAIMANTS' DANGER

Abandonment of Waif, Now in Home of Millions, Grave Offense Under Law.

Anticipating the probability that the adoption by Mr. and Mrs. Finley J. Shepard of "John Doe 104," the waif found on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral, might result in claims of relationship pouring in from all parts of the country from persons who had failed to discover the tie of blood until the child had been made an heir to millions, lawyers for the Shepards fully convinced themselves before the adoption that no person living had any right to the child.

The first speculation as to the boy's family history, which has been put forward since the boy's adoption, is negligible, according to counsel for the Shepards. Edward Edwards of Manlius, a town near Syracuse, said Friday that he believed himself to be the half-brother of the child. He said that his father, who had used the name of McCleary and that of Edwards, had died on Aug. 13, 1914, at the Harlem Hospital, leaving two young children, Angus and Gwendolyn. He thought that it was Angus who became "John Doe 104" and then Finley J. Shepard.

A search of the records of Harlem Hospital yesterday failed to show that a McCleary had died there on Aug. 13, 1914, which was a short time before the finding of "John Doe 104." If he had died there on that date that fact would not have had much effect in showing the true parentage of the child.

Even if a woman claiming the child as her son would come forward it would be a task of the greatest difficulty for her to prove that the child was hers and no amount of proof would enable her to regain possession of the child, according to lawyers who have worked on the case.

If the mother lives and ever comes forward to demand the child, she would be liable to criminal prosecution, unless she could prove that she had not abandoned it. If she could show that she was guiltless in this respect, it would remain for her to explain why she had never laid claim to the child, the story of whose abandonment was published all over the country, until he became a prospective heir to great wealth.

The most notable case of recent date of this character was that of George Frederick Haeffner and his wife, Jeanette, who early this year abandoned their four children and later claimed them, with the explanation that they had forsaken the children because of poverty, but that parental affection had later triumphed over economic necessity. The father and mother were sent to prison by Judge Rosalsky for terms of from two years and six months to five years, while the children were turned over to asylums.

Anybody now claiming to be a parent of the adopted Shepard child would probably find it difficult to escape punishment of the kind administered to the Haeffners. In proof of prolonged illness, temporary loss of memory, or any excuse to avert punishment for possible claimants of "John Doe 104," they would have to prove beyond doubt their true parentage of the child, and that under the circumstances would be almost an impossibility.

The statement of Edward Edwards is of the vaguest sort, as his belief that the child may be his half brother is based solely upon the coincidence of the death of his father—Edwards or McCleary—at a date shortly before the finding of the child and his discovery of a resemblance between the photographs of Angus Edwards and "John Doe 104." Even if he presented evidence that might be taken seriously, his status as a half brother would give him a very slender title to the child.

Walter B. Walker, counsel for the Shepards, said yesterday that during his search for relatives of "John Doe 104," detectives had made inquiries all over the United States, running down every possible clue and advertising for relatives in sections of the country where it was thought that the boy might have lived. The boy himself, 4 years old at the time he was found, had almost no recollections of his parents or former surroundings, though he gave the impression that he had formerly lived at Philadelphia. The inquiry for relatives on that account began there. Mr. Walker said that a large sum had been spent on the aunt for the boy's kin. He would not name the amount, but according to his report yesterday it was in the neighborhood of $50,000.

MAY HAVE LIVED IN CANADA.

Man Who Searched for Boy's Parents Tells of Hunt.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—That "John Doe 104," the boy who was found on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, on Sept. 17, 1914, and who has been made the adopted son of Finley J. Shepard and his wife, may have been the child of Canadian parents was the theory advanced last night by Hampton G. Silcox of 1822 Hunting Park Avenue, this city, who was employed by Mr. Shepard's attorneys to conduct the search for the child's parents.

Because of the fact that the waif first said he lived in Philadelphia, Mr. Silcox escorted the boy through Philadelphia and its suburbs on four or five occasions during January, Ferbuary, March, and April of this year. In spite of his intimacy with the child, Mr. Silcox never heard the boy give any clue to his parentage.

The boy told of having come to New York by a long train ride. The statement, coupled with the fact that he wore mittens, led to the theory that he might have come from the mountain region of northern New York or New England. But although every city and crossroads towns was searched, no one could be found who could identify him. The search was not continued into Canada, said Mr. Silcox.

"One story was that the boy was the son of a Wissinoming man, formerly employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, who had moved to California," he said. "We found the man at last, but it wasn't his son. The boy must have been brought up in the country, for he was familiar with country scenes. Whoever reared him gave him the best of training. He is extremely handsome, bright, and affectionate. His table manners showed that he came from a family of good breeding.

"This made it all the more odd that the clothes in which he was dressed when he was found were of the cheapest material and well worn. In most cases foundlings are dressed well, to give them a chance to get a good home. His little washable suit might have been bought anywhere for $1.25, and his coat had been made over from a girl's coat. His suit was of such common material that, although we traced it to the mills where the cloth was made, then to the jobbers and from there to the retailers, its purchaser could not be found.

"It is likely that the persons who actually abandoned the boy will be afraid to put in a claim for him, for the penalty for abandonment under the laws of New York is, I believe, twenty years' imprisonment."

"Perhaps more persons were reached in this investigation than in any other ever conducted," said Silcox. "Pictures of the boy and circular letters were sent to every city, town and hamlet in the United States. Every mail carrier in the country was reached through the postal department. Every school room in the East was acquainted with the search, and pictures of the boy were displayed in the hope that some child might recognize in him a playmate. Every children's institution or hospital where a child might have been taken was visited."

HONOR MR. PERKINS.

Labor Men Say District Attorney Should Be Retained.

District Attorney Perkins was the guest of honor at a dinner given by Arthur C. Train, S. Walter Kaufmann, and William D. Manice last Friday night to the representatives of several local trade union organizations in the Green Room of the Hotel McAlpin. The dinner was attended by representatives of "Big 6," the International Lithographers' Union of North America, National Brotherhood of Bookbinders, 6; Waiters' Local, 1; Newspapers Handlers' Union, Mailers' Union, I. T. U., 6; Machinists' International, District 15; Associated Machinists, 406; Stereotypers, 1; Rock Drillers' Union, Waiters', Bartenders', and Cooks' Local, 141; Book Stampers, 22; Gilders, 11; Mail Deliverers' Union, 6; Franklin Union of Associated Assistants, 23; Milliners' Workers, 23; Sheet Straighteners and Handlers' Union, 1, C. F. L.; Plumbers' International, 245; Cook's Union, 26; New York Newspaper, 25; Lithograph Assistants, 1; New York Printing Press Union, 51; Job Press Feeders, 1, and Bookbinders' Union, 1.

Mr. Edwards, President of the Pressmen's Union, spoke of Mr. Perkins's record in the District Attorney's office, and said that the feeling among labor unionists was that a man should be retained in office when he had made good.

The speakers said that today a laboring man could go to the District Attorney's office with the knowledge that his rights, either as a complainant or as a defendant, would be respected, and that he would be treated with openness and fairness. The guests organized themselves informally into a non-partisan committee to work for the election of Mr. Perkins and especially to organize a mass meeting to be held in Cooper Union Thursday night, to be addressed by leaders of organized labor in New York.

KIRCHWEY SEES GOVERNOR.

Rumor That He May Succeed Warden Osborne at Sing Sing.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 23.—George W. Kirchwey, ex-dean of the Columbia Law School, came here today to confer with Governor Whitman about the prison situation in the State, with particular reference to Sing Sing. Dr. Kirchwey, who recently investigated conditions at Sing Sing, has been mentioned as a possible successor to Warden Thomas Mott Osborne or John B. Riley, Superintendent of Prisons, should either retire from office. He said today that he was not a candidate and did not expect appointment to either place.

Dr. George W. Kirchwey said last night at his home, 54 Morningside Drive, that his visit to the Governor had no special significance.

"For some time," he said, "I have been a frequent visitor to Sing Sing, and I simply went to Albany today to acquaint Governor Whitman with conditions as I had found them. No recent revelations prompted the visit, and I did not go to criticise any official. Every one interested knows that I am in general sympathy with Warden Osborne's administration and policies, and my unofficial efforts have been directed for some time toward furthering co-operation between Mr. Osborne and Superintendent Riley."

Who Shall Measure Its Musical Possibilities?
KRANICH & BACH Player Grand PIANO
"I HAVE NEVER HEARD ITS EQUAL"
A Convincing Endorsement by
HOMER N. BARTLETT
America's Foremost Living Composer and Author of the "Grande Polka de Concert."
Messrs. Kranich & Bach
Gentlemen:
I cannot refrain from expressing the extraordinary pleasure and satisfaction with which I listened to the rendition of several selections on your Player Grand Piano a few days ago. The musicianly effects achieved, the perfect range from the delicate and beautiful legato tones to the magnificent climax surpassed anything I have ever heard on any player-piano.
The amazing thing about it all was the ease and simplicity with which these beautiful effects were produced.
I have been present at numerous recitals and musicales where player-pianos were exploited, and many of them were exceptionally well demonstrated, but I can unhesitatingly say I have never heard the equal of the Kranich & Bach Player Grand for tonal beauty and artistic playing possibilities. Yours very truly,
Homer N. Bartlett
EVER since the first player piano opened the wonderful realm of music to everyone there has been constant effort to so perfect the self-playing mechanism as to satisfy the exacting artistic demands of master musicians.
This artistic ideal, for which inventive genius has striven for nearly a quarter of a century, is fully realized in the Kranich & Bach Player Grand Piano.
Eminently satisfying to the professional, the Kranich & Bach Player Grand will also give endless pleasure to the musical amateur. With the improved "hand-played" music rolls the veriest novice can obtain effects that are musically correct as well as fascinating.
Homer N. Bartlett, America's foremost living composer, says: "I have never heard its equal." Well-known pianists, everywhere, are amazed by its artistic qualities. Unquestionably it is music's crowning achievement.
Above all else, this instrument is a superb Grand Piano, always available for manual playing, and possessing the exquisite tonal quality and permanent construction for which Kranich & Bach instruments have been famous for half a century.
Furthermore, this is the only Player Grand in which the self-playing mechanism can be hidden when the instrument is used for manual playing.
One has only to hear and examine the Kranich & Bach Player Grand to realize its remarkable musical and artistic pre-eminence. If you are seeking the best do not fail to hear this instrument.

STEFANSSON LIVES WELL IN THE ARCTIC

Explorer Writes to Artist Friend That There Is No Dearth of Game.

FOOD FOR MEN AND DOGS

Karluk's Loss Not Irreparable—Intrepid Scientist Hopes to Accomplish Much.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, explorer, unfolds the secrets of living on the country in the arctic in a letter just received by his intimate friend, E. W. Deming, the artist, who was among those who believed that the intrepid scientist would survive.

Mr. Deming is an ardent sportsman, and the letter to him written with the idea of describing the chance of getting game in the arctic regions also demonstrates the theory which the two men had often discussed, that one who could shoot and fish could make his way without extensive supplies.

THE NEW YORK TIMES last Friday printed letters from Stefansson which dwelt upon the purely scientific aspects of his expedition since the party was left to shift for itself by the drifting away of the Karluk. This one deals with life in the open and tells of the struggle of man against the elements.

Lives "On the Country."

West coast of Melville Island, near 75 degrees 30 minutes north.
July 4, 1915.

Dear Mr. Deming: We are here on the way home from an ice trip that has already taken 134 days and will probably run to 170 before we reach again our base at Kellett. So far as the length of the trip in time is concerned it is a pretty good one, thanks to our rifles. We have had today some rather tough muskox meat, and there is a big bull a quarter of a mile away from camp whose feeding and sleeping is undisturbed. The meat and the fat used on the other trip will come up to 10,000 pounds. Much of the fat was used for fuel, for we have burnt nothing but blubber for two months now.

There are few who consider themselves sportsmen who are not better shots than I, but there are not many who have made the rifle more useful. Bears, seal, caribou, muskoxen, have contributed, each in their appropriate environment. We have not yet been on sea nor land where men and dogs cannot live indefinitely "on the country."

As for me, I enjoy it. I am writing short notes to my friends on spare pages of the back of my diary, for I expect that we will have a whaler touching at Kellett's Point about the time we are due to arrive there, about Aug. 10. The time will be too short for letters then. My diary is not rich in blank pages, and I have not much time. These short notes are written merely to show I am remembering my friends. For most of those who gather at your house this one note will have to serve. Please remember me to them and say that luck has not been entirely unkind.

Karluk's Program Carried Out.

We seem to be in a fair way to accomplish a considerable part of the Karluk's program and most of what I hoped since she went adrift. Of her men, I know yet nothing beyond Bartlett's safe return and the supposed safety of the others on Wrangell Island. We still have a year's work ahead, and then I hope to come south and see you at the lodge and sit in the empty chair. If time and opportunity permit, I shall write to Mrs. Deming at least, and to one of those at the Museum. With best regards,

V. STEFANSSON.

Herschel Island, via Edmonton, Alberta, care of the N. W. M. Police.

A portion of the letter was read at a meeting of the Explorers' Club last Friday night as part of a celebration of the news of the safety of a fellow member and it was much discussed by the members.

Mr. Deming said yesterday that he and Mrs. Deming expected to go up to Alaska next Summer and be at Nome in the Autumn to meet Mr. Stefansson and welcome him back from the wilds of snow. Mr. Deming meanwhile would devote his waiting time to painting among the Indian tribes, he said.

Letter to General Hubbard.

John Hubbard, son of the late General Thomas H. Hubbard, has given THE TIMES permission to publish the following letter to his father from the explorer, who, because of the lack of communication, had not heard of General Hubbard's death:

West Coast of Banks Island,
Near Lat. 73° 45' N.
July 1, 1914.

Dear General Hubbard: I have heard that in dropping 100 feet to their death men review the sins of a lifetime. We landed here a week ago from a ninety-six-day trip across the ice from Alaska, on which (because of accidents near the start) our food and fuel gave out over forty days before we eventually made land. You will guess that there were times of uncertainty and discomfort, especially when water lanes impeded and contrary currents and winds carried us faster away from land than we could travel toward it, but I hope you will be glad to know that the pleasant memory of your kindness to me in New York when I came home the Fall of 1912 was among the most cheering of the mental resources I had to draw upon, and that—like the sinner falling to his death—I kept thinking that I had failed perhaps in telling you clearly how much I valued the "vote of confidence" you gave me. Heaven knows when I will get a chance to send this out of Banks Island, but I hope it will get to you some time to tell you that I at least remember your kindness. We have had much hard luck, but we have finished a trip more difficult than it looks and shall continue to fight misfortune with what courage we have.

VILHJALMUR STEFANSSON.

RAILROAD STRIKE SPREADS.

Freight Handlers of N. Y., N. H. & H. and B. & A. Join B. & M. Men.

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Freight handlers of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Albany Railroads joined the Boston & Maine Railroad employes in a strike here today for an increase in wages, and pay for holidays. Union leaders claimed that 3,000 men employed by the three roads were out.

The New Haven and the Boston & Albany forces went out at noon, after Mayor Curley had made an unsuccessful effort to bring about an agreement at a conference of the representatives of both sides.

The Boston & Maine declined to take part in the conference on the ground that it could not submit to the methods adopted by the men. The company also claimed that it had 250 new handlers at work, and that it expected to have its freight terminals in normal working condition before the middle of next week.

DROWNED WOMAN IDENTIFIED

Was Divorced Wife of F. P. Wilcox of International Silver Company.

The woman's body taken from the Christopher Street ferry slip at the Lackawanna Station in Hoboken on Thursday morning was identified yesterday as that of Mrs. Katherine Wilcox, the divorced wife of Frederick P. Wilcox, a Director of the International Silver Company of Meriden, Conn., and General Manager of the company's New York store. The identification was made by James North, President of the American Silver Company, of New Britain, Conn., and an uncle of Mrs. Wilcox. He was summoned by telegraph from New Britain when a slip of paper bearing his name and address was found on Mrs. Wilcox's body.

Neither Mr. North nor any one at Mr. Wilcox's home, 59 West Eighty-fifth Street, knew yesterday where Mrs. Wilcox had lived recently, or how long she had been missing from her home. It was determined by autopsy that the body had been in the water a week, but whether her death was accidental or suicidal was not known.

Mrs. Wilcox, who was a Miss North, was married fifteen years ago to Mr. Wilcox, who is a cousin of George H. Wilcox of Meriden, Conn., President of the International Silver Company, a $20,000,000 corporation. She left her husband after eighteen months and brought a successful suit for divorce a year and a half later. Mr. Wilcox was at his estate in Bangall, Dutchess County, yesterday, but his sister said at his city home that he had not seen his wife since the divorce. Mrs. Wilcox was about 40 years old and, according to Mr. North, was well-to-do in her own name.

DENY GIRL WAS A SUICIDE.

Anna Lamey's Tragic Death Has Made Mother Critically Ill.

The funeral of Miss Anna Lamey, 25 years old, formerly telephone operator in the Maxim Restaurant, who was killed by falling or jumping from a window on the tenth floor of the Paterno Apartments, 440 Riverside Drive, Manhattan, on Thursday morning, will be held from the dead girl's home, 14 West Twentieth Street, Elmhurst, at 2 o'clock this afternoon and burial will be in Calvary Cemetery. Members of the Lamey family said yesterday that the girl did not commit suicide as reported by the police, but that death was due to heart failure from which she suffered frequent attacks.

They said, also, that the Manhattan apartment was hired by Mrs. Lamey and that the family intended to move there for the Winter owing to the irregular hours Miss Lamey was compelled to keep owing to her position. They also said that the girl's mother was so overcome by the tragedy and the stories circulated concerning her dead daughter that she was critically ill.

MRS. MAGEE GETS DIVORCE.

May Settle Her $50,000 Suit Against Her Husband's Parents.

A final decree of divorce for Mrs. Florence D. Magee from Belmont B. Magee of Great Neck has been signed by Justice Callaghan in the Brooklyn Supreme Court. Mrs. Magee is living with her father, Frank D. Deems, in Madison Avenue, Flushing. She charged her husband with unfaithfulness, and obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce from Justice Blackmar in the Queens County Supreme Court three months ago, and Justice Callaghan's order now makes this decree final.

The decree separates the children, giving the son Aubrey, 5 years old, to the custody of his father, while Dorothy, 3 years old, is given to the mother.

To Mrs. Magee is also given $20 a month for the support of her child. It is said that a suit for $50,000 damages which Mrs. Magee instituted against her husband's parents, charging them with alienating her husband's affections, will probably be settled out of court. Magee's father is a wealthy builder in Great Neck

NEW INDUSTRIAL ERA ROCKEFELLER'S AIM

Hopes to See Stockholders, Directors, Officers, and Men All in Harmony.

THEIR INTERESTS IDENTICAL

Calls Corporation a Four-Sided Table Which Must Be Square and Must Stand Level.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., seeing in perspective his new plan for the co-operation of labor and capital, believes that it will be workable and efficient.

He consented yesterday for the first time since his return from the Colorado mines to discuss at the invitation of THE NEW YORK TIMES in detail why he went and what he had accomplished. He said frankly that he did not consider this industrial representation project to be perfect, but that if it were taken up by both labor and capital in the proper spirit, he believed it would help to solve one of the vexed questions of the day.

Mr. Rockefeller, it will be remembered, spent three weeks among the mining camps of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company, of which he is a Director, and in which his father, John D. Rockefeller, and he are largely interested. He went into the mines, met the miners as man to man, learned of their work, their grievances, and their life in general. On Oct. 2 he presented at a joint meeting of officers and employes held at Pueblo, Col., that now memorable "memorandum of agreement respecting employment and living and working conditions" in which some economists see the rise of a new republic of labor and capital.

Many inquiries have been received at Mr. Rockefeller's office in the Standard Oil Building, 26 Broadway, concerning the plan, and numerous requests have been made by other corporations for copies of the pamphlet in which it is described.

Square and Level.

Every corporation, according to the view of Mr. Rockefeller, is like a square table, with its four sides—it must be square and on the level. The four parties of which it is composed are the stockholders, who put up the money which provides the plant; the Directors who see that the chief officers of the company are wisely selected; the officers who conduct the current operations; and last, although by no means least, the employes who contribute their skill and labor.

"The interest of these four parties," he said, "is common. An effort to advance one interest at the expense of another means loss to all, and sooner or later disaster must follow."

The plan provides that at each of the mining camps of the company employes shall select from their number representatives to act for them with respect to employment, working and living conditions, the adjustment of differences, and such other matters as the mutual interests within the industry may determine.

The employes under this plan, which they have already accepted by a large majority vote, will hold an annual meeting called at the direction of the President of the company. The corporation has already agreed, no matter what fluctuations there may be in the price of coal and no matter what reductions others may make, not to reduce the scale of wages during the life of the agreement, which runs until Jan. 1, 1918, and in the event of an increase in wages in any competitive field to make a relative increase. The right to hire and discharge, the management of the properties, the direction of the working forces, is vested entirely in the company, except as expressly restricted. Employes shall not be discharged without due warning, and a copy of that warning is to be sent to them and to the President of the company at the same time, thus providing ample opportunity for discussion and review.

Must Visit the Camps.

Under the plan, the President has an industrial representative who shall respond promptly to any request from the representatives of the employes for his presence, and shall visit each camp at least once every three months. There is a regular course in which complaints are to be made, and a system of appeals through which any worker, if he wishes, may reach the highest officer of the company. A special arrangement is made to protect representatives of the employes against discrimination. The plan provides that the employes shall choose their representatives by a secret ballot. The cost of administering the plan is to be borne entirely by the corporation. The agreement also provides for an eight-hour day for all men working in the mines, and rent, light, water, the price of powder, the removal of garbage, fencing of employes' yards, bath houses, social centres, the payment of wages, are all considered in the agreement.

Such in brief, is the method which is the result of several years of study on the part of Mr. Rockefeller. It was considered before the strike was called off and its details were worked out by him with the co-operation of his associates, the officials of the company, and the best obtainable experts. Even before the strike the germ of this plan had begun to develop, and it is Mr. Rockefeller's hope that the fundamental principle of fair play and mutual consideration which underlies the plan, may find acceptance in every industry throughout the country. It is his determination with the aid of the miners, the officers of the company, and the people of the State, to see that there shall never be another strike in the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company.

Corporation a Family.

"The Industrial Representation Plan," said Mr. Rockefeller yesterday, "is based on the idea that the corporation is a family. The interests of stockholders, of directors, of officials, and of workmen are identical. The members of a family cannot be at war. They cannot be in hostile camps considering what they may do separately. It has been said of this plan that it does not provide for secret meetings of the employes. Why should it specifically contemplate such a necessity? Are not all who are connected with a corporation partners in the enterprise? Are not their interests common interests? Yet there is nothing which prohibits the men meeting when they may desire to talk over their affairs. As a matter of fact they can have all the meetings they like. The success of the plan will depend entirely upon the spirit in which it is operated. If labor and capital take it up from the point of view of their common good and adapt it to the varying conditions, there seems to be every reason why it should succeed.

"The problem before the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company is so to interrelate the different elements in the company that the best interests of all will be constantly conserved. The wage earners, seeing the situation as it is, must say and will say 'we only want a square deal, we only want what is our fair proportion of return from this corporation. We will do our best to make it a success because we know that our success is dependent upon the success of all our partners. The officers must say: 'Our interest is to have every man who works for us realize that we are his friends, not his enemies, that there is no reasonable thing that he may want to talk about which we will not gladly discuss with him, explain, and do.' The Directors, on their part, must give their best energies and efforts to devising policies for the interest of all.

Not a Panacea.

"The plan," continued Mr. Rockefeller, "is not a panacea, and it has never been recommended as a cure for all ills. It is far from perfect, and yet I believe that it is a step in the right direction. As labor and capital come to understand each other better, as officers and men know each other, and work in a friendly spirit, the plan should constantly develop. It is sufficiently elastic to meet changes in conditions. Although it guarantees the men a definite wage until 1918, no matter what changes there may be in the market, it gives freedom of action in the meantime for natural development in practically every direction."

"How will it affect the unions?" asked the reporter of THE TIMES.

"There is nothing in it," Mr. Rockefeller said, "which is in any way hostile to labor organizations. There is no discrimination whatever against the unions, and a man is free to join them or not as he likes. There is nothing to prevent a union man from holding office as a representative of the men if he is duly elected to that position. The number of union men varies at the different camps. At one camp they may predominate; at another there will be comparatively few. This is to be a sort of republic of labor in which every citizen is to be free and independent. There is no discrimination against any man by reason of his affiliations."

Mr. Rockefeller said that in the course of time it was quite possible that the unions would gain greater influence at the camps of the company than they now have.

Asked how he had been impressed by the labor leaders he had met, he replied:

Found Union Leaders Earnest.

"At first, before I had met any of them, I admit that I was somewhat prejudiced against them because of what I had heard and accounts I had read in the newspapers concerning labor troubles and deeds of violence. In strikes it often happens that both sides in the excitement of controversy do things which they afterward regret. As I have come more in contact with labor leaders, and I have talked with many of them in recent months, they have seemed to me generally to be earnest men having the interests of their constituents at heart. After all, there is between some of them and those who see as I do merely a difference of opinion as to method. The labor leaders believe that they can solve problems of industry through their organization, while we have here evolved a plan which we believe will be of service to all classes. And yet we are not so committed to the details of this plan but that changes can be made at any time."

"What did you think of the Colorado workmen themselves as you came in closer contact with them?" was another question.

"I was glad of the opportunity of knowing them, of meeting them face to face," was the reply. "The majority of the workers in the mines are alert, intelligent, men who are more and more understanding the industrial developments of the day. I talked with them, I visited them in their homes, I ate at the same tables with them, and I feel that I came to know them. The conditions under which they live are quite what I had expected to find. In some of the camps they are doing exceptionally well. I sat at dinner one day with a negro on one side of me and a Slav on the other. The negro was in a happy frame of mind for he told me that he was making $150 a month in the mines, and was able to support his family in good style, and that he was thoroughly enjoying life. In some of the camps I found that miners, not foremen, but the workers themselves, had automobiles of their own, and community garages have been built to house their machines. I noticed in one of the papers that it was stated that I had spent the night in the "lean to" of one of the miners with his family.

House Neat and Clean.

"As a matter of fact, I did not, although I would have been proud to have done so. I was at the house of a superintendent. Another member of the party stayed over night at a typical miners' home, and he told us that a neater and better appointed house would have been hard to find anywhere. He slept in a brass bed, the house was well furnished and very clean. Some of the dwellings of miners did not come up to this high standard. There are some European nationalities who like the camping idea and prefer the 'lean to' and the makeshift. They are accustomed to that at home. The company is geting rid of those habitations by buying them up and providing houses that are more comfortable and sanitary."

"Do any of the miners own their houses?" Mr. Rockefeller was asked.

"Not in the camps. In fact, it seems to me that it might be a hardship for a miner to own a house in a region where his remaining in it depended upon how long the coal lasted in the mines and upon how long the mines continued in operation. The houses of the miners, however, are, many of them, surrounded by gardens fenced in at the expense of the company. The interest which they and their families take in those gardens and their general surroundings is very keen. It shows their interest in their homes. Not long ago a miner decided that he would quit his job. He went home and told his wife. 'I won't move from here a step,' said she. 'You can go without your wife and family if you like, but I'm going to stay right here and look after the garden. The vegetables aren't half grown, and what about the flowers?'"

Mr. Rockefeller said that on the whole he found the educational facilities at the camps good. Under the new agreement, the company is also to cooperate in the general development of social and educational matters at the mincs.

Now that the plan is launched, Mr. Rockefeller said he and his associates intended to keep closely in touch with it. He will go back to Colorado from time to time to see for himself what conditions are and what modifications can be made to increase the usefulness of this project for social and industrial betterment. The platform on which he stands with this idea was given by him in his testimony early in the year before the United States Commission on Industrial Relations as follows:

"My appreciation of the conditions surrounding wage earners and my sympathy with every endeavor to better those conditions are as strong as those of any man. I believe it to be the duty of every citizen to do all in his power to improve the conditions under which men live. I believe that that man renders the highest social service who so co-operates in the organization of industry as to afford to the largest number of men the greatest opportunity for self-development and the enjoyment by every man of those benefits which his own work ads to the wealth of civilization. "If with the responsibilities I have and the opportunities given to me, I am able to contribute toward the promoting of the well-being of my fellowmen through the lessening of injustice and the alleviation of human suffering, I shall feel that it is possible to realize the highest purpose of my life."

It is with the intention of trying the new plan not only for the good of the company and its employes, but also in the hope that it may be at least a step toward the solution of the great problem of industrial relations which so vitally concerns the whole country, that Mr. Rockefeller has given so much of his time to the conditions in the mines of Colorado.

APPEAL FOR TUSKEGEE.

Booker T. Washington Asks Aid for Negro Institution.

Booker T. Washington has issued a circular directing attention to the claims on public generosity of the Tuskegee Norman and Industrial Institute, Alabama, of which he is the Principal. The school, which was established to educate negroes, started with one teacher and 30 students, and now has 1,500 students from 33 States and 18 foreign countries, officers and teachers numbering 193. The institution owns 3,000 acres of land, and the entire value of its property is $1,362,000.

Training is given in academic studies, trades, and religion, and 6,000 graduates and undergraduates have been sent out as farmers, mechanics, housewives, teachers, and business men. The manager are seeking help for operating expenses and to increase the endowment fund of the institution.

BRONX LEADER HELD FOR ELECTION FRAUD

John F. Maher, Employe of District Attorney Martin, Charged with Colonizing.

MORE ARRESTS TO FOLLOW

Young Voters Living in Manhattan Say They Were Registered from Accused Man's Home.

The first important arrest of the present election period was brought about by the State Superintendent of Elections yesterday when John F. Maher, a Democratic politician in the Bronx, was taken into custody charged with frauds in the recent primaries and registrations. Maher is a Bronx County detective, was at one time a member of the Assembly, and has been an employe of District Attorney Martin of the Bronx for some time. He is a well-known figure in Bronx politics. When arraigned before Magistrate Murphy in Morrisania Court Maher pleaded not guilty and was released on $1,000 bail for examination next Thursday.

At the office of the State Superintendent of Elections, 47 West Forty-second Street, yesterday afternoon it was said that Maher's arrest was only one step in a campaign that is to be waged vigorously against election frauds this year. Already there have been several arrests of persons whom the inspectors at the State Superintendent's office classed as "tools." Arrests among the "men higher up" may be expected, it was said.

In a statement given out yesterday at the State Superintendent's office after Maher's arrest the following assertion was made:

"The Superintendent of Elections has also discovered wholesale colonization in the Bronx this year, and between now and Election Day many persons will find themselves in the position of Maher. Some of them are well known in political circles in the Bronx, and some of the men whom they have induced to join in their colonization schemes are men with no particular abodes, but whose descriptions are in possession of the authorities and who will find themselves under arrest if they attempt to vote on Election Day."

The specific charge against Maher is that he induced two young men who live in Manhattan to register as though they lived at Maher's home at 2,093 Tiebout Avenue in the Bronx, and to register under false names.

The two young men are Francis J. Fogsted of 167 Morningside Avenue and James J. Flanagan of 253 West 126th Street. Both were arrested by Detectives Gibbs and Gold, and both made affidavits in which they swore that Maher, who had known their parents for a number of years, promised them political jobs as an inducement to register under assumed names in Bronx County. They further alleged that they were induced by Maher to vote in the Democratic primaries in the contest between E. F. Healey and G. B. Hayes, candidates for the congressional nomination.

In his affidavit Flanagan said that at no time had he lived or even as much as slept in Maher's home. He says he went to Maher's home on primary day, met Pogsted there, and was told to vote in the name of "John Gilligan," giving Maher's address. He was informed that everything was "all right," he said. Pogsted corroborated the story. Flanagan and Pogsted were also arraigned before Magistrate Murphy yesterday. They pleaded guilty and waived examination, and each was held in $500 bail for General Sessions. Cash bail was put up for both by Pogsted.

When District Attorney Francis Martin of the Bronx was told of the arrests he said.

"The first information I had on this matter was that several Magistrates refused to issue a warrant for Mr. Maher's arrest on the application of a Deputy Superintendent of Elections. If any man violates the law or commits any crime I shall prosecute him whether he be an employe of the county or not."

The warrant for Maher's arrest was issued by Chief Magistrate McAdoo yesterday, on the complaint of Marcus Rosenthal, Deputy Superintendent of Elections. The case against Maher is complete, according to Chief Inspector Allen of the State Superintendent's force.

ROFRANO RELATIVE INDICTED

Accused of Subornation of Perjury in Gaimari Murder Case.

An indictment charging subornation of perjury was filed before Judge Crain in General Sessions yesterday against a relative of Michael A. Rofrano, ex-Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner, who has been a fugitive from justice since he was indicted for planning the murder of Mike Gaimari. Tom Foley's lieutenant.

A bench warrant was issued yesterday for the arrest of Rofrano's relative. He was indicted as the result of the confession of Tomasso Porcaro, an importer, who told the Grand Jury how and at whose instigation witnesses for the defense were instructed to give false testimony at the trial of Gaetano Montimagno, the hired slayer of Gaimari.

CARRANZA GUARDS ALL THE FOREIGNERS

Assumes Responsibility for Life and Property Everywhere in Mexico.

EVEN IN VILLA TERRITORY

Washington Does Not Credit Story of Felix Diaz Leading 40,000 Zapatistas.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Announcement was made by the State Department today that the de facto Government of which General Carranza is the executive head had formally assumed responsibility for the lives and property of foreigners in all parts of Mexico.

There are sections of Sonora and Chihuahua which the Carranzistas do not control, but which are controlled by the Villistas. Carranza has indicated that it may be difficult to grant protection to foreigners in the territory not under his control, but he is nevertheless giving guarantees that he will hold himself responsible for the lives and property of all foreigners.

Pending the extension of Carranzista control over Mexico the de facto Government is arranging for municipal elections, in anticipation of general elections to be held later. An official announcement by the State Department dealing with these phases of the Mexican situation was issued by Secretary Lansing today as follows:

"The State Department is informed that General Carranza has stated that responsibility for property and lives of foreigners will be assumed throughout the Republic, but that this will be somewhat difficult for the time being in those districts not yet under his control. It is stated that during the fighting in the North he will not endeavor to call general elections. Municipal elections will be called first, in order that the officials elected may later supervise the general elections in adopting decrees and reforms already promulgated. After these will come elections for Governors of States. It is stated that the so-called pre-constitutional period will last a year, more or less."

A report from Torreon says the Carranzistas have taken Guaymas, with 250 prisoners, from the Villista force.

The State Department is informed that the forces of the de facto Government of Mexico have evacuated Naco, and that the town has been occupied by Urvalejo, with a force of eight hundred men.

Reports from the Sonora border indicate that Villa troops are entering into the Bavispe district. The department is advised that General Menendez of the Villa forces, who is in command of the district in which the Tigre mine is located, is reported to be protecting the lives of Americans at the El Tigre mine, but permitting his forces to seize all provisions, horses, and mules.

Before leaving Washington tonight for Saltillo, Mexico, to confer with General Carranza, his Washington special agent, Señor Eliseo Arredondo, said: "Reactionary elements in Mexico have put in circulation rumors and statements, bearing a certain air of verisimilitude, that more or less onerous stipulations would be imposed by the United States and the Latin-American powers. At no time during the negotiations was an attempt made to dictate any burdensome objections and the new Government which might have hindered the carrying out of its program of reforms."

General Carranza, through Arredondo, addressed a note today to the United States and the other American republics which have recognized his Government, expressing his appreciation of their action and announcing that diplomatic representatives soon would be accredited to the various countries. General Carranza declared it was the purpose of his Government to establish cordial relations with all countries.

State Department officials today admitted hearing a rumor from Juarez attributed to Villa officials that Felix Diaz and 40,000 Zapata troops were menacing Mexico City. It was said at the department that no such number of Zapata troops had ever been reported before as in the field, and it was not credited. The Carranza agency received a telegram from one of its agents in New York saying he had seen Felix Diaz in New York three days ago.

Messages also were received from Mexico City by the Carranza agency stating that the Zapata forces had disintegrated into small bands.

TO CONNECT RINTELEN WITH MEXICAN REBELS

Federal Grand Jury Working on Passport Case Hears Evidence Against German.

It became known yesterday that the Federal Grand Jury, which recently found an indictment against Andrew D. Meloy on a charge of attempting to get fraudulently a passport for Franz Rintelen, was still at work on the matter, and that evidence had been produced tending to show that Rintelen was connected with the Mexican counter-revolutionaries. For some time the Government has been acting on the supposition that German money was used to keep the Mexican trouble alive and that Rintelen knew a good deal about it.

From the fact that one of the witnesses, who has been examined by the Federal Grand Jury, is an employe of the Rock Island passenger department, it was learned that the Government has reason to suspect that there was some connection between Rintelen and General Victoriano Huerta, who was arrested in El Paso on suspicion of being about to stir up more trouble in Mexico. The railroad man admitted knowing Rintelen and Meloy as mining men of Durango, Mexico.

As one of the many rumors flying about identified Rintelen, with as many as eight of the Mexican factions, and as Mexicans in this city have asserted that he had been intrusted with very large sums to keep them supplied with arms and munitions, and that if his plans worked out they might involve an expenditure of as much as $30,000,000, the Federal authorities investigated the office that Rintelen occupied as Fred Hansen at 67 William Street. It was learned by them that certain of his papers had been deposited with the Transatlantic Trust Company and an official of that concern has been one of the witnesses examined.

Confirmation of the relations of the German with Huerta seemed to come from the fact that the Government had several times seen fit to examine before the Grand Jury General Mondragon, a supporter of Huerta. He has been staying with his secretary at the Mexican boarding house, 104 West Sixty-fourth Street, but when he was sought there yesterday it appeared that he had left hurriedly for Spain, as he had learned by cable that his wife was ill. His secretary said that the General had never himself come into contact with Rintelen, but that all negotiations had been carried on with him through a third party.

The agents of the Department of Justice, who have been working on the Mexican matter, were surprised yesterday when they heard the General was gone, but his friends were certain that the Washington officials were notified of his leaving.

Other witnesses before the Federal Grand Jury have been J. C. Hammond and Dr. Carl Schimmel of the Ballard Advertising Company at the Marbridge Building, at Broadway and Thirty-fourth Street. They are supposed to have been associated with the pro-German propaganda in this country, and Dr. Schimmel has been mentioned with the efforts to purchase from the Government its stock of discarded Krag-Jorgensen rifles.

Reports that Rintelen was one of the spies shot in the Tower of London have been denied, and it is believed that he is safe under guard in a detention camp in England.

TEXANS ASK PROTECTION.

Otherwise They Threaten to Cross Rio Grande After Stolen Cattle.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Oct. 23.—Ranchmen living along the Rio Grande near McAllen, fifty miles west of here, today appealed to Governor Ferguson for protection for their lives and property. If this cannot be had, their appeal says, they ask immunity from prosecution in order that they may, at their own risk, cross the Rio Grande and get back property stolen from them and taken to Mexico. They alleged that more than 100 head of cattle had been stolen within a few miles of Hidalgo, Texas, within a week and taken across the Rio Grande.

Lieutenant H. P. Johnson of Troop B, Third Cavalry, this morning, near Villaneuva, four miles up the river from here, arrested three Mexicans on suspicion. They were held for further investigation in connection with the train wreck and robbery Monday night. Five Mexicans are now held on suspicion, three by military authorities and two by the county.

SUES FOR SAVING SHIP.

Owner of Hesperides Wants Share in Melderskin and Cargo.

The narrow escape of the steamer Melderskin in a hurricane on Sept. 18 is brought up in a suit entered yesterday in the Federal District Court by the British & American Steam Navigation Company, Limited, through its counsel, Converse & Kirlin, of 27 William Street.

The Navigation Company owns the Hesperides, a British vessel of 3,393 tons register, which, as it was making for this country on Sept. 18 with a general cargo from Montevideo, fell in between Haiti and Porto Rico with the Melderskin, which is a Norwegian ship of 3,961 tons. The Melderskin had lost her propeller ten days before and was in great need of assistance. The Hesperides took her in tow, held on to her while a West Indian hurricane was blowing, and brought her safely to anchorage at Tybee Roads, off Savannah. Thence the Norwegian was brought here by tugs.

The cargo of the Melderskin consisted of coffee of the value of $1,600,000, it is claimed, and the suit is brought against her to recover cost of towing her 820 miles, which took ten days, and a suitable recompense to Captain Edward C. Lee of the Hesperides and his crew for saving her from wreck.

TO ARGUE SCHMIDT APPEAL.

Counsel of Anna Aumueller's Slayer to Ask for New Trial.

A final effort to save the life of Hans Schmidt, the priest who was sentenced to the electric chair in February, 1914, for the murder of Anna Aumueller, a servant, will be made before the Court of Appeals tomorrow, when the defendant's counsel, Alphonse Koelble, will present a motion for a new trial. Assistant District Attorney Taylor will insist on the affirmance of Schmidt's conviction. Owing to legal obstacles and technicalities the execution of his sentence, which was originally set down for March, 1914, has been put off.

W. H. P. PHYFE LEFT ESTATE OF $193,679

INVESTED IN REAL ESTATE

Had Railroad Bonds and Contracts for Books as Well as Claims Against Publishers.

William Henry P. Phyfe, author of "18,000 Words Often Mispronounced," left an estate of $193,679 when he died on March 7, according to the appraisal filed in the office of the State Controller yesterday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Campbell.

The author left no will, and accordingly, under the law, his widow, Mrs. Edith B. Phyfe, receives $16,740, while the two children, Henry P. and Churchill B., each receive $88,470.

The assets are grouped: Realty, $143,456; stock and bonds, $42,949; cash, $5,376; estimated value of contracts for books, $4,500; and claims against G. P. Putnam, $1,316.

The realty is itemized as half interest in each of the following: 32 West Seventy-first Street, $30,000; 145-47 East Fortieth Street, $29,250; 369-71 Bowery, $14,850; 191 Fulton Street, $72,000; 12 East Forty-third Street, $40,500, and 379 Bowery, and 202 to 208 Fifth Street, $83,750, making a total of $220,350. However, the appraisal valuation was reached by subtracting from this total the widow's dower right and certain mortgages against the property.

The securities are itemized at these valuations: 23 bonds of the Gulf & Ship Island Railroad Company, $19,451; 10 bonds of the Missouri Pacific Railway, $10,210, and 15 bonds of the Louisville & Arkansas Railway Company, $13,288.

There is a statement from the Putnams, the publishers of the author's books, to the effect that in one year Mr. Phyfe received an income of $2,000 from his books, but that for five years past the income ranged from $700 to $1,000 yearly.

MRS. MOORE LEFT $793,000.

Asks Heirs to Care for Her Invalid Son as a Sacred Duty.

Mrs. Mary P. Moore, who was the widow of Edward C. Moore, and died Feb. 13, left a net estate of $793,779, according to the appraisal of the estate, filed in the office of the State Controller yesterday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Campbell.

The sons, Edward C. and John C., receive $264,593 each, and the granddaughters, Agnes Moore Alaux, Millie Moore Cauderay, and Louise and Hilda Moore, get $66,148 each. There is no provision in the will for the third son, Horace, who, the instrument recites, was amply provided for by his father. Horace, the widow says in her will, has been an invalid for years, and she expresses the wish that his relatives will regard it as a sacred duty to see to his welfare.

The assets included 151 West Fifty-second Street, appraised at $35,000; cash, $23,195; jewelry, $6,225; stocks and bonds, $757,904. The securities included 2,400 shares of preferred stock of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad, appraised at $237,600; 1,400 shares of preferred stock of the American Tobacco Company, $148,000, and 2,100 shares of United States Steel preferred, $225,500.

CHARGE BOY WITH SHOOTING

Guardian Alleges Attempt to Kill—Youth Wants to Go to Sea.

Joaquin Orrantia, 17 years old, who says his father is the Colombian Consul at London, was arrested on Friday night at 110 West Sixty-fourth Street by Detective E. T. Morse of Nassau County and is now in the county jail at Mineola, held for examination on Monday on a charge that he fired two shots at Louis G. Guell and his wife of Floral Park in their home on Oct. 6. The youth says he was in New York on that day and will be able to prove it.

Orrantia says he was brought to this country a year ago by Guell, into whose care he was intrusted by his father. He was entered in Fordham University, but Greek and Latin were distasteful, and he wanted to quit and follow the sea.

WANTS $383,000 TAXES BACK

Southern Pacific Says Income Had Been Turned Into Capital.

The Southern Pacific Company brought suit yesterday in the Federal District Court through its counsel, Gordon Buck of 165 Broadway, against John Z. Lowe, Jr., Collector of Internal Revenue in this district, to recover income taxes amounting to $383,687.78, with interest, which had been assessed on it under the law of March 30, 1914.

It contends that the income on which the tax was levied had by the time the act was passed become capital, and that it would be unconstitutional to impose a direct tax upon it without apportionment among the several States, according to their population.

"Bauer . . . . how he sweeps through Chopin's tremendous 'Revolutionary Etude!' How he flings the defiances, the despairs, of this overwhelming outburst of music-dramatics deep into the souls of his hearers!"

For You—the Music-Glories of Chopin Graced by the Genius of Bauer

WONDERFUL art though the works of the composers be, the art of great musicians brings to them a larger magnificence, an inspiring brilliance, a greater and clearer significance.

Bauer . . . . how he thunders, and sweeps "in tornadic passion" through Chopin's wonderful study in C minor — the tremendous "Revolutionary Etude!" How he flings the defiances, the despairs, the mad pride and force of this overwhelming outburst of music-dramatics deep into the souls of his hearers!

Chopin voiced in this big, elemental work the cry of a nation crushed, but in spirit undefeated. Warsaw had fallen. Poland and its freedom were borne down beneath the onslaught of three empires . . . . . and this was Poland's paean of defiance—this was its song of despair, and yet of triumph, triumph in the right that might can never trample.

The genius of Bauer brings this fine tone-drama from the dumb pages of piano literature into sounding, throbbing, vital being. Beneath his subtle touch its wonder glows with freshened radiance. His rushing velocity, his power and brilliance, his skillful phrasing make the piano sing the tragedy of Poland as clearly as those tidings which came the other day of Warsaw again banded with steel and fire—again a conquered pawn of warring neighbors.

And you may hear Bauer play this Chopin masterpiece. You may hear him in your own home—and you will hear him at his best.

Not Bauer, alone, but Hambourg, Gabrilowitsch, Scharwenka, Carreño, Saint-Saens, that dean of modern music-masters—scores of the pianists whom the world recognizes as its greatest—will create for you their most wonderful traceries of tone—will tell for you their sweetest stories, their finest stories, in the beautiful language of music.

Their most finished, polished performances have been registered upon Duo-Art Records. Every detail of their magnificent music—tempo, phrasing, variations of power—is preserved in these wonderful music-rolls. And these rolls, placed in the Duo-Art Pianola, guide that remarkable instrument to an exact and automatic reproduction of the artist's original interpretation.

Not merely the art of the great composers, but that art glorified, made more wonderful by the art of the greatest pianists, has been brought into the homes of the nation, into the homes of the world, into your home, by this latest triumph in pianoforte making—The Duo-Art Pianola.

First—The Duo-Art Pianola is an instrument which automatically reproduces the playing of great concert pianists. Through this wonderful instrument you may hear in your own home and whenever you desire, such great artists as Bauer, Hambourg, Gabrilowitsch, Saint-Saens — a constantly increasing list of the most famous virtuosi of the piano.

THE DUO-ART PIANOLA

"PLAYED FOR YOU BY WORLD-FAMED MUSICIANS"

Second—The Duo-Art is a genuine Pianola of the finest type. It is an instrument which you, yourself—though you be entirely without musical training—may play with delightful skill.

The Duo-Art Pianola is made in a variety of beautiful models and by The Aeolian Company exclusively. It is on sale, in New York, only at Aeolian Hall.

Third—The Duo-Art Pianola is a pianoforte of supreme musical excellence — a Steinway, Weber or Steck. It is identical in action and appearance with the fine pianos you have always known.

Note—The pneumatic system of the Duo-Art is driven by electric power, when played automatically or as a Pianola—there is no pedaling, no physical effort.

Exclusiveness in Dress

Now that the "haute monde" has discarded as obsolete the idea that it is necessary to have one's gowns made by a private dressmaker from sketches in order to be fashionable, and has realized the wonderful advantages and possibilities of the Exclusive Shop, with its Charming Creations for all functions, ever ready for the wearer, we think a little tete-a-tete on the subject quite apropos.

Naturally, to the Well Dressed Woman the question of exclusiveness is of paramount importance, for there must exist no lurking doubt as to whether or not the gown she is wearing expresses her individuality, and it is chiefly to those who are anxious in this respect that we are now speaking, as we have concentrated our entire energies to overcoming all difficulties in this direction.

Firstly—We import only the most Unusual and Original Productions that Paris has to offer, and in such a marvellous diversity of style that it becomes possible for one to find exactly the gown wanted without any of that irritating and unnecessary expenditure of time as is incurred when sketch after sketch must be gone through and lengthy explanations listened to without having the conviction that the model chosen will, when made up, be becoming in every respect to the wearer.

Secondly—Under the direction of Madame Bernard (who is a recognized authority on Dress), we carry out our own Original Creations, with the assistance of our staff of competent French Designers and Fitters, and every one of the replicas of our Imported Models are made in our own ateliers, thereby assuring absolute exclusiveness, and correctness in details.

Those who are desirous of having advice as to what is most becoming to their particular type will receive valuable assistance from MADAME BERNARD, who is always delighted to give her personal attention where requested.

For the Horse Show & Approaching Social Season

We announce the Arrival of New Paris Models, the Authoritative Fashions from all the leading Coutourieres and Modistes, and representing the most Fascinating Collection of Evening Gowns and Wraps ever shown in this country.

THE UNRECONCILED SHIPPING TRADE.

How sharper than the serpent's tooth are the resolutions of the shipping trade repudiating the benevolence of the Secretary of the Treasury! Even while he was elaborating in San Francisco, on his swing 'round the circle, the benefits to be derived from freighters as naval auxiliaries, the National Association of Manufacturers was denouncing the legislation causing the trouble which the Secretary seeks to remedy without removing the cause. In San Francisco the Secretary argued that if the Seamen's Bill made shipping on the Pacific unprofitable it was all the more necessary that the Government should replace the vessels withdrawn for that reason. In his own words, > such service should be provided under our flag, and if private capital cannot afford to provide it because it involves a loss, the Government should provide the service and take the loss for the general welfare of all the people and for the protection of our trade and prosperity, especially when the vessels for such service become a part of the naval auxiliaries essential to the national defense.

The Secretary was not ashamed to repeat that the Pacific Mail sold its ships to make a profit, and added that if the Government shipping proposal had only been enacted the "Shipping Board undoubtedly would have bought and kept them in the Pacific trade." In that case the Atlantic trade, which is the most urgent trade there is, would have missed their transfer, and general trade would have suffered more by their loss on the Atlantic than it does by their disappearance from the Pacific. It is regretted that Japanese steamships are carrying the trade which used to be carried by American vessels, but it is being carried, and conditions on the Pacific are better than on the Atlantic. If the Shipping Board had meddled in the Secretary's manner it would have done more harm than good to trade.

Along with the Secretary's speech on the Pacific Coast, where it is not thought persuasive, appear the resolutions of the Manufacturers' Association adopted on the Atlantic Coast, and denouncing as pernicious the law which the Secretary defended so curiously by arguing that the Government should make good the damage it does. The resolutions are as long as an indictment, and bring together the criticisms with which the country is too familiar to justify their repetition. The sum and substance of the matter is that the "National Association of Manufacturers, "speaking for many thousands of "members engaged in foreign commerce and peculiarly dependent for "its success upon the existence and "successful operation of American-"owned ships, respectfully urges upon "Congress the careful reconsidera-"tion, with a view to substantial "amendment or repeal," of the act which the Secretary seeks to keep alive by correcting its effects by the use of tax money.

Washington believes that Congress at present is disposed to be more responsive to the Secretary than to the shipping trade. It is declared by the prophets that instead of amending or repealing the Seamen's Bill the Government Shipping Bill will be revived in a form adapted to meet the objections previously fatal. It is proposed to limit it to Latin-American trade, or, perhaps, also the Oriental trade, to silence objections that Government shipping is destructive to private competition. If the objection is at all serious, it is as serious for the Latin-American trade as for any other. It is a curious argument that proposals which blight other trades would benefit the Latin-American and Oriental trades. It is further proposed that the Government shall withdraw when trade lines are established. That is an admission that Government shipping will prevent private shipping, and a proposal that the remedy of withdrawal shall be administered after the death of the patient. There is a further proposal that there shall be a Maritime Commission analogous to the Interstate Commerce Commission or the Federal Trade Commission. It is not an enticing suggestion, considering the condition of our railways and the inaction of the Federal Trade Commission. The country is weary of commissions. They stand revealed not as a device for accomplishing anything, but for concealing the incapacity of the Government to conceive of what ought to be done or how to do it. Congress has not made a record on the shipping question entitling it to either thanks or confidence. A shipping commission could do no worse, and might happily do nothing. If that is support of the commission idea, Congress might proceed with its abdication, and the country perhaps fare better.

THE SUFFRAGE PARADE.

Is Dame Nature a suffragist? At any rate, she was kind yesterday. In golden sunlight and keen air the great parade went its triumphal way, to the satisfaction of participants and spectators. With no disrespect to the men in it, the female marchers and riders, as always, showed the hopeless feminine superiority in grace, decorative effect, art of representation. American men seem to be rather shamefaced, at least self-conscious, in political processions. It is by numbers, and not by distinction of appearance, that such great parades of men as those of the campaigns of 1884 and 1896, for example, impress the crowd. And, in non-political demonstrations, why does a Governor's horse insist on proceeding or halting at right angles to the sidewalk and his embarrassed rider's will? How few public men can bestride a steed with the fine, handsome, easy air of the late Governor WOLCOTT of Massachusetts.

Whereas yesterday every girl or woman on horseback looked a Di Vernon, and every girl or woman footed it as featly as Camilla. A comely, dignified show, in which distinguished middle, and noble old, age were not wanting. The men, apparently outnumbered six or eight to one, marched sturdily and bravely. But the crowd had eyes only for the fairer part of that bright company. Were ever so many banners fluttering? Has there been before—and some multi-colored splendid suffragist parades, day and night, have been seen in this town—such a blaze and brilliance of hue, turning Fifth Avenue into a sort of theatre of enchantments? Green, white, blue, yellow, purple, and what not. It is not for man to put his foot in colors, still less to utter awkwardly the masculine bewildered but honest delight at the kaleidoscope on foot, on horse, in automobiles, the simplicities, varieties, and panoramic succession of frocks, the fine living history of woman suffrage in the world, the figured States, Victory, Justice, and Equality made charming actualities, Freedom "delicately marching" as she did in Athens, the quarter of a thousand girls carrying that enormous Votes for Women flag, the bewitching squadron of female cavalry, the happy, smiling children, the yellow and other cars, aflame with suffrage blazonry. Yellow, by the way, is Morning's badge, "the saffron-colored" Morning, isn't it? And so of Hope.

The spectacle was enjoyed by a great multitude. Nobody who had the good fortune to see it is likely to forget it. It was a well-ordered series of pictures, of seemly movement, more poem than procession. In dwelling on the aesthetic side of it, we don't forget the evident earnestness, the grave sincerity, which seemed to animate, to be the soul of this spectacle with a purpose. The parade was an immense success. The projectors of and the sharers in it are heartily to be congratulated and thanked.

IN THE CAUSE OF JUSTICE.

It is far more true of justice than it is of charity that its value is doubled when it is given promptly. In the State of New York justice is slow. In consequence it is also uncertain and costly. Its tardy administration gives rise to wrong and injury and cruel suffering, and these necessarily fall heaviest on those who are least able to bear them. If this state of things were imposed by an arbitrary and despotic Government it would justify rebellion, as our fathers believed in revolting from the British Crown—and acted on their belief. Being imposed, as it is, by a free, representative Government, it is a plain and pressing duty to change the inequitable and pernicious system as soon and as far as may be.

That duty may be performed by voting for the proposed Constitution, which, in its judiciary article, provides a very large measure of reform. That it will be effective we have every reason to believe. There was a large number of lawyers of unusual ability in the convention, who were led by Mr. ROOT, who fairly may be called the leader of the bar. Their plan as presented—and this is true of the entire Constitution—was agreed upon by a large majority of each party among the delegates. The basis of the plan, moreover, was worked out by committees of the several Bar Associations of the State. It has thus a solid guarantee that it is not only sound in principle but practical, that it can be and would be carried out without confusion or disturbance, that, in short, it is the right thing to meet the needs of the situation.

The main purpose of the new provision, which is not in the least radical or theoretical, and is as simple as it is unpartisan, is to make the rules of practice clear, intelligible, appropriate, and sufficiently elastic to be applicable to all the conditions that may arise. The Legislature is required to enact at its next session a short and simple civil practice act. This can be changed only at intervals of five years, and then only on the report of a special commission, unless on the request of the Judges empowered to frame civil practice rules. In addition, the Judges of the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court receive the exclusive power to make rules of court and to regulate the details of civil practice. The effect of this is to substitute for a rigid statute of great complexity, minuteness, and necessary uncertainty the discretion of the courts in pushing business, clearing the calendars, and making the administration of justice prompt and certain.

The courts are also strengthened. Five new members of the Appellate Division in the First Department are provided for and two in the Second Department. The number of Judges of the Court of Appeals is increased to ten. Provision for clearing up the business of this court—in which it now takes two years to reach a decision, except in cases entitled to preference—is made by calling in from four to six Supreme Court Justices and holding two courts. The appeals as of right to the Court of Appeals are also considerably limited.

Here, then, is the plan submitted practically by the bar of the State for simplifying practice, for the avoidance of vexatious and mischievous technicalities and appeals based upon them, for increasing the wholesome discretion of the courts, and for adding, where needed, to the number of the Judges. It is a plan which all intelligent voters can understand, and which all those who wish to see justice done promptly and surely should heartily support and earnestly advocate.

A DES MOINES PATRIOT.

Is The Des Moines Register trying to "knife" Senator CUMMINS? It defends certain Iowa Republican Representatives in Congress who won't say whether they are for or against preparedness. It justifies them on the ground that they well may hesitate about espousing the plans of a Democratic Administration, and that the program is too extravagant anyway. The extraordinary notion of patriotism inculcated by the Iowa journal must be given in its naked deformity:

> Everybody must see that in the end the appeal will be to Republicans to come to the rescue, for not only is Mr. BRYAN likely to be strong enough to make a break in the Democratic ranks, but even with Mr. BRYAN out of it there is enough Democratic opposition to a militarist program to endanger the small margin of majority in the new House of Representatives.
>
> Now what under these circumstances is so plainly the duty of every Republican Congressman and every Republican Senator as to join in united, determined, and effective stand against this whole program of extravagance?

Don't think of the country. Think of the party. A choice heap of ruins the Republican Party would make of itself if it followed this cowardly and dishonorable course, preferring the narrowest partisanship to an imperious national need.

ORATORY AND CONVERSATION.

The employment of hyperbole is the harmless habit of popular orators. Ex-Senator DEPEW'S assertion at the opening of the Public Speaking Club of America, an appanage of the multitudinously useful Y. M. C. A., that "every man in the United States wants to be a public orator," was probably an overstatement. We have knowledge of the existence of a few men here and there in this country who would not be public orators if they could. But it is perfectly true that a great many men would like to be able to speak in public and that the visible supply of men who are competent to do so, with credit to themselves and satisfactorily to their hearers, seems to decrease yearly as the population increases. Therefore the institution of a Public Speaking Club which is to serve as a school for oratory justifies comment. Mr. DEPEW thinks that most men fancy public speaking is easy until they try it. That may be so, and it may be equally true of singing and playing the violin. Many men are naturally inclined to undervalue the gifts of others. But, as the veteran after-dinner speaker says, oratory is difficult. One who excels in it must cultivate his voice, which few ever do in these degenerate days, and train his mind. He must think quickly and select quickly the thoughts he would utter, for half the success of a popular speaker depends on his comprehension of what not to say. We have heard speakers, and those, too, of considerable repute because of their elocutionary skill, who never conquered the habit of saying things which might better have been left unsaid and were compelled thereby to waste time in trying to remove the bad impression they had made by futile explanations and insincere condemnation of the stenographers.

Mr. DEPEW makes a distinction between the "gift of gab" and intelligent speech, but the "gift of gab," if that signifies ability to speak readily, is better than nothing in an inarticulate age. The trouble nowadays is that so few of us can talk at all. Our ancestors were not better informed, they lacked the means of information the poorest of us possess in these days, but in their era people talked, at dinners the conversations were not confined to anecdotes and vaudeville quotations, most men had belonged to debating societies in their youth and learned to muster their thoughts and express them. They may have been deficient in original ideas. Most people have been in all ages. But they did more than repeat imperfect memories of newspaper headlines and put forth random utterances overheard in the day's work as their own intellectual product. Conversation as well as oratory has long been neglected and it is time to learn again the art of speech, of intelligent voice production, of clear enunciation, and to acquire the good habit of thinking about what we say before we speak. We look to the Public Speaking Club as a developing force to this end. It is not necessary that all its members should form the habit of "Trafalgar Squaring," which was so objectionable to the late Queen VICTORIA and PINERO'S Duke of St. Olpherts, but they are putting themselves in the way to talk properly and in so doing they will set a good example to others. We are all mere gabblers, mumblers, clippers of syllables, swallowers of words. We have thought we had no time to talk. But, though we are so nearly inarticulate, we do not keep silent, so let us welcome an agency which will tend to restore the ability to speak to some purpose.

ENGLAND'S "W. G."

Probably Dr. WILLIAM GILBERT GRACE, who has died at a time when cricketing is less prominent in the British mind than it ever has been since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, was the best-known English sportsman. There have been many famous bowlers and batsmen; but "W. G." was equally skillful in both departments, he never had a superior, and his fame was established as long ago as 1864, when he was only 16 years old. He maintained his supremacy for more than a quarter of a century, and, when he retired from the cricketing field, or from his conspicuous place in it, he wrote books about the English national game and his way of playing, which, in a sense, are standard works.

In spite of his renown at the wickets and the hard and continual physical training to which he subjected himself in order to keep fit, he never neglected his professional work. He was a surgeon of some distinction, practicing in Bristol. Above all, he was a splendid example of physical manhood, tall, well formed, graceful, with perfect co-ordination of mind and muscle, the kind of Englishman a nation is looking to for defense and encouragement in these dark days. Life in Great Britain could have contained few consolations for W. G. in his later years; he was long past his prime and could do nothing to help. But the remembrance of him will survive; he typified prowess, courage, skill of a rare kind, and mental as well as physical power.

EDUCATING THE BELGIANS.

"We must educate Brussels and the Belgians," says the Strassburg Post. SWIFT, in his blackest hour of irony, could not have beaten that. The Germans have been educating the Belgians for almost fifteen months. The whole kingdom is a Kultur University. By invasion in the teeth of treaties, by the slaughter of Belgian armies, by the murder of civilians, by pitiless savageries against women and children; priests and nuns, by the flames of Louvain, by disciplinary object lessons in massacre; by ruinous fines, by penal servitude, by famine succored only by relief from parts of the world not educated in the German ideal of efficient brutality, by a thorough and continuous course of barbarous repression and oppression, the holy Germans, the men who "march with God," have sought and are seeking to teach the benighted Belgians to cease to be Belgian patriots, to put up with intolerable wrongs, to bear the yoke meekly.

Educating the Belgians! Why, in the last two weeks ten Belgians, four of them women, have been condemned to death, thirty-two to from ten to fifteen years' imprisonment, for the crime of being Belgian, not German, patriots.

And still, unconquerable hate and hope burn in the hearts of that uneducable folk. The professors of arson, mutilation, and murder waste their talents of instruction. The 42-centimeter guns speak vainly from their steel pulpits. Burning libraries cannot illuminate the Belgian mental darkness. The Belgians have had every opportunity of education at the hands of the most educated of peoples; and they will not profit by it. At a moment when Kultur stands so high in the opinion of mankind, the perversity, the stupidity of the Belgians must be irritating even to their sympathetic masters.

Stonehenge.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Anglo-Saxon" corrects a slight inaccuracy of Mr. Ernest P. Horrwitz with even more lack of information. Mr. Horrwitz says stonehenge is derived from "stan" and "hengest," translating the latter as "horse." "Anglo-Saxon" objects that "horse" is "horse." Thus, he reasons, "stan" and "hengest" cannot mean stone horse. The fact is that "hengest," (modern German "hengst,") means stallion. Thus stonehenge is derived from stone stallion. Mr. Horrwitz is quite right in spirit.

EDWARD H. SMITH.

A PLEA FOR ARMISTICE.

Germany's Most Eminent Woman Novelist Replies to Mrs. Atherton.

New York, Oct. 22, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to reply to dear, wonderful Gertrude Atherton and her criticism of my article on Armistice in The Sunday Tribune. There is an old fairy tale:

> She has hair spun from the moonbeams;
> She has eyes blue as the Heavens' wonder;
> She has skin like snow; but her soul is frozen.

A chill ran down my spine when I read your article in THE TIMES—an expansion of your brilliant letter to me which I read and reread, and which I could not answer because I felt completely crushed. If your article be the thought of the American people then mankind's general and only goal on earth is to devour each other. Personally I prefer to see them in the fray openly barbaric rather than see them fatten themselves on the profit of the slaughter.

In the good as well as in the bad things of this world there is a logical sequence. What America does today thinking it for her prosperity can become in its logical consequences her curse. It grieves me to see that you send this people—a people not of yesterday but of tomorrow—back to uncivilization. Your article is a statement, but not an argument. You preach war as the normal condition, with the simple explanation that human nature is so. The greatest men who have existed have made their spirit concrete in words and deeds to tame the brutality of man. And now in the twentieth century after Christ, when each century has added through battles and blood its stone to the pyramid of culture, shall we quietly endure that this witness of human progress be destroyed through battles and blood?

Civilization is an effort—physically and morally. To send back a people to the slums of ideas is like a tragic burial of everything we have cherished. People in general naturally would exult in their bestial freedom, and all those noble souls who have suffered for a higher level appear simply ridiculous and useless, and must discover a new earth where a better species can be raised. But fortunately you contradict yourself in saying that the faults of the American people are on the surface, and their sound immovable principles underneath, and that they go their own way. It seems to me that actions always grow out of and are dependent upon principles. How can you separate your acts from your moral feelings? And why should the crude opinion of the masses predominate over higher ideals?

Policy in its cold calculation has always been the bad stepmother of warm hearted humanity. In speaking of humanity I reject the discussion of the material advantages or disadvantages of the nations. Consider the business problem—the question of the stomach!

You are correct on what you say about the industrial booming of this country as a result of Europe's war, but this is an ephemeral condition. Peace will come, and then America will have lost the game instead of holding the winning hand. I cannot believe that American business men are so short-sighted—apart from the unspeakable inhuman rôle you would give them. You say that we live in history, but it is history which our children will one day read. Would you have America as vampire therein?

Of course an armistice would have to have its strict and limited laws, and the ruling of such an exceptional condition can be left entirely to the high-minded men who in their immovable impartiality have the force to be the leader of peace congresses in the midst of the tumult of war. For myself, I cannot cease to like a people whose primitive grandeur has awakened the greatest hope in me, and I give them the credit of having the courage and the strength necessary to stop the runaway horse which Europe is in its madness.

I believe you, my dear and wonderful Gertrude Atherton, the most splendid brain, but I wish you a little of Old World sentimentality.

BARONESS LEONIE DE RAUCH.

Mr. Yarrow Did Not Say It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Oct. 18, Zia Mufty-Zade Bey, in an article entitled "The Kind of Armenians a Turk Knows," makes use of an interview in which I am alleged to have said: "And during the siege we not only had to fight the Turks but almost every known disease as well." This statement was never made by me. On the contrary, both before and after the siege, and during it, we made every effort to maintain the absolute neutrality of our premises and were successful in doing so. Our relations with the Turks were always friendly, and when the war first began we turned our hospital into a Red Cross unit and for many months cared for sick and wounded soldiers who were sent to us from the Turkish military hospital. In fact, we had about fifteen such soldiers in our hospital when the siege began. One of our young ladies, Miss McLaren, for months served in the Turkish military hospital as nurse, and when the siege began she voluntarily remained within the Turkish lines and was subsequently taken to Bitlis with the Turkish sick. When the Russians occupied Van and the Turks withdrew, over 1,000 Turkish men, women, and children, who had been unable to flee, were brought to our premises for care and protection.

ERNEST ALBERT YARROW.

Auburndale, Mass., Oct. 21, 1915.

Coveted Islands.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From today's news we learn that England will cede Cyprus to Greece in order to bring the latter to the side of the Allies against their foes. This is the eleventh time that Great Britain promised Cyprus to the Motherland, but never has her promise been fulfilled.

At last let us hope that the desire of the Cypriotes will become reality. But how about the Dodecanesses, (the Aegean Islands,) which are held by the Italians? Will Italy cede them to the Hellenic nation and look after the "Italia irredenta," (unredeemed Italy,) or will she keep them as her stepping stones toward Asia Minor.

EDITH CAVELL.

Room mid the martyrs for a deathless name!
Till yesterday, in her how few could know
Black War's white angel, succoring friend and foe—
Whose pure heart harbored neither hate nor blame
When Need or Pity made its sovereign claim.
Today she is the world's! Its poignant woe,
We thought had been outwept, again doth flow
In tenderest tears that multiply her fame.

Oh, something there is in us yet, more bright
Than Rouen's hungry flames—that could consume
Jeanne's slender limbs but not her spirit's might.
Fate still has noble colors in her loom.
One lonely woman's courage in the night
Has sealed the savage Hohenzollerns' doom!

CHILDHOOD IN THE STREET.

Playing "Window In and Out" Through the Deadly Motor Traffic.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I do not believe "A. T. E." would like to have the children kept off the streets, nor do I believe that they should be stopped from roller skating, but for the good of the children and some old and feeble people, I think the children should have play streets—streets closed to vehicular traffic.

When I was a kiddie I roller skated, played tag, one foot off, prisoner's base, and all the other games, on the street. We did not have so many autos then, and naturally the streets were much safer than today. When the children roller skate today they have to play "in and out the window" with the automobiles, and they very often miss the window and are hurt by the motor car. On St. Nicholas Avenue, the other day, a dozen or so of youngsters were indulging in roller skating. Two of them "hitched" on to an automobile; the chauffeur speeded up a little and they were sailing along nicely when a wheel of one boy's roller skate caught in something and he went rolling along the street. Luckily he was not hurt, but that is one reason why I am in favor of play streets. I say, let the children roller skate, but protect them in their play.

EDWARD L. ROSSELLI.

New York, Oct. 22, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having read the complaint of "A. T. E." regarding children's roller skating, I wish to say that "the hoodlum urchins who infest the sidewalks" have never yet collided with me in my daily walks during the last half century. Generally speaking, any ordinary able-bodied man or woman should be able to escape from the roller skating peril, or else they should refrain from venturing alone upon the infested streets. As to the "feeble and lame," Central Park offers to all such a safe and healthful retreat. The "children" do not worry and usually manage to take care of themselves, or else come under the protection of that proverbial good angel who watches over and cares for the young and helpless. E. M. F.

New York, Oct. 22, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer heartily indorses the protest of "E. H. L." in your issue of this date in regard to roller-skating on the sidewalk. It has become a downright nuisance, to say nothing about accidents to elderly people and the real danger to property. I happen to live on a block and in a building where many women reside who are obliged to work nights and sleep during the day, and the constant rattle and bang over the sidewalk in front of the building renders peaceful rest next to impossible.

There is an ordinance against the nuisance, but it is rarely enforced. Complaints to the policemen amount to nothing, and if one goes before a Magistrate he is insolently asked, "Were you ever a boy?" and the case ends and the nuisance continues.

SUPERINTENDENT.

New York, Oct. 20, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was glad to see the remarks of your correspondent, "A. T. E.," about the roller-skating nuisance now so prevalent in parts of this city. I happen to live on Washington Square, which at no time is a safe place for women and children. At night Washington Square is a large public roller-skating rink, and I have counted as many as fourteen boys strung out on the back of a motor truck, all yelling as if possessed. It is high time the civic authorities stopped this dangerous nuisance.

Municipal Court Justice.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We hear a great deal of indefinite talk about the delay of the law. Your readers may be interested to have a concrete example of what may be done in the Municipal Court.

On Oct. 20 three accident cases were tried before me, in which the accidents had only occurred in the month previous. One was for $1,000, another for $350, and another for $500. In each of the cases the accident occurred in September, a lawyer was retained, the necessary papers were served, the preliminary proceedings were had, notice of trial was given, a jury was summoned, appeared, was examined, and empaneled; verdict was rendered, and judgment was entered. The first case was that of a little baby 2 years old, where the window of an elevated train fell on her fingers, and the question was whether the catch on the window was defective, or whether the mother, who was traveling with the child, had carelessly raised the window and let the child put its hand on the window-sill. The second case was that of a little boy, 8 years old, knocked down by an automobile, the only witness being a neighbor, who looked from a third-floor window and could not testify whether the boy ran in front of the automobile or that the automobile driver was negligent. The third was a boy, 18 years old, who sued to recover for failing off a car starting before he had alighted. The boy testified that he had been fifteen months in the country and belonged to a painters' union, but he could not produce his union card. The jury, on which there were men evidently familiar with the union rules, did not believe his story and inquired how a boy of 18, who had been so short a time in the country, could belong to the union.

All three cases resulted in a verdict for the defendant. These three concrete examples show a ready and quick determination of litigation, and to an extent answer the question of the law's delays.

Complaint should not be made of a court wherein the legal remedy is reached in the month following the one in which an accident happens. F. DE WITT WELLS,

Justice, Municipal Court of the City of New York, Ninth District, Manhattan.

One, Three, Two, Four.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Relative to the pagination of a letter, I write on pages one, three, two, and four because thus I never have to use a blotter. I can write on page three (numbered two) without interfering with the drying of the bottom of page one. I can write on page two, (numbered three,) parallel to the crease, and not smear up the opposite page. The first sheet of paper is held bent upward to dry while page four is being filled. I dislike to see the end of each page fainter than the rest because it has been blotted before the ink is dry. The conspicuous number at the top of each page, each number inside a little circle, prevents the reader from losing time or temper. M. E. W.

OCTOBER 23, 1915.

Things are not as they used to be
When you and I were young;
It is a different world we see,
We hear another tongue.

Now, gentlemen, into your tents.
They come! The ladies come!
And all their typing instruments,
Unlike themselves, are dumb.

All their pianos tight are shut,
Nobody home is at
(You see the difficulty) but
The poodle dog and cat.

The ladies they are on parade,
Their pleading banners float;
The matron fair, the dainty maid,
Are out to get the vote.

The rub-a-dub, the pillwink,
The noise of drum and fife,
Stir the dull mind and make us think
Upon the wrongs of life.

How fair they are! Shall justice be Accorded to these fair?
Or shall we treat them cruelly,
Like Jersey over there?

THE CRISIS IN CITY SCHOOL AFFAIRS.

A Plea for Suspended Judgment on the Gary Plan, Which Has Yet to Prove Itself Under Very Difficult Conditions.

By PAUL KLAPPER,

Assistant Professor of Education, College of the City of New York.

New York, Oct. 19, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The educational atmosphere of New York is surcharged. A school population too large for existing facilities and excessively cosmopolitan and heterogeneous, a population possessed of diversified needs, a school budget conceived on the basis of personal opinion and demonstrated by experience to be hopelessly inadequate to meet most urgent needs, economy which forces school authorities to put 900 classes in the hands of substitute teachers—these factors are making the educational situation in this city most acute. This dissatisfaction is expressing itself with no little bitterness in the controversy now raging over the introduction of the Gary plan. Calm judgment and dispassionate evaluation are vitally necessary, so that out of the ferment there may arise a modified school system that will relieve the situation and answer the educational needs of our youth.

The Gary system has commended itself to students of education for various reasons. It promises:

1. An enriched school life for every pupil.
2. A co-ordination of all existing child-welfare agencies and a fuller utilization of all facilities in present public and private recreational and educational institutions.
3. A solution of the part time problem.
4. A double school plan which sounds the deathknell of the traditional slogan, "A school seat for every school child."
5. A wider use of the school plant.
6. An increase in the school day through a co-ordination of work, study, and play activities.
7. A program that would invest the child's non-academic time to greater profit and pleasure.
8. A socialized education in harmony with progressive thought of the day.

Any school program conceived in the endeavor to actualize these educational hopes merits serious sympathetic study.

But serious limitations and undesirable by-products are pointed out by school authorities whose professional labors are dedicated to a successful solution of present educational problems. There is a sharp difference of opinion as to the worth of the type of vocational work afforded by the Gary system. To some it is glorified manual training; to others it is unorganized and haphazard dilettantism in trade activities. Many question the worth of having primary children repair at scheduled periods to the school shop to watch admiringly their older schoolmates at work. The practicability of the assembly exercises has not yet been demonstrated beyond question. In one of the Gary schools in this city there is assembled a group of children ranging from the fourth through the eighth school year. What type of work can be undertaken regularly with such diversity of capacities and training? Schoolmen disapprove of a program of studies which prescribes the most serious subjects for the late afternoon hours when the line of fatigue is at its worst. Not all experienced principals and superintendents are ready to accept a system of supervision which trusts younger children to older ones and which imposes upon pupils the duty of keeping the attendance of their classmates. Those who have sought to co-ordinate all existing child-welfare agencies in a given school district have often found private institutions unable to co-operate because of lack of funds. Aside from these detailed considerations, we have yet to demonstrate that the plan as a plan can be adopted even in an adapted school that was not originally built for the diversified activities of child life.

Our school authorities are the trustees of the lives and the welfare of four-fifths of a million school children. They would be lax in their trust if they committed this city to a Garyized school system without careful study and investigation. The only observational ground of the proposed system is the one town of Gary, which has a small homogeneous population, and schools built around these educational ideals. The Gary school most spoken of has a seating capacity of over two thousand five hundred, and a registration of about eighteen hundred. How different is the situation in most of our schools! In New York City only two schools are in use as experimental stations, yet neither has as yet the full complement of supplementary equipment and structural changes to make a full demonstration possible. The seventy-two class program that Mr. Wirt has offered as a model, and which has led some officers of the present administration to conclude that with a Garyized system there would be an increase of 10 per cent. in school accommodation and a decrease of 10 per cent. in the teaching staff, has never been subjected to the acid test of actual operation. Many of those who followed the discussions of the Gary plan have been amazed by its fluidity. At one time it was essentially a scheme for prevocational training. It then changed its character and became a plan to secure economy of school administration. Its latest development makes it a plan which seeks the conservation of child life, not of the dollar, for it is essentially a system to solve the part-time problem in New York. What the final stage of this educational metamorphosis will be, none seems ready to predict. Who has the temerity to formulate a definite answer to the question, "What is the Gary plan?" and not fear contradiction by another enthusiast of the system?

What we need most is a scientific evaluation of this proposed plan which will give us a final judgment uncolored by the extravagant promises of ardent admirers and by the dark prophesies of bitter opponents. The writer begs to suggest that school districts No. 25 and No. 26 of the Bronx be selected as the experimental station and that two years be set as the probationary period. These school districts represent almost all the typical conditions in New York City. Some of their schools are attended solely by Italians, others by Jews, still others by children of American born. Some of these schools are in relatively uncongested districts, others are in the heart of densely populated sections. In addition to its representative character this section of the Bronx is under the leadership of a superintendent who is sympathetic to the plan and who has faith in its possibilities.

An evaluating committee must be appointed to assume the task of scientifically evaluating this system. It should include, among others, an experimental educator, a psychologist, a physiologist, an expert on methods of teaching and another on school administration—these are to represent the technical phases of the experiment. In addition, two or three business men and a student of municipal government should be appointed to represent the lay judgment. This body should be drawn from educational institutions and civic organizations in the environs of the city and should serve without compensation. The committee should be charged with the task of devising standards of measuring the instructional and administrative efficiency of this system and should be empowered to make such investigations and tests as may be deemed necessary.

It has been said that the educational contribution of the nineteenth century is the power of suspended judgment. Here is a specific situation that needs a scientific approach and a purely intellectual reaction. It is to be hoped that the present city administration will exercise the power of suspended judgment by setting in motion the machinery for scientifically evaluating the Gary system. PAUL KLAPPER.

OTHER LIGHT RAYS.

They Furnish a Practical Explanation of Spirit Photographs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

H. Spencer Lewis seems to me to be making a ghostly visitation out of a very simple matter. In support of his belief in "astral bodies," "strange weird forces," and such pabulum on which he and his associates of the Rosae Crucis feed their scientific fancies, he cites some of the oddities found on photographic plates—"facts," as he rightly says, "easily demonstrated in any photographic studio." "There are," he points out, "vibrations and colors invisible to the human eye which can be registered on a common photographic plate." True enough, and also he might have pointed out that there is no such thing as an opaque substance, a fact which explains all the "startling" phenomena he and his ancient and mystic associates have recorded.

To quote Mr. Lewis: "Let any bright object be placed against a dark background and the lens of the camera focused sharply upon it. Then insert in the camera a plate-holder containing a plate. Before withdrawing the slide from the camera permit the lens to throw the object into the dark chamber of the camera. Then remove the object quickly, and at the same time withdraw the slide from the plateholder and make a very short exposure. If conditions are right, there will be implanted upon the plate a faint impression of the removed object and at other times a slightly different form. How?" He then proceeds to answer his question by a lot of talk about departed spirits and similar "mystic" theorizing.

The fact is, light as we accept it by the eye gives us our limited perception of what we distinguish as opaque or transparent; but we know that the spectrum colors are only a small section of the components of light, and by other methods of light analysis we easily prove a wide field of "infra-red" rays on one side and "ultra-violet" on the other. These are so grouped because as yet we know comparatively little about them, but some things we do not know about these light elements. For example, we know that some of these rays have much more penetrating power than the rays in the spectrum division. The X-rays have a penetrating power quite undreamed of until Roentgen discovered this fact.

The screen of a camera is of slight hindrance to the passage of rays of this type, and more or less well-defined photographs of objects "sharply focused by the lens" can readily be taken by this means through the "opaque" screen of a plateholder, "if the conditions are right." Considering the varying proportions of such rays, depending on barometric, atmospheric, chemical, or other influences at work on the light, we can surely explain the varying lot of "spirit" pictures without requiring the aid of spirits.

Unemployment Buttons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to suggest that the Municipal Labor Bureau give every applicant for work a button, ribbon, or some kind of token to wear in the buttonhole of the coat to show that he is looking for employment as he tramps the streets. R. HENLEY.

AN EFFICIENT RED CROSS.

Its Value to a Country, Both in Peace and War, Is Urged.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that the Government and the nation seem to have awakened to the necessity of preparedness in the matter of men, arms, and the munitions of war, ought we not to pay some attention to a side of the question which has heretofore been neglected in this country—namely, preparedness for the care of the sick and wounded?

The Red Cross organizations of Japan and Germany were the admiration of the world before the beginning of this war. That of Japan had more than 2,000,000 members, while that of Germany was so perfect that at the time of the Messina disaster it was able to send a whole train of Red Cross railway cars to Italy within twelve hours of the time the appeal reached it, each car equipped with doctors, trained nurses, and hospital supplies. And it is to the perfection of their Red Cross system that the Germans have been able to send so many wounded soldiers back to the front.

But the present war has made such overwhelming drafts on the resources of the German Red Cross that, as is known here, surgical supplies have utterly given out in many places, so that wounds have to be packed with sterilized moss, sawdust, or even sand. And conditions are no better in some places in France and England.

If we do not wish to expose our sick and wounded to untold suffering should we have a war, the time to prepare against it is now, and the way is by joining and helping the American Red Cross. This organization, managed by a board appointed by the President, on which are serving the Surgeons General of the army and navy, among other competent men, is not only a branch of the med

MISS ROMEYN, BRIDE OF E. W. PITTMAN

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Romeyn Married in St. Thomas's Church.

HER SISTER HONOR MATRON

Bridesmaids Carry Blue Silk Muffs Embroidered in Flowers—Reception at Women's University Club.

The wedding of Ernest Wetmore Pittman, a son of Mrs. Homer Wise of Flushing and the late Stewart Lansing Pittman of Detroit, and Miss Estelle Young Romeyn, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Romeyn of 63 East Sixty-fourth Street, was celebrated at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. Thomas's Church, and the rector, the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, performed the ceremony. The church decorations were palms and chrysanthemums.

The bride walked with her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a white satin gown having a full skirt, flounced with point lace and a short train of satin fastened at the shoulders. The low-cut corsage was V-shaped and trimmed with lace, and the long, close tulle sleeves came to the hands, which were uncovered. Her long tulle veil was ruched low at the back of her head and held with orange blossoms, and she carried a large cluster of Ascension lilies.

The bride's sister, Miss Emma L. Romeyn, was the maid of honor, and another sister, Mrs. William Everdell, Jr., was the matron of honor. The five bridesmaids were the Misses Voulett Proctor of New York, Annette Wise of Flushing, Esther Howell of Philadelphia, Mary B. Trowbridge of New Haven, and Doris McMillan of Detroit. They were gowned in blue satin draped with orchid colored tulle, the V-necked corsages ending in points on the hips, and were ruffled with the tulle. The large picture hats of silver lace and tulle had touches of fur, and long scarfs of the tulle were carried semi-veil fashion across the upper part of the face and around to the side, whence they floated out over the shoulders.

Instead of flowers they carried blue silk muffs embroidered in tiny French flowers. The maid of honor's gown differed in that it had a long skirt draped with tulle.

Mr. Pittman's brother, Stewart L. Pittman, was his best man, and the ushers were John Darcie of Pittsburgh, John H. Stewart, Douglas Dunn, Joseph B. Cary, Spaulding Howe, and Radcliffe Romeyn, a brother of the bride.

A reception was held at the Women's University Club, 106 East Fifty-second Street, after the ceremony, for the relatives and a few intimate friends.

After the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Pittman will make their home in Springfield, Mass.

BRIDEWEARS HEIRLOOM LACE

Miss E. C. Halliday Weds D. H. Clarke—Classmates Ushers.

In the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, David Hatfield Clarke, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Clarke of 440 West End Avenue, and Miss Elizabeth C. Halliday, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Halliday of 924 West End Avenue, were married by the Rev. Herbert Shipman, the rector of the church. Autumnal foliage and yellow chrysanthemums decorated the chancel and church.

The bride, who walked up the nave with her father, wore a gown of old rose point and applique lace, worn by both her grandmother and mother at their weddings. The court train was of satin and tulle and the tulle veil was held with orange blossoms. She carried lilies of the valley.

Miss Alice L. Morrill, the maid of honor, was frocked in light pink satin, draped with lavender chiffon, wore a brown velvet hat draped with tulle, and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The Misses Ruth H. Rider and Ruth Collins were the bridesmaids and were in light pink satin and tulle, and black velvet hats trimmed with tulle. They carried pink chrysanthemums.

William C. Springer, the best man, was a classmate at Princeton of the bridegroom. The ushers, who were also Princeton men, and members of Squadron A, were Theodore Crane, L. Spencer Steele George F. Green, and Dr. Henry A. Riley.

The wedding reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Halliday. Mr. Clarke was graduated from Princeton in the class of 1908 and is a member of Squadron A.

MISS POWELL'S WEDDING.

Attendants for Her Marriage to E. T. Bromfield Next Saturday.

Miss May Powell, whose marriage to Edward Thomas Bromfield will take place on next Saturday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McDonald Powell, 326 West Seventy-second Street, will have Mrs. Herman Helms of St. David's, Penn., Mrs. A. W. Powell, and Mrs. Irvin Day as her attendants.

Percy R. Bromfield is to be best man for his brother. The ushers will be Robert J. Joseph B., and A. W. Powell, brothers of the bride; David Burpee, W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., and Herman Helms.

The Rev. Frank M. Kerr of Christ's First Presbyterian Church at Hempstead, L. I., is to officiate. A reception will follow the ceremony.

On Tuesday Miss Powell is to give a luncheon for her attendants, and on Thursday a theatre party and supper is to be held for the bridal party and additional guests. Mr. Bromfield will give his farewell bachelor dinner at the Republican Club.

CLUNAN—PHILLIPS.

The marriage of Albert Clunan, Jr., and Miss Frances Marguerite Phillips, formerly of Plainfield, N. J., took place at 8 o'clock last night in the Church of the Incarnation, Brooklyn. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. John T. Whalen, as matron of honor, and another sister, Miss Edna R. Phillips, was the only bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs.'s brother, F. R. Phillips, gave her in marriage. Ford Kurtz and Thomas J. Farrell of New York were the ushers. The reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Phillips, 226 St. James Place. After a honeymoon spent automobiling, Mr. and Mrs. Clunan will live at 693 Flatbush Avenue.

Mr. Clunan was graduated from Cornell University in 1912.

Anderson-Burnette Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Grace A. Burnette of 117 West Seventieth Street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Burnette of Detroit, Mich., and William A. Anderson of Fall River, Mass., will take place at noon on Wednesday at the Church of the Transfiguration.

Mr. Anderson is Chief Engineer of the Wyoming, flagship of the Atlantic fleet. On Friday evening he entertained Captain Snowden and the officers of the Wyoming at dinner at the Elks Club.

After an extended motor trip, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will make their home in this city.

Shrewsbury-Lair.

Mrs. Walter Francis A. Brown gave a luncheon yesterday at the Hotel Manhattan, at which she announced the engagement of her niece, Miss Marcie Lair of Bound Brook, N. J., to Everett Shrewsbury of Blue Field, West Va. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Mary R. Ormsbee Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Ormsbee of 435 Macon Street, Brooklyn, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Royce Ormsbee, to William H. Whitton of Chatham, N. J. Mr. Whitton is the son of Mrs. James Whitton and the late Mr. Whitton, who formerly resided in Quincy Street, Brooklyn.

AMERICAS ONE IN SCIENCE.

Every Republic Will Be Represented at Congress in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Every one of the twenty-one American republics will send delegates to the Second Pan-American Scientific Congress, which will be held in Washington from Dec. 27 to Jan. 8.

Announcement to this effect was made today by John Barrett, who is Secretary General of the congress, which will be composed of leading educators, economists, engineers, international lawyers, and experts on mining, agriculture, health, transportation, and finance. It is estimated that there will be in attendance more than 150 of the most representative men of Central and South America, or more than have ever participated in any other international conference held in America. From the United States, aside from its official delegation, there will be present some 600 special representatives from its universities, colleges, and scientific societies and organizations.

An official statement on the subject issued today said:

"It will be signalized by an effort to promote closer relations among the American Republics along intellectual and educational lines rather than along material and political lines. In the same way that the regular international conferences of the American republics have developed closer political ties, and the recent Pan-American financial conference was held to promote better financial understanding, so correspondingly this congress will bring the Americas more intimately together upon a high plane of intellectual, scientific, educational, and social progress and intercourse. According to the opinion freely expressed by prominent Latin Americans in both the United States and South America, this conference will do more to promote practical Pan-Americanism than all the other conferences put together."

This international gathering is called the Second Pan-American Scientific Congress because the first was held in Santiago, the capital of Chile, in 1908.

The United States Government has appropriated $50,000 for the expenses of the conference, and the President of the United States was authorized by Congress to invite all the other American Governments to participate. President Wilson is expected to welcome the delegates at the inaugural session.

The President of the congress, in accordance with international precedence, which gives the Presidency to the leading representative of the country where his congress convenes, will be Eduardo Suarez-Mujica, Ambassador of Chile, who will also be the Chairman of the delegation from that country.

DR. HILLIS TO BE WITNESS.

Minister's Financial Troubles May Be Aired in Court.

By an order signed yesterday by County Judge Dike in Brooklyn, the history of the financial affairs of the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth Church, may be aired in open court on Nov. 9. Judge Dike granted a motion to have a suit brought by Dr. Rossiter W. Raymond, a prominent member of Plymouth Church, against Frank L. Ferguson, former business agent for Dr. Hillis, placed on the preferred calendar for trial on that day.

Dr. Raymond alleges that Ferguson is liable on a note for $600 which he gave to Raymond, in opposing the motion for a preference, Mr. Ferguson said that he intended to prove that the note was not given by him personally or as an individual, but as the agent of Dr. Hillis. The note was given to secure payment of interest on bonds of the Alberni Timber Company. Mr. Ferguson said that he would call Dr. Hillis as a witness in the case.

GRANDSON FOR THE COLONEL

A Third Child Born to Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., announced yesterday the birth of a son. The mother and child are reported well.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., son of Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt, was married in June, 1910, to Miss Eleanor Butler Alexander, daughter of Mrs. Henry A. Alexander of this city.

This is their third child. Grace Green Roosevelt was born on Aug. 17, 1911, and Theodore Roosevelt, 3d, was born on June 13, 1914.

The Roosevelt town house is at 165 East Seventy-fourth Street.

Miss Carver a Bride in Yonkers.

Miss Corinne Carver, eldest daughter of the late Rev. Alexander Burton Carver, formerly rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Yonkers, was married last night to Alexander B. Johnson, a manufacturer of 81 High Street, that city. The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Quincy Adams Johnson, is a direct descendant of John Quincy Adams.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Aninha Carver, at 1,180 North Broadway, by the Rev. J. Marcericison. A reception followed, to which 500 guests were invited.

The bride's brother, Alexander B. Carver, gave her in marriage. She was attended by her two sisters, Miss Dorothea Carver and Miss Aninha Carver. Charles Johnson was his brother's best man.

Miss Katharine Black a Debutante.

Miss Katharine Black, the second débutante to have her coming-out party this season, was introduced yesterday at a reception given by her mother, Mrs. Henry Van D. Black, at Bide-a-Wee, her home, at Irvington-on-Hudson. Miss Helen Sayles, daughter of Mrs. Frederic Clark Sayles, was presented a week ago at her Irvington home.

Receiving yesterday with the débutante and her mother were the Misses Marion Townsend, Genevieve Clendenin, Dorothy Gifford, Beatrice Boyd, Marion Becker, Caroline Carroll, Marjorie Smylie, Helen Wright, Dorothy Brown, Dorothy Black, Mrs. George Fowler, Mrs. E. F. Fowler, Mrs. T. P. Chambers, Mrs. Benjamin Prince, Mrs. Charles Hoge, Mrs. Sayles, and Miss Sayles.

300 Attend Miss Kern's Reception.

Nearly 300 invited guests attended the reception held by Miss Marguerite A. Kern and Richard M. Lederer yesterday afternoon at Miss Kern's home, 683 West End Avenue. The rooms were decorated with tropical plants and cut flowers. Among those who assisted Miss Kern and Mr. Lederer were Miss Elsie Sanders, Miss Edna Floersheimer, Miss Margaret Prince, Miss Fannie Marckwell, Miss Arleen Rosenheim, Herbert B. Lederer, Albert Floersheimer, Henry D. Kaufman, Edward Buscli, Alvin Sledner, Stanley Cane, Arthur Williams, Russell Williams, and Paul Bluhm.

O'Gorman-Morison Engagement.

Mrs. Archibald Sheffield announces the engagement of her daughter by a former marriage, Miss Pauline Morison, to William Doane O'Gorman, who is a son of Mrs. Robert Emmet Jennings of Jersey City by her first husband.

Mr. O'Gorman is a graduate of Stevens Institute of Technology, Class of '11, and of the Harvard School of Applied Science. He is a member of the Chi Psi Fraternity and the Harvard Club of this city.

No date has been set for the wedding.

To and From Europe.

Some of those booked to sail today for Liverpool on the Finland are:

Mrs. R. G. Barnes, Miss L. Baugnies, L. E. Bonilla, Colombian Minister to Great Britain; R. G. Blackie, Gerald Browne, A. H. Clark, J. H. Cooke, Mrs. C. E. Coddington, Morris Fox, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. PADEREWSKI SPEAKS IN POLAND'S BEHALF

New York Audience Hears Pianist's Voice for First Time as He Tells War's Horrors.

PLAYS A CHOPIN PROGRAM

Remarkable Tribute Paid by Great Audience — Tickets Bring $10,000 for Sufferers.

The voice of Paderewski was heard yesterday afternoon for the first time by a New York audience. In the course of the work he is doing to raise money for war-stricken Poland, the pianist reached this city, and a great crowd filled Carnegie Hall to hear him deliver his address on "Poland, Past and Present," and to play from the works of Poland's greatest composer, Chopin. No artist has adhered more closely than Paderewski to the conviction that an instrumental performer should be known to his audiences only through his playing, so that the thousands who have been attending his recitals for years never before had a chance to hear him speak. As a result of the entertainment the Polish Victims' Relief Fund was swelled by a sum as large as was ever raised here before through the efforts of a single artist at a single performance.

The box office figures showed receipts of nearly $10,000 on tickets alone, or about three times what a "full house" brings at Carnegie Hall at ordinary prices. The parquet seats were $5, the lower boxes $100, standing room on the main floor $2, and the rest of the prices in proportion. Besides the money from the tickets, a large sum will result from the sale of souvenir programs, flowers, dolls made by Polish refugees and autographed photographs of Paderewski. The dolls, which were in charge of Mme. Paderewski, sold for from $5 to $25, and many persons paid $5 and $10 for autographs.

Paderewski appeared on the stage—it was dimly-lighted, as was the auditorium—in the usual manner of his recitals, at five minutes before three. As soon as he appeared the audience, applauding, rose and stood to express a tribute of admiration and sympathy to the man who, with a large part of his own possessions swept away when Poland was devastated, has devoted his talents to relieving his even less fortunate countrymen.

His voice carried perfectly, and his accent, while noticeable, was never pronounced. The partition of Poland he described as "the greatest crime of modern history." Turning to present-day conditions in Poland he said:

"For over a year continuous fighting, incessant danger, uninterrupted sorrow and anguish and pain have been imposed upon an innocent people. How the population could have stood it God only knows. Millions of them have been driven into the open, and bereaved parents, helpless widows, and orphans are hiding in the woods, seeking shelter there and happy at finding during their wanderings an abandoned trench where they may hope to pick up the few decayed remnants that remain of the soldiers' food.

"Scarcely one-fourth of our soldiers remain, compelled to fight, brother against brother, and always in the front rank of the contending armies our young men, the flower of our people. Three-quarters have been killed, and the fate of the others is sealed. How many noncombatants have been felled it is impossible to estimate.

"I am performing a difficult, a sometimes humiliating, but always sacred task to arouse interest in the people of my stricken country. My errand is not one of hate, but of love; I do not seek to arouse passion, but to arouse compassion. Speak of Poland to your kind, good friends. Tell them that far from your untroubled, prosperous land there are people who are in suffering and need beyond the limit of human endurance. Tell them it is the people who sent you Kosciusko in your own need. Some one may be moved by your words, some one may try to help us. God will bless him as he will bless you!"

At the end of the speech the audience again rose, and stood until Paderewski left the stage. The pianist retired for a rest before his playing. At the end of his regular program the audience surged down front in the usual manner, and he played two encores. The applause continued and the pianist returned to play the Polish national anthem. As soon as it was recognized the audience rose and remained standing until it ended. Then the lights in the hall were put out and interest centred in the rehearsal hall at the east side of the lobby, where Mme. Paderewski and others sold dolls and other souvenirs.

When M. Paderewski came forth again, after his address, to give the musical part of his program, he made his first appearance here in two seasons as a pianist, though he was in New York a considerable part of last season on the business of his native land. His program was brief and was devoted entirely to Chopin. The pieces were the Ballade in A flat, the B flat minor sonata, the G major nocturne, the mazurka in A minor from Op. 17, and the Polonaise in A flat.

MRS. ALTHOUSE INJURED.

Wife of Metropolitan Tenor Thrown from Horse.

Mrs. Paul Althouse, wife of the young American tenor at the Metropolitan Opera House, was injured yesterday morning on Riverside Drive when a horse she was riding, in company with her husband, slipped and threw her to the street. The couple were passing Grant's Tomb about 7:30 A. M. on their customary morning ride when, going over a patch of fallen leaves, which retain the dew and make the pavement very slippery under them, her horse's forelegs slipped. The animal went down, pitching Mrs. Althouse over his head. She landed on her back. The horse, a well-trained animal, recovered and stood rigid, one of its hoofs within ten inches of Mrs. Althouse's face.

The singer's wife had fainted from pain and shock. Mr. Althouse carried her to a stable nearby, and sent for a taxicab, in which the injured woman was removed to their apartment at 2,647 Broadway. Here she was examined by a doctor. She is confined to her bed, but the extent of her injuries is not yet known. Mr. Althouse said last night the doctor had told him developments by which her condition could be positively judged had not yet appeared.

The Althouses were married a little over a year ago. They met in a studio in New York, where Mrs. Althouse, having studied singing four years in Italy, was preparing for opera. Mrs. Althouse is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Breen of St. Paul, Minn., and is a graduate of the University of Minnesota.

$500,000 GIFT TO COLLEGE.

Anonymous Delaware Benefactor Supposed to be Pierre S. du Pont.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 23.—Delaware College today received a gift of $500,000. While the Trustees refused to divulge the name of the giver, it is understood that the sum was donated by Pierre S. du Pont, President of the du Pont Powder Company. Of the sum donated $300,000 is to be used for new buildings and other college improvements, while the remainder is to go into the endowment fund for the maintenance of the college buildings. The college is situated at Newark, Del.

To-day's contribution is in addition to the money recently donated to the college by one whose name is withheld for the purchase of a large tract of land extending from Delaware College to the Women's College. The contemplated extensions will not impose a dollar of additional expense upon the State of Delaware for maintenance.

DR. WM. G. GRACE, CRICKETER, DEAD

World's Premier Batsman for 45 Years Succumbs in London in His 68th Year.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Dr. William Gilbert Grace, the famous cricketer, is dead. He was 67 years old.

Wherever cricket is played the name of Dr. W. G. Grace is associated with it. No man in the history of the sport was as well known or had accomplished as much as "W. G.," as he was affectionately called the world over, and the news of his death came as a shock to American cricketers and followers of the sport. The veteran cricketer, international figure that he was held the same position in the English national game as William Ewart Gladstone did in politics. He was known as "The Grand Old Man of Cricket." Every one loved him because of his wonderful success in the field and because of his manly qualities.

Dr. Grace, who was Coroner in Gloucester County, was one of three brothers, all of whom were almost equally famous, and they all played for Gloucester County. The other brothers were Gilbert E. and E. M. The trio played a prominent part in English cricket for fifty years, and later Dr. Grace's sons took up the sport, although they failed to attain the prominence which marked the career of their father.

Dr. Grace was a native of Gloucestershire, and was born there on July 18, 1848. His active cricket career started at the age of 16, and he soon proved that his prowess as a batsman were far above the average. He went rapidly from success to success, piling up huge scores, including many centuries, and even scores of 200 and 300 and more, against the best bowling England could produce, until he was regarded as the world's premier batsman, a position he held for about forty-five years.

His highest score in first-class cricket was 344 runs, while he compiled another of 400 not out against twenty-two players of Grimsby, and district. His record in first-class cricket up to 1900 gave him 1,290 innings, with a total of 49,122 runs, a high score of 344, with 96 times not out, and a batting average of a little over 40 runs per inning. Thirteen times he had scores of 200 runs and over; 33 times 150 and over, in addition to 72 centuries and 225 scores of 50 and more.

REBATE TO J. P. MORGAN.

Paid Duties on Books Printed for Free Distribution.

J. P. Morgan won yesterday in a controversy with port officials here when the Board of United States General Appraisers decided that he need not pay duty on 225 paper-bound volumes of a work printed in English and entitled "Preliminary Remarks On the Monetary and Banking Reform in China," by Dr. G. Vissering.

When the books reached here they were sent to the Appraiser's Stores for the usual customs examination. Appraiser Sague's book examiner reported that duty should be paid at the rate of 15 per cent. ad valorem under the provision in paragraph 229, of the Underwood tariff, as "books of all kind." Collector Dudley Field Malone thereupon demanded the duties found by the Appraiser's office, Mr. Morgan paid the duties in order to obtain possession of the volumes, and instructed his attorney to appeal to the General Board.

At the hearing, Mr. Morgan's lawyer told the board that his client claimed free entry under that provision in the tariff for "publications of individuals for gratuitous private circulation." It was explained that Dr. Vissering, the author of the work, was employed by the Chinese Government as an expert currency adviser to look into the question of the different kinds of Chinese money and to adopt a plan of unifying the whole currency system of China.

Testimony was also given that it was the intention of the author that these 225 copies of his book should be distributed gratuitously by the ultimate consignee, J. P. Morgan & Co., the representatives of the American group of bankers organized to do business in China. This distribution was to be among certain economists, bank Preidents, college Professors, and men interested in currency problems in this country in accordance with a list of names to be furnished by Dr. Vissering.

Judge Fischer, in his decision for the board, reversing the port officials, said the proof offered clearly showed the claim for duty exemption to be well founded. The protest was sustained with an order to Collector Malone to reliquidate the entry so that Mr. Morgan may recover the duties exacted.

ANTON LANG NOT KILLED.

Letter to Relative Here Shows That He Is Not Even Fighting.

Otto Lang of 125 East Thirty-eighth Street, nephew of Anton Lang, who played the part of Christus in the Oberammergau Passion Play, received a letter recently from Anton Lang indicating he was not in the German Army and had not been near the western battlefront, where, it was reported, he had been killed. The announcement of his death, which came from Alois Lang, a cousin at Manitowoc, Wis., who said he received his information in a letter sent from some place in Champagne, has not been confirmed from any official German source.

It is believed that a mistake has been made by confusing the identity of the Oberammergau player with that of a relative of the same name. Otto Lang, the only close relative here of Anton Lang, was out of town yesterday and was not expected to return for several days. A friend said he had denied the truth of the report of the death of his uncle and referred to a letter from him a few days ago as evidence that Anton Lang was not with the army, and was exempt from war service.

"Another relative is in the army, either a cousin or uncle of Otto Lang, and it is thought that he may have been the one referred to as being on the western battlefront," said a friend of the young man last night.

Otto Lang, who is 18 years old, is the protégé of several prominent American families. They are aiding him in electrical laboratory work and mechanical engineering studies. His American friends, who include Miss Anne Morgan, met him when they visited Oberammergau two years ago. Arthur Williams, general commercial manager of the New York Edison Company, one of the party on the European trip, obtained a position for him in the photographic department of the company at 124 West Forty-second Street. At present he is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Holmes Aldrich at 125 East Thirty-eighth Street.

Their Tenth Wedding Anniversary.

THE OLD MEN'S TOY SHOP

is conducted to give work to men handicapped by age or other infirmities, who have no chance in competition with the able-bodied. The working capacity of these men is not great. The tasks must be easy and the hours short. The shop thus has to be run at a loss, despite the income from sales.

Will you help to support the shop and so befriend these men? Contributions should be addressed to the Association.

T. WALDO STORY, SCULPTOR, IS DEAD

Blood Clot on the Brain Fatal to Descendant of an Old American Family.

HUSBAND OF BESSIE ABOTT

Son of Wm. Wetmore Story Was Born in Barberini Palace—He Designed Belmont Memorial.

T. Waldo Story, the sculptor, and descendant of a historic American family whose last two generations have been artists, died yesterday morning from a blood clot on the brain at his home at 133 East Sixtieth Street.

Mr. Story's works, which are best known in this country, are his gold mosaic memorial to Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, parents of August and Perry Belmont, in Trinity Church at Newport, R. I.; the bronze doors of the library of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, and the drinking fountain in Hopedale, Mass. He has done a bust of the late Lord Randolph Churchill, as well as the latter's statue in the chapel at Blenheim, and his monument.

His father was William Wetmore Story, the poet and sculptor, who lived most of his life at the famous Barberini Palace in Rome, and his grandfather was Judge Joseph Story, one of the most distinguished American jurists and law writers. Dr. Elisha Story, a great-grandfather of T. Waldo Story, was a member of the Boston Tea Party and a surgeon during the Revolutionary War.

T. Waldo Story was born and reared at the Barberini Palace, where his father lived from 1847 until his death in 1895. Here the elder Story wrote "Fiametta," "Roba di Roma," and other works of prose and poetry, and entertained artists and men of letters from all parts of the world. Nathaniel Hawthorne, a visitor at the Barberini Palace, got there his inspiration for "The Marble Faun." Other visitors at the palace in the youth of Waldo Story were Robert Browning, James Russell Lowell, and Margaret Fuller.

In 1908 Waldo Story parted from his first wife, who had been a Miss Brodwood, sold his household effects, and gave up his apartments in the Barberini, which had been occupied by the family for sixty-one years. The Barberini was built by Urban VIII. in 1660. On its grand staircase is the famous "Fontana dei Tritone." The library of the palace contained a rare collection of manuscripts, including letters of Galileo, of Bembo, and some illuminated manuscripts from Ghirlandajo brought together by the Cardinal Barberini.

Since 1908 Mr. Story had lived chiefly in this country. In 1912 he married his second wife, Bessie Abott, the American opera singer, who made her début at the Paris Opéra in 1901. She was with him at his death.

Julian Story, a brother of Waldo, is a painter who married Emma Eames in 1891 and was divorced a year later. His sister, Miss Gwendolyn Marion Story, in 1910 married Captain Courtenay Stewart, a cousin of the seventh Earl of Galloway.

One of the aunts of Waldo Story is Marchioness Peruzzi deo Medici of Florence; another is Donna Eva Rospoli of Rome, and another is Frau von Armin of the well-known family of that name in Germany. Among his American relatives are the Parishes, who live at Rome; ex-Mayor George B. McClellan of New York, and Mrs. Lewis Cass Ledyard.

Mr. Story was a friend of Whistler's, and is mentioned in "The Gentle Art of Making Enemies."

TO HASTEN A SUBWAY LINE.

Station Work in New Utrecht Avenue to be Done in Three Months.

The early opening of the new elevated line along New Utrecht Avenue, as far as Sixty-second Street, is foreshadowed by a change in the date of the reception of bids for the station finish work by the Public Service Commission. These were to have been sent in by Oct. 29, but they will now be expected on Nov. 5.

They will, however, have to provide for the completion of the work as far south as Sixty-second Street in three months, instead of six. This will enable some of the Fourth Avenue Subway trains to connect with the New Utrecht line through the Thirty-eighth Street cut, and to furnish service to the with her father, Dr. Frank D. Deems, in the Sea Beach line.

J. H. Schiff for Perkins.

Jacob H. Schiff wrote yesterday to the managers of Charles A. Perkins's campaign denying that he was supporting Frank Moss for District Attorney. "I am not supporting Mr. Moss in his present candidacy," wrote Mr. Schiff. "My support is given to Mr. Perkins because he has proved his eminent fitness for the office to which he now seeks election, and as I am not determined by political considerations in my preference for municipal offices, I prefer to give my support to Mr. Perkins."

FALL FROM WINDOW KILLS BYRON ONGLEY

Playwright and Stage Director Found Dying After Premiere of 'The Eternal Magdalene.'

Byron Ongley, well known in theatrical circles as a playwright and stage director, died early yesterday morning as the result of a fall from a window of the Hotel Dupont in Wilmington, Del. Mr. Ongley had gone to Wilmington to be present at the first performance of "The Eternal Magdalene," a play that will be presented a week from tomorrow night in the Forty-eighth Street Theatre.

After the performance Mr. Ongley, who had helped stage the piece for Selwyn & Co. and A. H. Woods, returned to the hotel and went to his room. A few minutes later employees of the hotel heard something strike the sidewalk in Market Street, and running out found Ongley lying unconscious on the pavement. He was hurried to the Delaware Hospital, but died before the motor reached there.

There was nothing to suggest the cause of the accident. One theory was that upon opening the low-silled window he lost his balance and fell out. The body was removed to the Coroner's office to await the Coroner's verdict.

Amy Summers, his widow, who is appearing in a comedy in New York, went to Wilmington yesterday to take charge of the body. It will be taken to Hartford for burial. Mr. Ongley, who was about 40 years old, came here from that city eight years ago. He acted in William Gillette's "Ticey," but after coming to New York he did little acting and devoted himself to the writing and producing of plays. With Emil Nyitray, he adapted "The Typhoon," in which Walker Whiteside appeared several years ago, from the Hungarian, and with the same author he wrote "He Comes Up Smiling," in which Douglas Fairbanks was seen at the Liberty last year. A new play, "Oh James!" is to be produced this season. Mr. Ongley was general stage director for A. H. Woods and produced "Common Clay" for that manager. He was a member of the Lambs' Club.

J. B. WILKINSON DEAD.

Ex-Member of U. S. Board of Appraisers Was Injured in Hurricane.

J. B. Wilkinson, who was for many years a member of the United States General Board of Appraisers, died yesterday morning, at the age of 69 years, on his plantation at Myrtle Grove, La., where he had spent much of his time since his retirement four years ago, following a stroke of apoplexy. His death was a result of injuries suffered several days ago, when the house on his plantation was partly dismantled by the hurricane which swept through Louisiana.

Mr. Wilkinson was a member of the Lotus Club, Union League Club, Lambs' Club, Twilight Club, and Southern Society, and a member of the Confederate Veterans of New York. He left a widow and four children—Mrs. Mary Wilkinson Mount of this city, Mrs. William H. Talmer of Philadelphia, Mrs. Henry Taynor Scott, Jr., of Pasadena, Cal., and Theodore S. Wilkinson of East Orange, N. J.

The body will be brought to this city for burial near the Confederate Monument at the Mt. Hope Cemetery.

BIGGEST NAVY FOR US IS GARDNER'S PLEA

Congressman Insists We Should Have a Fleet Able to Defend Us Even Against England.

WANTS ADMIRALS HEARD

Asks House Naval Committee to Call In Winslow, Knight, and Fiske for Advice.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Congressman Augustus P. Gardner of Massachusetts, Republican, who started the agitation for more adequate national defense, has written a letter to Chairman Padgett of the House Committee on Naval Affairs, of which Mr. Gardner is a member, calling on him to bring in a naval building program that will make the American fleet equal to that of Great Britain and not second to that of Great Britain.

In the course of his letter, Mr. Gardner, while noting with regret that President Wilson has never acknowledged a request from him to summon Admiral Cameron McR. Winslow to a conference about the navy's needs, expresses the belief "that the Administration has embarked on a sincere effort to perfect the defens . of this country.

"In the present war my sympathies, and, I believe, those of the country, are entirely with the Allies," says Mr. Gardner, "yet, after speaking repeatedly in many different States, I am convinced that our people desire to have the United States made safe against any nation on earth, including Great Britain. It is my deliberate judgment that Americans by an overwhelming majority do not wish the safety of the United States to be dependent on the friendliness of any nation whatever."

Mr. Gardner points out that the program of the General Board, adopted years ago, provided for a fleet of forty-eight battleships less than twenty years old, while the program of the Navy Department, just announced, would give only forty-six battleships and battle cruisers. He says that many persons have jumped to the conclusion that the five-year program of the Navy Department means that the vessels to be provided for would be completed in five years, whereas it would take nine years to complete it. He thinks that the navy should be built up as rapidly as possible, even if a bond issue is necessary.

In order that Congress and the country may get the point of view of naval officers other than bureau chiefs, Mr. Gardner requests that the Naval Committee arrange to summon Admiral Winslow, who commands the Pacific Fleet; Rear Admiral A. M. Knight, President of the War College, and Rear Admiral B. A. Fiske, recently senior aid to the Secretary of the Navy. He is especially anxious that Admiral Winslow be summoned, he says, for it seems to him "that he commands the confidence of officers and enlisted men more than any one else whom I know."

NAVY TO HAVE MORE FLIERS.

Daniels Would Appoint Experts from Civil Life.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Secretary Daniels has decided to submit to Congress a plan for the creation of an enlarged aviation corps for the navy. His idea is to appoint aviators from civil life without requiring them to pass through the Naval Academy. They will receive commissions, but will serve in no other capacity than as aviators.

To date the navy has issued aviator licenses to only eighteen officers. These are line officers who have been assigned to special duty as aviators. Under the new plan, which is being worked out in detail by Rear Admiral Victor Blue, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, for the approval of Secretary Daniels, it is the expectation that the navy may draw upon the best talent in the civil life of the country, now or hereafter engaged in aviation. The aviators will serve for definite terms and will be part of the navy, just as line or staff officers.

The progress of aviation in the navy is now impeded by the lack of aviators and by the fact that there can be no officers in the corps except graduates of Annapolis. Under the new plan the navy would obtain its aviators not only from the commissioned personnel of the navy, but likewise from civil life. Mr. Daniels believes there are many able young aviators who would join the corps if they had the opportunity, and that the navy, as well as the army, should not be deprived of the benefit of their services. From his talks with those in charge of the navy aviation Mr. Daniels is convinced that a man to become a successful aviator must possess a sort of a sixth sense, and that it is not possible for every man to develop it.

Aside from the eighteen naval aviators there are young men who are being trained as aviators, but only eighteen have finished the prescribed course laid down in the regulations to enable them to qualify for licenses. It is felt that it would require too much time for the navy to wait for a sufficient number of officers to develop as aviators and for this reason Mr. Daniels has taken up the new plan.

MILITIA IN SECURITY LEAGUE.

General O'Ryan Sees No Reason Why They Should Not Join.

The National Security League announced yesterday that its activities in aid of the development of the National Guard throughout the country led the organization to make a formal inquiry of Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, commanding the New York National Guard, whether the National Guardsmen could with propriety co-operate with the work of the National Security League. General O'Ryan, after a conference with Governor Whitman, has returned a favorable reply.

"The policy of the State," he says, "is one of friendly and favorable co-operation. There is no opinion of the Judge Advocate adverse to officers joining the league. I believe our officers will co-operate in many ways that will prove of practical assistance to the patriotic work being carried on by the National Security League." General O'Ryan adds, however, that it is not believed to be compatible with the best traditions of the military service for commissioned officers to address public meetings and to publicly discuss the military policy of the Government, or to permit the use of their names under public statements of what our military policy should be.

CHALLENGES BRYAN CHARGE.

Navy League Ready to Prove It Is Not Subsidized.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The Navy League has called on William J. Bryan to make good his charges in The Commoner and in speeches that the league is subsidized by contributions of armor plate manufacturers seeking to promote the building of a large fleet. Through its Secretary, Arthur H. Dadmun, the league today sent a letter to Mr. Bryan inviting him to call at its headquarters in Washington and inspect its books. Mr. Dadmun offers to account for all expenditures and receipts and to present sworn statements of contributions and lists of contributors.

In giving the letter to the press, Mr. Dadmun said that a report was being prepared by Marwick, Mitchell, Peat & Co., chartered accountants, who had just finished an examination of the league's books and records, covering the last thirty months. This report would prove, Secretary Dadmun said, that the league had never at any time received any contribution from any armor plate ring and did not know of the existence of such a body.

"Mr. Bryan has unquestionably done us a great wrong," added the league's secretary, "and we feel that as an honorable man he cannot do less than avail himself of this opportunity which we offer him to convince himself of the truth or falsehood of his charges and make fitting reparation for the wrong he has done."

DEFENSE LEAGUES UNITED.

Henry A. Wise Wood Finds Majority Favoring Wilson's Plans.

The Conference Committee on National Preparedness, of which Henry A. Wise Wood of the Naval Advisory Board is Chairman, announced yesterday that President Wilson's plans for increasing the army and navy would receive the support of nine representative national organizations engaged in furthering defense. These organizations have an aggregate membership of several hundred thousand.

In the course of the statement issued yesterday it is pointed out that "it is self-evident that the continuance of every man's job and the protection of his home are dependent upon the maintenance of national progress, and to that progress the upholding of certain ideals are necessary."

To make peace at any price, says the Conference Committee, is "to drop these principles gradually and literally to invite the other peoples to wrest from us not only the products of our industry and right living, but the rich heritage which was preserved by our forefathers at the price of their lives and handed down to us as a sacred thing."

"The underwritters of peace," the statement continues, "are not in favor of peace at any price because they foresee that such a policy, while securing temporary peace for today, is absolutely certain to involve the nations in greater difficulties tomorrow. The father who will weakly submit to indignity today to save himself, foredooms his sons and his daughters to the horrors of war."

Referring to the activities of the Navy League of the United States, of which General Horace Porter is President, and which is one of the nine organizations referred to, the remark is made that "it is hard to arouse the interest of men and women who have never seen a battleship, and who may never see one, to know that their continued peace and prosperity is in large measure dependent upon the nation maintaining a fleet on par with the fleets of other great nations."

There follow references to the activities of other national organizations included in the nine referred to, among them the Army League, which advocates a "Council of National Defense;" the National Security League, the American Legion, the National Aeroplane Fund, organized by the Aero Club of America, and which works to provide an adequate aerial arm, not only for the army and navy, but also for the National Guard organization of the country.

"The Automobile Club of America," the statement continues, "the United States Power Squadrons, the American Institute of Radio Engineers, the American Societies of Civil, Mining, Electrical, Mechanical, and Aeronautic Engineering, the American Red Cross, and the Maryland League of National Defense also are societies whose members believe that it is better to be fully prepared for defense, and thus avoid war, than to be prepared only for peace and thus invite war."

Assessments Cut $285,000,000.

The Tax Commissioners examined yesterday 148 persons on the tentative assessment rolls for 1916 for assessments of $13,091,100. Twenty-two were held for assessments of $96,900. Five were exempted for non-residence, and one was reported dead. Yesterday's examinations bring the total since Oct. 1 to 3,470. Their total tentative assessments were $280,887,000. Of the number 565 were held for a final assessment of $4,119,291.

J. D. SWOYER A BANKRUPT.

Has House and Yachts to Meet Liabilities of $100,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 23.—Joseph D. Swoyer, head of the Joseph D. Swoyer Company, woolen yarn manufacturers in Philadelphia, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court of Eastern Pennsylvania. It is said his liabilities will total $100,000, while his assets consist mostly of personal property, including a seashore residence here and several yachts.

His financial difficulties were brought to light here today in the suit of Attorney James H. Hayes, Jr., against Swoyer to collect $3,000 for the settlement out of court of the threatened action for $200,000 by Thomas M. Carroll of the Hotel Hermitage, New York City, who had instituted proceedings on the grounds of the alienation of the affections of his wife. Swoyer, it was alleged at the time, had taken Mrs. Elizabeth Carroll on a trip around the world. The new development today caused the indefinite postponement of the Hayes suit.

BAR BETHLEHEM ODD LOTS.

Three Firms Refuse Orders and Two Others Adopt Special Rules.

Holders of one to ninety-nine shares of Bethlehem Steel stock were alarmed yesterday by a report that the odd-lot houses had decided to discontinue dealings in that issue. The report arose from the decision on the part of three of the odd-lot firms to accept no more orders in Bethlehem. However, two odd-lot houses, Carlisle, Mellick & Co., and DeCoppet & Doremus, will continue to execute orders for other brokers.

The price of the Schwab issue is now so high and the fluctuations so great that the odd-lot brokers have ceased to execute orders for less than 100 shares at an eighth from the market for a full lot, as is done in other issues. The odd-lot price will be adjusted according to the number of shares involved and the purchase or sale which the dealer has to make to fill it. A member of the firm of Carlisle, Mellick & Co. said last night that no fixed rule could be laid down, but that the price would be fair to the customer. Bethlehem sold yesterday at $585 a share. On Friday it sold at $600 and closed at $575.

WHIPPANY CUP WON BY MISS MEADOWS

Members of Essex Fox Hounds Hold Farmers' Day and Race Meeting.

Members of the Essex Fox Hounds held their second annual Farmers' Day and race meeting yesterday at Peapack, N. J. The farmers from Somerset, Morris, and Hunterdon Counties, over whose property the hounds hunt were the guests. The morning was devoted to various kinds of sports; there were two and three-legged races for men and boys, climbing greased poles and shooting for live turkeys. The prizes for these various events were furnished by the hosts, who, dressed in their hunting costume, circulated around among their guests, seeing that every one had a good time.

Between 500 and 600 sat down to luncheon, which was served in large tents, and there was plenty to eat and drink for every one, after which all adjourned to the course for the races. A number of prominent persons from various parts of the State and quite a few from New York motored over to see the sport. All the six events were well contested, and some of the finishes exceedingly close.

The opening race was for farmers, the horses to be ridden by their owners or sons, over the half-mile course, post entries were allowed. Four horses faced the starter The race was won by E. Russell's Chesterfield; John H. Young, Jr., on Lady Morgan, was a close second.

A. Glider, on A. A. Fowler's Oxygen, had an easy victory in the inaugural race for the New Jersey Hunt Cup for horses the property of, and ridden by members of recognized hunt clubs, or officers of the United States Army. In addition to this trophy, the President of the Essex Fox Hounds presented a challenge cup, which becomes the property of the owner winning the New Jersey Cup three times.

The course was over four miles of fair hunting country, which included a number of stiff fences, across roads and through several cornfields.

Of the six entries four went to the post. A. A. Fowler, who owned the winner, withdrew Gold Pitcher and Gloversville, his other two nominations. Oxygen lead for virtually the whole distance. N. L. Tliney, the polo player, who was riding Wayside, gave the victor a good race for about two miles, but after that he was killed off by the pace and dropped out.

Coming to the last quarter of a mile Mrs. Glider, who rode Oxygen, eased his mount up and won with thirty lengths to spare. Mr. Bird on Decision was second. Lawrence B. Smith's Chancellor, with the owner up, came in third.

There were eight starters in the dash for the Gladstone Cup, which was at six furlongs. This was the largest field of the afternoon, and brought together several horses which have been racing during the season at the hunt meetings on Long Island. The thoroughbreds got away to a good start. For almost two furlongs they ran in two divisions, with hardly more than a length between them.

Finally Mr. Bamberger, who was riding Thomas M. Madden's Overseer, went to the front, closely followed by Howard, piloting Biddy McGee. These two raced together for a short distance, but were unable to shake off the remainder of the field, Mr. Cloister's Cycle was the other contender, and held on gamely to the leaders. Fifty yards from the finish Mr. Bamberger went to the whip and shot ahead with Overseer, to cross the finish line three lengths ahead of Biddy McGee, who in turn managed to beat out Cycle by a short head for the place.

As the Whippany River Club of Morristown did not hold a meeting this season, the officials granted the request of the members of the Essex Fox Hounds and held the race for the famous old Whippany Challenge Cup over the latter's course. The event is for registered hunters, to be ridden by gentlemen riders in pink, both the jockey and the owner to be regular members of some recognized hunt. The course was over three and one-half miles of fair hunting country.

The race was of unusual interest, owing to the fact that the trophy becomes the property of the owner winning it three times. Charles Pfizer's Sir Ellerslie has won two legs, and Arthur Fowler's Scout and Shelton Martin's Miss Meadows one each, Mr. Pfizer, who was one of the judges, did not enter Sir Ellerslie, and Mr. Fowler sent Gold Pitcher to the post.

There were only four starters, including Miss Meadows, and the mare with its owner up just romped home. It was a gruelling race, and only two finished. The first time around the course Gold Pitcher led, with Nina second and Blanco third. Miss Meadows brought up the rear, close behind the leaders. Mr. Martin did not push his mount until the final half mile, when the others, both horses and riders, were nearly all in. Just entering the long stretch, he shook the mare up a little; she responded gamely, and came home easily, a length ahead of Mr. Whitney Kernochan on Nina was second. Blanco and Gold Pitcher finished in the order named, many lengths behind the other two.

Among those present were Mrs. William S. Mitchell and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. G. Pyne, Mrs. C. Suydam Schieffelin, Mrs. Charles Scribner, Jr. J. W. Burden, A. A. Fowler, Miss Edith McKeever, Miss Marie Chapin, Miss Emily Stevens, T. B. Rivers, M. Tliney, Mr. and Mrs. K. Schley, Miss M. J. Green, Mrs. Arthur Hagen, F. M. Godwin, Alexander Phillips, Sheppard Knapp, Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Schuyler Parsons, Miss Harriett Post, Benjamin Nicolls, Miss Dorothy Kissel, Mrs. Charles Fisk, Mrs. Fayette Brown of Cincinnati, Curtis Moffatt, Miss Edith Mortimer, L. BALL STARS AS RIFLEMEN.

Christy Mathewson Among Players to Go on Target Shooting Tour.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 23.—Arrangements were completed today for a trap-shooting trip of 3,500 miles to be taken by a team of four well-known baseball players composed of Christy Mathewson of the New York Nationals, Harry Davis, Philadelphia Americans, "Doc" Crandall, St. Louis Federals, and "Chief" Bender until recently with the Baltimore Federals. The ball players, all of whom are crack target shooters, will tour the large cities in the Middle West and in the East. They will shoot a match of 100 targets in eighteen cities, competing with teams of amateurs at each place. E. R. Galvin of this city will handle the business end of the trip.

The opening shoot will be held at the West End Gun Club, Richmond, Va., on Nov. 8. The closing match will take place at the Paleface Club, Boston, on Nov. 27. On Thanksgiving Day the ball players will meet a team at the New York Athletic Club grounds, New York.

At Milwaukee, where a match will be staged on Nov. 15, a banquet will be given the tourists, which the Mayor and other city and State officials expect to attend. At every city to be visited a celebration is planned.

"Chief" Berder has long been recognized as one of the best shots in the East, Mathewson, Crandall, and Davis are not far behind him. The trip is the first of the kind ever arranged.

School for Baseball Umpires.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 23.—The recommendation of School Superintendent Condon that a school for baseball umpires be established in the public schools of Cincinnati, one class for beginners and one for advanced pupils, was approved today by the Board of Education. The school will be the first of its kind in the world. The teachers will be William Hart and William Carpenter, former National League umpires. The Board of Education voted 6 for the project and 1 against. The only dissenting vote was by Member Fisk, who maintained that the project was foreign to education. President Withrow took the opposite view. He said: "It is no more foreign to education than is physical culture. Our physical culture teachers are teaching games of all kinds." Hart and Carpenter, as teachers, each will receive $3 a night.

MORRIS BEATS STUYVESANT.

Bronx School Victor, 18 to 6—Adelphi Defeats Manual Training.

Jack Weinheimer, the speedy right half back of the Morris High School football team, played a brilliant game at Lenox Oval yesterday against the Stuyvesant eleven, and was an important factor in Morris' victory by the score of 18 to 6. Whenever Morris was unable to advance through the heavy Stuyvesant line, Weinheimer was called upon, and he always responded with a gain.

Morris' first touchdown came in the first period. Weinheimer intercepted a forward pass, and ran thirty yards for a touchdown. Stuyvesant tied the score a few moments later, when Barbanes made a bad pass to Weinheimer as the latter was about to punt, and Stuyvesant recovered the ball on Morris' five-yard line. Three line plunges followed, and Samson went over for a touchdown.

Weinheimer tried three place kicks in the third period and all were unsuccessful. One of them from the forty-five yard line missed the goalpost by inches. It was in the third period that Weinheimer broke through centre and dashed eighty-five yards for a touchdown. In this same period Fogarty caught a punt on Stuyvesant's thirty-five yard line and ran through the entire Stuyvesant team for a touchdown.

After holding Adelphi Academy scoreless for the first half Manual Training High School's defense collapsed before the open game of the Academy students and were defeated 21 to 0. Adelphi started to hurl forward passes in the third period and carried the ball to Manual's ten-yard line and Ball went over for a touchdown. Another forward pass in the third period gave Higgins the ball on Manual's twenty-yard line and with an open field ahead of him he ran for a touchdown. Love recovered his own fumble in the fourth period and ran eighty-five yards for a touchdown.

Flushing's big scoring machine ran against St. John's Prep at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon and defeated St. John's 7 to 0. Flushing has rolled up big scores in every game this season. St. John's powerful defense stopped the Flushing attack, but Kennedy broke through for a touchdown in the third quarter, and after a series of line plunges carried the ball to the ten-yard line.

Bay Ridge went down to defeat before Brooklyn Prep, when A. Etzel booted a drop kick from the twenty-five-yard line, in the third period, over the Bay Ridge crossbar. De Witt Clinton defeated Yonkers High School at Yonkers, 6 to 0, and Commercial won from Erasmus Hall, 33 to 6. Hamilton Institute defeated Rutgers Prep., 14 to 0. The line-up and summaries:

QUINTARD'S ENTRY BEST IN DOG SHOW

Wireboy of Paignton, National Champion, Wins at Queensboro K. C. Exhibition.

Repeating his victory at the Westminster Kennel Club Show last February, George W. Quintard's champion wirehaired fox terrier Wireboy of Paignton captured the highest award at the first open show of the Queensboro Kennel Club, held yesterday at Schuetzen Park, Astoria, L. I., which marked the close of the open-air exhibition for 1915. The winning dog was in splendid coat and was shown to advantage. The award for the best in the opposite sex went to William M. Jones's Airedale terrier Crewe So Preferred, which had previously captured the blue ribbon in the regular Airedale class.

Although the show was not sanctioned by the American Kennel Club, it was one of the most successful of the season's open-air exhibitions, and the support given to the efforts of the members of the Executive Committee was such as to warrant an application for membership in the American Kennel Club. Nearly 300 dogs were benched in 457 classes. No points were to be allowed winners, and ribbons were the only awards in the regular classes, although the silver medals went to the "winners," and a number of trophies were presented for the special and classified divisions.

The judging began early in the morning and dusk settled over the exhibition grounds before the last of the unclassified specials had been passed upon. Many of the classes were well filled, although a number of the dogs received awards without competitions owing to the limited number of entries in certain breeds. The judging was impartial, and, on the whole, satisfactory. Here and there were found disgruntled exhibitors who failed to secure blue ribbons for their pets, but in this respect the show was no different from the usual bench displays.

Airedales are among the most popular breeds shown, and in this competition the winner in dogs was M. S. Baldwin's Leed's Performer, an importation which was shown for the first time, although it has been in this country for two years. Mr. Baldwin purchased Leed's Performer two weeks ago, which scored easily in dogs and eventually beat the winning bitch Crewe So Preferred, the best bitch in the show. Crewe So Preferred was beaten by a dog which was in fair condition, but was better in head and front.

The bull terriers were mostly of the old fighting type, being too short and thick in head. The best, however, was Dr. L. A. Van Kleeck's Lone Cedar Bill, and Charles Funk's Naia. The former was longer in head and cleaner in shoulder and little difficulty in scoring first. There was plenty of quality in the French bulldog display. F. Gordon's Monsieur D'Aubry and Miss Alberdina Vieweg's Ninnette being the best in their respective classes. Both, however, were beaten for the prize for the best in the breed, as the judge selected Miss Elsie McCormack's Sir Dandie, which was entered in the breeder's class and could not compete in the "winners" of the regular classes. Monsieur D'Aubry is a nice French bulldog, but lacks the pronounced type of Sir Dandy Pratt. Quite a few of the onlookers favored the winner of the bitches' class for the best of the breed.

In the foxterrier class Ridgewood Envoy, exhibited by Robert F. McGinness, is a useful sort of terrier, but a trifle too big although quite smart. There was little question as to the best of the Irish wolfhound class, Mr. Paignton opposed Ridgewood Envoy. Mr. Quintard's entry was in wonderful shape. There was an excellent showing of Sealyham terriers and the success of the American-bred Locust Lane Cricket, from the Locust Lane Kennels over the imported Locust Nat which was first in dogs. After the victory Locust Lane Cricket, which was successful at the Philadelphia and Newport shows, was sold for a big price. The winner is short and deep in body and displayed plenty of power.

Bulldogs led both in general interest and numbers, nearly fifty dogs of this breed being benched. The choice in dogs fell to Reuben Clark's little fawn, Dallas Magnet, with Mrs. J. N. Platt's Baron Teesdale in reserve. Howard R. Sleight's Marchioness Temple and Newstone Kennel's Lady Seaton were first and second respectively in the winner's class. Marchioness Temple was beaten in a previous class by Mrs. Darwin S. Hudson's Flagon.

Knockouts in Amateur Bouts.

The boxing ring in the New York Athletic Club gymnasium last night resembled a bowling alley, for as fast as the contestants in the Mercury Foot amateur tournament were "set up" one was knocked down and out with a punch to some vulnerable spot. Nearly all the bouts which led up to the finals resulted in knockouts, and one of the deciding contests ended in the first round through the intervention of the referee.

It will be a long time before the amateur ranks produce a more courageous youngster than Frank Thompson, a local boy, who opposed Mike Stark of the Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A. in the final bout of the 140-pound class. Beaten almost into submission in the first two rounds and going to the floor in each session, Thompson came back in the third round and beat Stark easily. The referee's decision went against Thompson, however, after the judges had disagreed.

Charles Pilkington of the Union Settlement A. C., State champion at the weight, defeated Joseph Friscella of E. R. C. 21 in three rounds in the final of the 120-pound class. In the 110-pound division Morris Hochstein of the Jerseys won from George Denetti of the Ozanam Association in three rounds, and in the deciding exhibition of the 130-pound class Charles Lennon, unattached, stopped George Schroeder of the East Side Y. M. C. A. in the first round.

Cross Knocks Out Fitzpatrick.

Leach Cross, the east side dentist, pounded Harry Fitzpatrick all over the ring for three rounds at the Broadway Sporting Club last night, and in the fourth round drove a smashing right jab to the jaw and knocked him out. The bout was fast during the short time it lasted, and Leach was going at top form. He cut Fitzpatrick's lips in the first round with his right jab to the jaw, and forced the boxing all the way. Cross inflicted lots of punishment on his adversary during the infighting, and was master at all times. Cross weighed 133 pounds and Fitzpatrick 138 pounds. Young Bruno defeated Battling Davis in a six-round preliminary. Referee Haukop stopped the Larry Murtha-Sailor Krug bout in the second round after Murtha had Krug in bad shape, and Willie Barton and Jimmie Dunn boxed six rounds to a draw.

Campi Outpoints Fitzsimmons.

Eddie Campi, the California lightweight, was entitled to the honors over Billy Fitzsimmons of Yonkers in their ten-round bout at the Fairmont Athletic Club in the Bronx last night. Johnny Fisse, a New Orleans boxer, outpointed Eddie Seiger of the Bronx in the first ten-round contest. In the last bout Tommy Touhey of Paterson easily outpointed Mike McCabe of Harlem.

Meader Outpoints Glover.

Dave Meader, the west side lightweight, last night outpointed Young Glover of Mapeth in the main ten-round bout at the Queensboro Athletic Club of Long Island. The bout between Curley O'Connor of San Francisco and Sailor Carlton, of the United States Navy, ended abruptly in the fourth session, when O'Connor landed a hard right hand blow to the jaw and sent Carlton to the floor.

SUBDUING A BALL PLAYER.

Frank Chance Tells How He Dealt with a "Fresh" Recruit.

By FRANK CHANCE.

Ball players are hard to manage. They are the hardest people on earth to "make mind," as we used to say in our school days. Of course in this case by "making mind" I mean that they are hard to make obey the disciplinary rules laid down by a manager.

While I was managing the Yankees there came to me, in the course of a trade, a young player who had been playing for several years with one of the teams in the Pacific Coast League. It just happened that I knew something about this player because my home in California is twenty-five miles outside of Los Angeles and I would meet many of the players of the Coast league when I went out from the East to spend my Winters on my orange ranch.

This fellow would not obey orders when he was in the Coast league. He was a pretty good one out there and carried things with a high hand. For instance, so it was related to me, as he walked to the plate one day, swinging his bat, the manager called him back to give him an order:

"Lay down a bunt and give this runner on first a chance to get down to second," said the manager.

"Bunt nothing, I am going to hit 'er out," argued the player.

"Lay it down—lay it down, I tell you," commanded the manager.

The player didn't say a word to this, but walked back to the batter's box. Of course, the manager thought the player would obey orders. The whole conversation had occurred with the other players sitting on the bench and listening to every word. To the manager's surprise and rage the fellow took a good, healthy swing at the first ball pitched, drove it straight into the first baseman's hands, resulting in an easy double play.

When he came walking back to the bench the manager started to "bawl him out" in the most approved way. When he got through he pointed his remarks with this final sentence:

"That little trick will cost you $50."

At that the player turned on him in a rage. He proceeded to rage in his best manner, and remarked that if any of his money was taken away he would "knock the manager's head clear off his shoulders."

Now the strange thing about this is that the manager was actually afraid of the player. The player was a .300 hitter and quite popular with the fans and the manager let him get away with his "bluff" and actually did not fine him. From that time on there was no holding this player. He did as he pleased and I guess the manager was glad to see him go up to a higher league.

When I got this fellow I promptly "laid" for him. He did not give me any of his "sass," but one day in a close game on the Polo Grounds he came into the plate "standing up" and was touched out. If he had made a hard slide he would have scored. He walked over to the bench nonchalantly.

"You should have made a slide on that play," I remarked.

"Yes, I guess I should," he replied carelessly.

"Well, it will cost you $25 for not thinking faster," I remarked. "The next time you don't think fast enough on a play of that kind it will cost you $100."

I was mad, and he knew it, and he never uttered a "peep." But that night at the hotel he came to me.

"Do you know what you have done to me?" he said, more in sorrow than in anger. "Well, you have just taken away from me several hundred gallons of gasoline or one good tire. That puts too much of a crimp in my bank roll." And he did have the whole thing figured out on paper, just how many gallons of gasoline he could buy with the $25 I had fined him.

EXETER IN WINNING FORM.

New Hampshire Collegians Defeat Yale Second Team, 27 to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

EXETER, N. H., Oct. 23.—Exeter today defeated the Yale second team by the score of 27 to 0. In the second period a twenty-yard run by Campbell enabled Kempton to score a touchdown. Three more touchdowns came with a rush in the fourth period, when after Kempton had scored Donnelly broke through for long gains and Davis contributed effective plunges, Donnelly starred for Exeter, and Captain Osborne and Jacques for Yale. Wehner's goal kicking was accurate. The line-up:

Exeter.	Position.	Yale II.
Hewatt	Left end	Nichols
Crane	Left tackle	Gault
Noyes	Left guard	Charlton
Wehner	Centre	Leisenring
Hadley	Right guard	Minton
Bramah	Right tackle	Osborn
Harvey	Right end	Deans
Kempton	Quarter back	Clark
Davis	Left half back	Bennett
Campbell	Right half back	Jacques
De Vitalis	Full back	Crocker

Touchdowns—Kempton, (2,) Donnelly, Davis. Goals from touchdowns—Wehner.

Substitutes: Exeter—Martin for Hewatt, McNamara for Crane, Greene for Harvey, Donnelly for Davis, Gage for Vitalis. Yale—Hagan for Minton, Kent for Charlton, Sallends for Gault, Bennett for Jacques, Conley for Bennett.

Umpire—Mr. Barnhelsel. Referee—Mr. Stevenson. Exeter linesman—Mr. Newton. Time of game—Ten and twelve minute periods.

Middlebury Beats New Hampshire.

MIDDLEBURY, Vt., Oct. 23.—Straight football gave the Middlebury eleven a victory over the New Hampshire State aggregation in an interesting game here this afternoon. The score was 14 to 0. Clever runs by Bowers, the Middlebury quarter back, were the feature of the game. Lamare, Keefe, and Condit also did good work for the Middlebury victory.

Worcester Academy "Comes Back."

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 23.—Worcester Academy "came back" today and defeated the Harvard freshmen by a score of 20 to 0. The Worcester team scored all its points in the first half, after which it was content to play a defensive game. The work of Read and Captain Robertson featured for Worcester.

SIX PLAYERS ENTER BALKLINE HANDICAP

First Event of Its Kind Will Be Played Here, Beginning November 15.

William F. Hoppe, Koji Yamada, George F. Slosson, George Sutton, Joseph Mayer, and Welker Cochran are the entrants for the handicap billiard tournament at 18.2 balkline, to be held in the Music Hall of the New York Theatre Building, Nov. 15 to 23, inclusive. This tournament will be the first billiard handicap of national importance ever arranged. The games will be on a basis of 500 points, with Hoppe on scratch. Excepting that the anchor spaces will be seven inches square, the rules which governed recent 18.2 championships will apply. The handicaps will be announced Oct. 31.

With Hoppe apparently invincible at all styles of balkline, championships of which have lapsed, with two 18.2, one 18.1, and one 14.1, trophies as his personal property, the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company officials considers it useless to promote more balkline tournaments in which players would have to compete on even terms. They reasoned that such events would neither stimulate billiards nor prove public attractions. Accordingly the handicap scheme was devised. Slosson and Sutton, who have been conspicuous in the list of champions, were disposed to decline the scent odds, and reluctantly consented to receive any favors the handicappers may give them.

The handicap will be arranged by a committee, which will in a measure be governed by individual handicaps, submitted upon request, by seventy prominent professionals and amateurs whose knowledge of balkline and familiarity with the records of first-class professionals qualify them to make intelligent comparisons of the relative abilities of the entrants.

Among the competitors are Joseph Mayer, who won national amateur championships at the Union League, Philadelphia, in 1913 and 1915, and Welker Cochran, now in his eighteenth year, the youngest of all aspirants for billiard honors.

"Young Jake" Schaefer and Al Taylor, both of whom are reported as performing strongly in practice, entered but were persuaded to withdraw their names. Had they not done so, a preliminary competition would have become necessary for the reason that tournament conditions limited the number of contestants to six.

William B. Huey of Chicago has terminated his career as a professional billiardist, which was brief and brilliant. When his name appeared in the list of entrants for the three-cushion championship tournament, held at Chicago from March 6 to 31, inclusive, little was known of his ability. Huey tied for first place with John Daly and George W. Moore. In the finals he won from Daly and lost to Moore, who acquired the championship. The second prize was $750 in cash. Hoping to retain amateur standing, he declined to accept the money, but permitted the Chicago roomkeepers, who managed the tournament, to present his wife with a piece of corresponding value. His entrance fee was paid by Charles Weeghman, and for that reason he contended he had no financial interest in the tournament. The Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players, however, declared him ineligible to compete in events under that organization's jurisdiction.

He had the first right to challenge for the championship but ignored it. After Alfredo de Oro had become entitled to a match with Moore for the emblem he permitted Louis Bensinger to back him to play the winner of the Moore contest. At the Music Hall of the New York Theatre Building, May 17, 18, and 19, Moore retained the championship by defeating de Oro 150 to 144. Sept. 28, 29, and 30, at the same place, Huey became champion. He won from Moore by a score of 150 to 138. Meanwhile de Oro had again challenged and was eligible to compete for the championship. Oct. 11, Huey accepted de Oro's challenge and permitted Louis Bensinger to support that acceptance with a deposit of $100. Five days later he announced that, for business reasons, he would resign his championship and return the emblem to the donors, the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company. Oct. 18 he surrendered the emblem, and it and Louis Bensinger's $100 were awarded to de Oro.

Alfredo de Oro became a retired champion Dec. 30, 1914, never having held the Lambert Trophy for twelve playing months, it became his personal property. Since that time he has twice contended for another championship, once in the tournament last March at Chicago, and again in the match with Moore at New York now, by reason of Huey's forfeiture he is again an active champion.

The Cuban expresses regret that the title and emblem have come to him by default. He says he hoped to play Huey at Chicago, believing such a match would attract large attendances and he would realise ample compensation if he won. The first player de Oro will have to compete against is August Kieckhefer, formerly of Milwaukee, now representing Louis Bensinger, of Chicago, in the Inter-State Three Cushion League, of which he was champion in 1914 and second to Ellis in 1915. Kieckhefer's challenge became effective Oct. 18, and de Oro will have to play him between Nov. 17 and 27.

While the champion has the right to name the city in which he resides for a challenge match it is possible that de Oro and Kieckhefer will oppose each other at Chicago. The roomkeepers of that city wish the match. If they offer de Oro a satisfactory inducement they will get it.

To Modify Muzzle Ordinance.

Good news for the dog lovers of New York was the text of James Gardner Rossman's speech last night at the bi-monthly meeting of the Dog Lovers' Protective Association, held at 11 East Thirty-fifth Street.

Mr. Rossman is President of the organization, and largely through his influence and the efforts of the individual members the city ordinances relative to the muzzling and leashing of dogs are to be modified. Dr. Goldwater of the Board of Health is in sympathy with the movement for less stringent regulations. He has virtually assured the members of the association that, while the ordinance that says dogs must both wear a muzzle and at the same time be on a leash is still in effect, it will not be arbitrarily enforced with the smaller breeds, or those weighing fifteen pounds or less.

The Dog Lovers' Protective Association is working in accord with the A. S. P. C. A. and the Board of Health, with the idea of having a uniform and more humane muzzle adopted for the larger breed of dogs.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—There has been no precipitation during the last twenty-four hours except over the northern districts west of the Rocky Mountains and along the portions of the South Atlantic Coast, and high pressure prevails generally over the interior districts east of the Mississippi River and in the west Gulf States. In the interior West pressure is low, with the centre of disturbance over Montana, while in the Far West it has risen decidedly.

It is much cooler in the Lake region, the Middle Atlantic States, and New England and the north districts west of the Rocky Mountains and somewhat cooler in the Northwest. Over central and southern portions of the country high temperatures continue. Fair weather will prevail Sunday and Monday east of the Mississippi River, except that rain is probable by Monday or Monday night in the Upper Lake region and the lower Ohio Valley.

It will be warmer Sunday in the upper lake region and on Monday in the lower lake region, the Middle Atlantic States, and New England.

Winds for Sunday and Monday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate to fresh northwest; Middle Atlantic Coast, diminishing northwest; South Atlantic Coast, moderate to fresh north and northeast.

FORECASTS TODAY AND MONDAY.

Western New York—Fair Sunday. Monday fair and warmer.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1914.	1915.		1914.	1915.
8 A. M.	52	50	4 P. M.	53	47
6 A. M.	48	46	6 P. M.	51	44
9 A. M.	52	48	9 P. M.	52	41
12 M.	55	40	11 P. M.	52	40

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 47; for the corresponding date last year it was 53; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 53.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 45; at 8 P. M. it was 41. Maximum temperature, 53 degrees at 1 P. M.; minimum, 40 degrees at 11 P. M. Humidity, 43 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 54 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 29.97 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.02 inches.

FORM TRADE TRUST TO HANDLE EXPORTS

Will Guarantee Belligerents Against American Goods Sold Abroad Reaching Enemies.

HAS GOVERNMENT BACKING

Unofficial, but Adequate, Redfield Says—Scheme Like Netherlands Oversea Trust.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Plans for handling the export trade of the United States through a trust company, cooperating with the Federal Government, in order to avoid interference with cargoes, were announced today by Secretary Redfield of the Department of Commerce, after a conference with Assistant Secretary Peters of the Treasury Department, Assistant Secretary Vrooman of the Department of Agriculture, and a number of exporters, Trustees of the company.

The company will be called the American Overseas Corporation, and will handle the American export business along the lines followed by the Netherlands Overseas Trust with the import business of Holland. Secretary Redfield said that, while it would in no sense be a Government organization nor be officially recognized by the Government, it would be "in close touch with various departments of the Government," whose agents would see that its operations were "impartial and neutral." This was regarded as meaning that the American Overseas Corporation would assure European Governments that no goods exported under its supervision would reach opposing belligerents.

"The object of the scheme," Secretary Redfield said, "is to secure the movement of neutral commerce under such authoritative auspices as to assure that it will not be interrupted. That part of the plan to be undertaken by the Department of Commerce, under the arrangements discussed today, would be the ascertaining by commercial attachés, commercial agents, and other officers, that the operations of the plan were strictly impartial and neutral.

"The new company would be open to assist all truly neutral American commerce to all countries with which it is to operate. The machinery would not be officially a part of the Government, and it would not be a money-making scheme. It is the voluntary action of men prominent in business in various cities of the country, seeking to secure relief for American commerce by having neutral trade conducted under the auspices of an organized responsible concern."

The company officials at the conference were headed by Max May of the Guarantee Trust Company of New York, and exporters in Philadelphia, Richmond, and Baltimore also were represented. It is understood that tentative arrangements already have been made with the Governments of Great Britain, France, and Russia. A representative of the company will go to Europe soon to complete the negotiations, now that approval of the plan has been given by Government officials here.

Counsel for the company issued this statement tonight:

Subsidiary Companies Abroad.

"The American Overseas Corporation has been organized with a view of facilitating commerce between the United States and neutral countries. The need for some such agency is evidenced by the almost complete stoppage of commerce between the United States and neutral countries as the result of war conditions.

"The underlying purpose of this corporation is to get goods into the neutral countries for neutral consumption, and, in order to assure this, subsidiary companies are being organized in the neutral countries to act as consignees and distributors for the American Overseas Corporation. No goods will be handled by the American Overseas Corporation except where assurances are given, upon which its representative can rely, that they will be confined to neutral countries, and to this end the American Overseas Corporation has sought the cooperation of the departments of the United States Government which were represented at the conference held today.

"The conference was preliminary to the beginning of operations by the corporation, and the representatives of the departments present gave assurances that they would cooperate in both the United States and neutral countries in the effort to make certain that the trade handled through the American Overseas Corporation would be entirely a neutral trade, destined to neutral countries, for consumption in neutral countries.

"The American Overseas Corporation will be in substance a forwarding corporation, but its functions will be confined exclusively to the shipment of goods to neutral countries, and the assurance of all persons interested that these goods will be absolutely confined to neutral countries will be necessary to secure its services.

"Its services will be open to all bona fide shippers, small or large, in the United States. It is not organized for profit, and, beyond its expenses, no charges will be exacted. It is hoped to prevent detentions of shipments, reduce the cost of insurance and help to establish credits which are now in abeyance."

DRILL ENCOURAGED AT WILLIAMS COLLEGE

Faculty Backs Student Battalion, but Declines to Change Curriculum.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass, Oct. 23.—Military training by the students, as long as it is kept apart from the curriculum, is an undergraduate activity that should be encouraged is the view of the Williams College Faculty with regard to the introduction of a course in military drill. This sentiment was brought to light by a canvass made of the individual members this week.

The question was brought forward by the recent formation of an undergraduate battalion of about 250 students. The students petitioned the trustees for the authorization of the battalion as a part of the curriculum, but the trustees, although they favored the encouragement of military drill as an undergraduate activity, did not believe that it had a place in the curriculum and therefore could not approve the petition. Under the direction of Captain A. H. Potter of the Adams (Mass.) militia, the students are nevertheless continuing to hold semi-weekly drills on their own initiative.

President Garfield said with regard to the advisability of introducing military training in the curriculum:

"The Trustees feel that we are not prepared to introduce a regular course in military training in the college. My own personal attitude would be to look with disfavor on such a proposal. All depends upon what the military course might replace. If it were to replace athletics, then it would be a question for the students whether they wanted athletics or military drill. There is hardly room for the two together to any extent. I think that the best way for students to get military drill is to go to Plattsburg and get experience in the manoeuvres."

Francis B. Sayre, assistant to President Garfield, expressed himself as follows: "If military drill is to be a part of the curriculum, I should say no. But if it is to be introduced as a recognized activity, I should say yes. I should not be in favor of military drill either if the students did not want it. I should like to see it take the place of some of our athletics, entered into voluntarily by the students and recognized by the Faculty."

Among the more decided expressions of opinion against the proposal was that of Professor T. C. Smith, head of the history department, who unhesitatingly said, "Certainly not!" That is not a fit subject for the curriculum. A course in military science and art might be possible, but drill is preposterous." In direct opposition to the declaration of Professor Smith were those of Professor Leverett Mears, head of the chemistry department; Dr. Walter W. McLaren, professor of economics, and E. H. Botsford, instructor in mathematics and graduate treasurer, all of whom expressed themselves whole-heartedly in favor of the proposal.

Professor C. L. Maxcy, head of the English department, said he approved of military drill but was not prepared to say that he favored its introduction in college. Although Professor J. E. Russell and Professor J. B. Pratt, both of the philosophy department, declared themselves against its introduction as a part of the curriculum, each said that he would like to see it recognized as an outside activity. Professor Russell went so far as to suggest the possibility of having an instructor for military drill. Dr. C. W. Johnson of the German department said that the State law should be so amended so as to enable the colleges to take up military training. A. H. Buffington said: "I am not in favor of adding such a course to the curriculum. I think that the craze for preparedness is overdone, and that at present the country is in less danger of war than it has been for some time. I can not see how any country in Europe can be in a position to fight us for a generation, whichever side wins."

A Three-Day Sale of Royal Kirmanshah Rugs and Carpets, Reduced ¼

WITH the Dardanelles closed, and but few choice rugs arriving in this country during the past year, this Sale is of extraordinary importance—especially as our PRESENT prices (without the ¼ reduction) are as low as or lower than can be found elsewhere for Rugs of equally fine quality.

Prices in this sale will start at $22.50 and range up to $656.25 for a magnificent carpet

A magnificent display of these Rugs has been staged on the Sixth Floor, where their rich, barbaric colorings, exquisitely blended by the skill of the Eastern weaver, can be fully appreciated.

Also—In the Domestic Rug Section—

Room-Size 9x12-ft. Axminsters, Body Brussels and Royal Wiltons at $20

Every one regularly sells at $30 to $41.50

The order has gone forth to "clear the decks" of all Rugs that we do not expect to duplicate. Wool is scarce, dyestuffs are going up, and the sources of supply of other materials have been cut. All of which means that YOU will have to pay more for your rugs in the near future—a fact which lends very special importance to this Sale.

travel from the Main Floor to the floors above or to the basement during the busiest hours of the day.

Three sets of elevators, making in all 280 trips an hour, and an escalator system running to the sixth floor—having altogether a total carrying capacity of 11,600 persons an hour, transport more than a fourth as many people daily as the Pennsylvania Railroad transports from its immense 33d Street Terminal.

There is always a point, however, at which facilities, no matter how great, reach their limit, and the times are increasing in frequency when the hosts of visitors this store attracts overtax parts of the system.

We realize there could be no better proof of the public's high esteem of Macy's than the crowds that flock to our aisles, but when these crowds congregate around the 34th and 35th Street elevators and find these units of our service incapable of expeditiously transporting the over-plus, we suggest the use of the six large elevators at the rear of the store or the escalators at the centre.

You will save time by using either.

Especially is it desirable to use the escalators if you are only going to the Second or Third Floors. The escalators are by far the quickest way of ascending on busy days.

Systematize your traveling at Macy's as you do your shopping, and the added pleasure, the convenience, and the time saved will repay you as amply in comfort as Macy prices do in economy.

An Exceptional Showing of

Sunfast Draperies

SUNFAST draperies are well-known throughout the country; the claim that sunlight does not fade them is upheld by all who have tried them. This result is obtained by special dyes that are made in Europe and in consequence, many textile manufacturers are at a loss to know how to supply the demand. Foreseeing this market condition, Macy's took care of the supply before the urgent demand came, and the result is a well-selected assortment of Sunfast Draperies—and plenty of them—at prices which cannot be rivaled.

Women's Costumes Tailleur

EVERY woman must have at least one tailor made suit in her wardrobe. It occupies a position which cannot be filled by any other costume. The following four suits are excellently tailored and carry out with faithful accuracy the newest notes in fashion.

THE CHIFFON BROADCLOTH suit illustrated at the left has a Russian blouse coat, the fullness confined at the waist by a heavy double silk cord ending in novelty fur ends. The wide velvet collar can be worn back and open or high and close. It is trimmed with real skunk, which is repeated in the fur-trimmed velvet cuffs. The skirt is a full skirt shirred at the back and sides. In navy, brown and black, for $39.75

A COPY OF A BERNARD MODEL (illustrated at the right) in Broadcloth has a medium length coat with blouse effect gathered into a uniquely shaped coat skirt, plainly tailored in front with full ripple back. The cuffs and high collar are trimmed with double bands of seal, (dyed muskrat). Colors: brown, burgundy and black, for $32.75

ANOTHER MODEL in wool velour has a short jaunty coat with a belt buttoned to the sides confining the loose back and tying in front with long ends finished with fancy fur trimmed points. Two tailored breast pockets. Collar and cuffs trimmed with skunk raccoon. The skirt is full and gathered at the belt in the back. Navy, black and brown. $26.75

THE FOURTH MODEL is of fine broadcloth especially suitable for large women. The coat has a semiblouse front gathered into a shaped yoke pointed over the hips to give a slim line. The back has a straight line extending to the bottom of the coat-skirt edge. The Coat has a high velvet collar fur-trimmed. Cuffs fur-trimmed. Semi-circular skirt. Navy, black, and brown. $26.75

FOREIGN PLAYER FIRST IN TENNIS

Miss Molla Bjurstedt Is Certain to be Placed Ahead of All American Players.

HAS HAD ONLY ONE DEFEAT

Mrs. Marshall McLean Won a Match from Norwegian Girl on a Heavy Court.

MISS WAGNER'S RANK DROPS

Loss of Indoor Championship May Take Third Place from the State Champion.

For the first time since women were ranked as tennis players a foreigner will be named as the first woman tennis player in the United States. Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the sensational Norwegian, holder of the national indoor and outdoor titles and winner of half a dozen State and sectional championships, will hold first place.

The first record of a woman's American national championship was in 1887, when Miss A. F. Hansell won the title. Four years later Miss Mabel E. Cahill of Ireland carried off the honors, and repeated in 1892. For twenty-two years American players were able successfully to oppose the efforts of foreign contestants, and it was not until last February, at the Seventh Regiment Armory, that the new European star won her first big tournament in this country. Since that time she has had an almost unbroken run of successes.

Except for a brief season preceding the national tournament for women, Miss Bjurstedt played continually from last April up to the early part of this month, and during that time she sustained but one defeat, when she plainly overtaxed her strength. Mrs. Marshall McLean, who, as Miss Helen Homans, won the national championship in 1906, was the only woman to score a victory over the Norwegian girl, accomplishing the feat in the final round of the Thousand Islands tournament. Upon that occasion the courts were very heavy from frequent rains, robbing the foreigner of one of her greatest playing assets—speed.

Before losing to Mrs. McLean, Miss Bjurstedt had vanquished her opponent in three previous tournaments. Mrs. George W. Wightman, the former Miss Hazel Hotchkiss of California, lost on two occasions to Miss Bjurstedt, first in the national championships and then in the final round of the Clay Court championship at Pittsburgh. Among the other prominent players who fell before Miss Bjurstedt were Mrs. Barger Wallach, national title holder in 1908; Miss Anne Sheafe of the Longwood Cricket Club of Boston, Miss Marie Wagner, former national indoor champion; Miss Clare Cassel, Miss Martha Guthrie, and many others.

Mrs. Frederick Schmitz, the English player, scored a victory over the Norwegian in the Morristown (N. J.) tournament early in the season, but that was after Miss Bjurstedt had strained a muscle during the match and was compelled to leave the court.

It is an open question as to the ranking of the second player on the list. Mrs. Wightman and Mrs. McLean appear to be even. The Boston player won from the West Side expert in the national championship at Philadelphia in a hard three-set match, but was unable to defeat Miss Bjurstedt, a feat that Mrs. McLean has to her credit. The latter has an enviable tournament record this year, and has defeated nearly all the best players in the East and Middle West. A comparison of the records of the two players would place Mrs. McLean second and Mrs. Wightman third.

It will be a difficult matter to include the Californians in the ranking, while Miss Martha Guthrie of Pittsburgh did not play a sufficient number of tournaments to give the members of the ranking committee an opportunity to guage her playing strength. Mrs. Thomas C. Berndy, the former May Sutton, who is on the committee with Mrs. Barger Wallach and Mrs. Benjamin F. Briggs, will probably offer some valuable information relative to the Western players and it is probable that two Californians will be included in the first ten. Of these Miss Florence Sutton is a likely selection for the fourth position on the list.

Miss Marie Wagner, the New York State champion, will likely get into the "coveted ten," although she will have a big drop from last year, when she was placed third. She lost her national indoor title to Miss Bjurstedt and was put out of the Metropolitan title play by Mrs. Wallach, but in the smaller tournament in the Metropolitan district she met with greater success and this will help to place here in the ranking list.

DARTMOUTH RUNNERS WIN.

Pennsylvania Man First at Finish in Four-Mile Race.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—Dartmouth's cross country team defeated the University of Pennsylvania over a four-mile course in Fairmount Park today 23 points to 32. Although Ralph Colton brought the Red and Blue colors home in front, Dartmouth had three runners trailing him, and this advantage gave the New England team the race.

Colton set the pace all the way and finished 150 yards ahead of Captain Tucker, who led the Dartmouth runners. Colton's time was 23 minutes 45 1-5 seconds.

SURPRISING RESULTS IN MID-SEASON FOOTBALL GAMES—HARVARD AND YALE DEFEATED

YALE SUCCUMBS TO FORWARD PASS PLAY

Elis Dazzled by Aerial Game—Washington and Jefferson Beat Blue, 16 to 7.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 23.—Instead of Yale shaking herself free from the clutches of adversity today the Eli eleven was pushed deeper into the throes of bitter disappointment by the fighting team of Washington and Jefferson. These brawny mountaineers from Pennsylvania crushed Yale under a humiliating defeat by a score of 16 to 7.

The big Yale Bowl became a cup of sorrow to 10,000 hopeful Yale folks as Bob Folwell's soldierly-drilled eleven gave the Blue team a badly needed lesson in the science of football. Individually and collectively the Yale players showed only a meagre knowledge of the game. There was not a mite of satisfaction in the one touchdown they made just as the crowd was silently leaving the game, for it was a bit of luck when Scovil picked up a fumble on Washington and Jefferson's ten-yard line and sprawled over the line.

Yale was impressively outplayed all the way, and twice when a smashing attack got working well and brought the ball a few feet from Washington and Jefferson's goal line it crumpled in a heap before the stalwart line of Quakers. It was a sad commentary on Yale's offense when Washington and Jefferson rose before them, a barricade of brawn, and held them for downs, once on the five-yard line and later a foot from the goal.

The work of two unheard-of athletes stands out boldly in Washington and Jefferson's triumph. Lloyd McCreight—"Scrubby" they call him—and Bill Stobbs, playing at fullback and quarterback, flashed a forward pass that had the Eli's hopelessly mystified. Around these two stars the Quakers formed a cordon of protection which made the play almost a certainty every time it was tried. The ball was in the air much of the time, with the Yale players making frantic, foolish attempts to reach the ball.

When W. and J. saw it was so easy to work the forward pass on Yale, they became very bold, and McCreight, Nuss, and Stobbs whirled around the Yale ends behind well-formed interference, and plowed big holes through the husky Blue forwards. Only a handful of Washington and Jefferson rooters were present to go crazy over the victory, but aided by the overjoyed substitutes, this Corporal's guard made the most of it.

It is the third year that W. and J. has given the Yale team an everlasting drubbing. Three years ago, although outplaying Yale, they got a 0-to-0 tie. Last year they won 13 to 6. Credit was given for those two performances to Johnny Speigel and Bill Fleming. With these two players gone Folwell's eleven has not been reckoned with this season. No one believed he could develop two stars to fill their boots.

Yet here Bob Folwell has them in McCreight and Stobbs. Foxy Bob has kept the real worth of these two in the dark. What for? Why, for Yale. At Washington and Jefferson are only 800 students. It is a big feather in the cap of a little college like this to bring home to the campus in the mountains a Yale scalp. It's something which keeps the college bubbling with joy during the whole college year.

Many old "grads" and scores of former football men came back to New Haven today. After the shock of the recent Summer baseball exposé, which robbed the team of Legore, they wanted to rally around the eleven and cheer it as it fought its way back to what a Yale team ought to be. They saw a team game enough and with plenty of fight, but a team which didn't know much football. Scovil is a massive line smasher and he gained a lot of ground, but it wasn't the result of any consistent system of attack or concerted team play. Yale seemed crude even in fundamental football compared with this team from Washington and Jefferson, so perfectly schooled in a type of game which stood out because of its versatility and speedy execution.

The surprising part of Yale's downfall was the lack of generalship. Both times when Yale had the Pennsylvanians staggering under a hammering attack right under their goal posts the hesitancy and slow judgment of Captain Wilson deprived Yale of at least two touchdowns.

The first shock came to Yale in the first quarter, when effective line rushing by Scovil, Smith, and Neville brought the ball to W. and J.'s 5-yard line. From a kick formation Scovil and Smith were hurled into the line four times in succession. The play was so evident that the Washington and Jefferson giants were welded like a wall when the Blue line plungers struck, and they failed to gain.

This unlooked-for stand by W. and J. gave them much courage, and in the next period they got close enough to Yale's goal to permit Moser to kick a goal from placement from the 30-yard line. A merry whirl of forward passes carried the Pennsylvanians to the 20-yard line in the third period, when Nuss made a beautiful zig-zag run diagonally across the field, eluding all the Yale tacklers until he dashed over the line for a touchdown. Washington and Jefferson made another touchdown in the last period, when the irrepressible McCreight hurled a forward pass 25 yards to Heyman, who was waiting eagerly for it in the forward pass zone.

It was surprising that a team of Yale's drilling and coaching could be so easily outwitted on a forward-pass play. Their alarming failure to follow the ball was costly. Fundamental sense to solve their opponents' play was lacking. A novice team was never more dazed or fooled by aerial football.

It wasn't until after the Pennsylvanians had held Yale for downs on the 5-yard line that they uncovered their forward pass. Then it began to shoot from McCreight to Stobbs, with an occasional variation by Moser to Heyman. In this way the W. & J. team got to the 25-yard line. They used a fake kick formation, with a forward pass to follow, but Yale discovered this in time to prevent it. Moser's first real attempt at a place kick fell short.

Just after the start of the second period Washington and Jefferson was unable to gain, so Heyman punted. It was a poor punt and was caught by Neville, who fumbled. W. and J. recovered the ball, and on the next play McCreight raced 40 yards down the field to a touchdown. There was a penalty before the play started, the whistle blowing, and the ball was brought back, much to Washington and Jefferson's disappointment. The Quakers were very much disappointed, because they had this same experience on Yale Field two years ago, and would have beaten Yale at that time had it not been for the penalty.

Yale's best performance of the day came in the second period. After Moser had tried another kick from placement from the 30-yard line and the ball fell short, it was caught by Smith, who rushed it back ten yards before he was thrown. Then Yale began a series of rushes which showed that there was some real power behind the team. Scovil tore through the W. & J. line for 18 yards in two mad rushes. Then little Waite, weighing only 150 pounds, wriggled his way through the husky line of Quakers for the best Yale run of the day, 20 yards. Waite got 5 more around the end and it was Yale's ball on the visitors' 25-yard line. Scovil couldn't be stopped and he jammed through for 10 yards and Smith and Waite by plunges off tackle brought the ball to W. & J.'s four-yard line.

A mighty plunge by Waite and another by Scovil brought the ball one foot from the Washington and Jefferson goal line. It looked like a sure score for Yale, but Captain Wilson got the next play off slowly and the Quakers were all ready to receive Scovil when he made his next plunge. It was the last down and the ball was surrendered to the enemy.

Then the Pennsylvanians became very bold. Instead of kicking out of danger from their one-yard line they began to rush the ball and carried it to the 10-yard line before they were forced to kick. Then Heyman booted the ball 50 yards to Smith in midfield.

When the first half ended the score of the Cornell-Harvard game was announced and Yale sent up a mighty cheer. It was the only chance they had to cheer lustily all day. Yale was completely outplayed in the third and fourth periods and the forwardpass manipulation of McCreight and Stobbs worked beautifully nearly every time it was used. It brought the visitors within the 25-yard line, where Nuss's zig-zag run resulted in a touchdown, and, in the last period, a 25-yard fling by McCreight was caught by Heyman over the line for a touchdown. McCreight tosses the football with just the same skill as Merrillatt of the Army and Dorias of Notre Dame. His direction and distance in hurling the ball are perfect.

The disappointment of Yale's showing was very evident in the last period, when the crowd began to hurry from the game. They had seen enough. It is predicted in New Haven tonight that there will be a general overhauling of the football department within a short time. The team is worse than even the coaches suspected.

Three Spills in Windsor Races.

WINDSOR, Conn., Oct. 23.—The five days' racing at Sage Park closed this afternoon with four extra-heat races, during which occurred three exciting spills. No drivers were seriously injued. A cold wind kept the crowd down to a scattering few. Margaret O captured the feature event, the 2:18 pace, in six heats.

Jersey Schools Beat in Meet.

St. Benedict's School of Newark was the victor in the interscholastic meet for the championship of New York and New Jersey at Newark yesterday. She made a score of 32 points. Her closest opponent, the Central High School of Newark, made 27 points. The De Witt Clinton High School made 57 points, and Morris High was next, with 74.

CORNELL'S PUNCH DEFEATS HARVARD

Haughton's Team Slow, Stupid, and Generally Weak Against Well-Drilled Ithacans.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 23.—For the first time in the history of football the Cornell eleven lowered Harvard's colors this afternoon in the stadium, the Ithacans, who were trained to the minute, outplaying Haughton's team, which went to pieces very early under the strain of meeting its opponent's superior play. The Ithacan's goal line was in danger only once, and then they took the ball awal from Harvard on downs.

Al Sharpe's well-conditioned and most aggressive team not only won the game, 10 to 0, but besides scoring a field goal drove a hard punch under the Crimson's belt in the first three minutes of play. Almost immediately after the kick-off Captain Mahan fumbled the ball on his own twenty-five-yard line, and Shelton, the Cornell left wing, fell upon it. Then, with an attack which Harvard could not stop, the Ithacans drove straight up the remainder of the field and through the Harvard rushers for a touchdown. This advance was not a slow one, but gains of five and even seven yards were ripped off, and then, after Harvard had been penalized for offside play, Captain Barrett sidestepped through a big hole on the Harvard left wing and scored.

The goal that followed put Cornell seven points to the good, but it was not until the beginning of the fourth quarter that she made the game absolutely safe. Almost at the end of the game the Ithacans received a short kick at midfield and in five plays drove Harvard back to its 32-yard line. Here the Crimson held, but Shiverick, who was all-powerful for Cornell today, immediately produced a field goal, beautifully kicked from Harvard's 38-yard line.

Cornell had something on Harvard all afternoon. The teams gained approximately 150 yards each by means of their running attack, Harvard's quota being increased by one successful forward pass. At the same time Harvard, although it once made a 40-yard journey up the field, had not the power to continue, while, when its best opportunity came, the Cornell team had a real punch to deliver, and came through with it with a vengeance. Cornell's rush line was superior to Harvard's in almost every respect in the early moments of the game, and these were the moments that counted. After its first advance, Cornell could not approach Harvard's goal nearer than 30 yards, but from such points four attempts were made for field goals, one counting, one being blocked, and the other two shots going wide.

Cornell fumbled constantly, both in its rushing game and on kicks, but Harvard had far less keenness for the ball than in any game played under the Haughton régime, and only once all afternoon was the free ball seized upon by the Crimson contingency. In fact, the Crimson blocked four of the visitors' kicks, but only once recovered the ball, and this happened in midfield.

In the first half, and after the Ithacans had scored, Harvard got its attack running and covered a stretch of nearly forty yards. This big gain was helped out by a fifteen-yard penalty against Cornell because a substitute did not report after Captain Barrett had been hurt stopping a mad rush by Ned Mahan of Harvard. The Crimson had the ball on Cornell's thirty-three-yard line, but on a fourth down and with only half a yard to go, Mahan was unable to drive through Cornell's left wing, Jameson throwing him back for a loss and the visitors taking the ball on downs.

Right here Harvard passed up the best chance it had to tie up the game. When Shiverick punted the entire Harvard line came through, the ball being blocked and shooting out to Soucy, the Crimson's left end. But Soucy was not quick enough to get the ball, trying to pick it up instead of falling on it, and in the general melée Schlichter dove into the scramble and got the ball for Cornell. Shortly after this Harvard gained a little past midfield, but was stopped short on Cornell's 35-yard line, where Shiverick nipped Mahan, who was trying to sweep around the end on a fake forward pass play. This happened early in the second period, and for the remainder of the game the Crimson only twice passed the middle of the field, there being a flash of power shown in the third period when the Crimson advanced to Cornell's 25-yard line, where Collins of Cornell caught Mahan's forward pass on his 10-yard line. The other time was at the end of the game, the final whistle sounding just as the Harvard men had carried the ball across the halfway mark on a line play following its one successful forward pass of the game—one which Harte took from Mahan.

The Cornellians followed the ball in a wonderful fashion and made the breaks of the game come their way. They played only straight football. After their touchdown, which was fairly earned, the New Yorkers did not make much headway by rushing, getting their chances for field goals mainly because of their superior excellence in the kicking game and because of Harvard's inability to hang onto the ball. Barrett, and later Schriver, both outkicked Mahan, in spite of the punts that were blocked, and toward the end of the game Schriver made two kicks from behind his own goal line which were the equal of any defensive kicks ever seen in football.

Cornell was heavier than Harvard and was far better drilled. The ends were very fast and it was due to the fine open field work of Shelton and Eckley that Mahan did not break loose for any of the long runs for which he is so famous.

It was a game the Cornell team was entitled to win on the merits of its play, but Harvard, having chances to at least get a tie score, had little to feel happy about because of its erratic handling of the ball. Mahan had an off day and this hurt Harvard more than anything else. He fumbled three times and his first miscue opened the way for the Ithacans' first score. Line-up:

Cornell.	Position.	Harvard.
Shelton	Left end	Soucy
Jameson	Left tackle	Gilman
Miller	Left guard	Dadmun
Cook	Centre	Wallace
Anderson	Right guard	Cowen
Gillies	Right tackle	Parson

Wolverines Lose to Aggies.

ANN ARBOR, Mich, Oct. 23.—The Michigan Agricultural College defeated the Wolverines, 24 to 0, this afternoon. Jerry De Prato, the Aggies' full back, was the star of the game. He scored a field goal and two touchdowns besides kicking all three goals following the touchdowns. Maulbetsch, University of Michigan's great plunger, was unable to display his usual ability, the visitors' forwards ripping the Wolverine line to pieces before Yost's backs could get started. The poor physical condition of the university players also was shown in the large number of men injured. M. A. C. rooters, 3,000 strong, paraded the field after the game, and tonight a big demonstration was under way as the result of the decisive victory. The line-up:

Michigan.	Positions.	M. A. C.
Berton	Left end	Butler
Watson	Left tackle	Smith
Millard	Left guard	Vandervoort
Horton	Centre	Frimodig
Cochran, (Capt.)	Right guard	Straight
Reimann	Right tackle	Blacklock
Whalen	Right end	Henning
Reehm	Quarter back	Hueber
Maulbetsch	Left half back	Miller, (Capt.)
Eberwein	Right half back	H. Miller
Bastian	Full back	De Prato

Score by periods: M. A. C., 3, 7, 0, 14—24. Referee—Mr. Hackett, Army. Umpire—Mr. Holderness, Lehigh. Field judge—Mr. Haynes, Yale. Head linesman—Mr. Lynch, Brown. Time of periods—Fifteen minutes each. M. A. C. scoring: Touchdowns—De Prato (2,) Blacklock. Goals from touchdowns—De Prato (3.) Goal from field—De Prato. Substitutes—Michigan, Rehor for Reimann, Catlett for Eberwein. Raymond for Bastian; M. A. C., Beatty for B. Miller, Springer for Huebel.

One Football Cornell Didn't Bag.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 23.—The Princeton soccer team defeated Cornell here today in the opening game of the intercollegiate season by a score of 1 to 0. Bird made the goal for Princeton.

COLUMBIA'S FIRST GAME A HUMMER

Celebrates Football Revival by Defeating St. Lawrence by 57 to 0.

Columbia celebrated its restoration of football yesterday and resumed its place among athletic colleges when the Blue and White boys overwhelmed eleven lads from St. Lawrence University by a score of 57 to 0. It was a rosy re-entry to the sport that was abolished just ten years ago.

That Columbia wants football there is no doubt. About 3,500 graduates and alumni said so in no uncertain tones yesterday. The South Field echoed and re-echoed with shouts and songs. Columbia's student band blared its welcome to the players in a continuous performance of student airs, while 1,500 students in the cheering section sang cheerily and merrily, starting a half hour before the game, in spite of the biting north wind which swept across the field.

President Nicholas Murray Butler and his wife and party and a large section of the Faculty were there to lend their approval to the opening game of the season, and as the Columbia boys rolled up their score these spectators became as enthusiastic as the undergraduates.

Faculty dignity was forgotten for the moment, and a sure-enough college spirit bubbled and gurgled and seethed until all joined in the ear-piercing and backbone bracing college battle cry of "C-o-l-u-m-b-i-a, 'rah, 'rah, 'rah," with as much energy as did the oldest alumnus, sans teeth, sans hair, and sans everything but the college spirit and a good pair of lungs, or the most lamblike of the Freshies. The situation was one that warmed the blood, waked the dormant sporting spirit that lies not far under the surface in every healthy young man, and gave promise of a renewal of that love of competitive and combative sport that once made Columbia as well known in the field of clean amateur sport as it always has been in the higher field of learning. It was a good omen for the future of that phase of student life that so appeals to the majority of undergraduates and helps create an abiding love for Alma Mater.

Only Four Weeks' Practice.

With but four weeks of training, it was not to be expected that Columbia would show the sort of football which makes a team a candidate for championship honors. But the thirty-five youngsters who were in moleskin, and a majority of whom had a chance to get into the scrimmages during the progress of the catastrophe to St. Lawrence, showed that they had at least absorbed the rudiments of straight football and had learned how to handle themselves on the field. They weer a credit to their coach, T. Nelson Metcalfe, and their Captain, F. M. Symonds, Jr., who was out of the line-up owing to injuries received during practice.

The management had shown excellent judgment in selecting a team not away beyond their abilities as practical novices at the game for opponents in their first appearance. A victory over even a minor team was the sort of thing needed to nurse the Columbians along to greater achievements in the sport. The creation of self-confidence means a whole lot.

The fact that they so easily defeated St. Lawrence, though, will hardly create over-confidence. The Columbia boys have a whole lot to learn about the game. Their coaches know it, and undoubtedly they tell the players that when there comes there comes the heart to heart talk over the game. It probably would have been a very different story had they been pitted against a team their equal in weight, and up in interference and the defensive arts of the game. Man for man, the Columbia men outweighed their opponents. St. Lawrence played the open game almost exclusively in consequence, while Columbia was prepared only for the old-fashioned straight football, and found that they had to meet a game for which they had not been particularly drilled. So there was a whole lot of hesitancy, and the frequent imposition of penalties for holding and off side play must have aggregated, in all, about twice the length of the field.

Littauer, Donoho, and Miller starred in the line plunging and ground gaining for the Columbia boys, and Chilton, the tawny-haired end; Gardner, and Hayden figured prominently in what aggressive playing St. Lawrence did. The mountaineers were on the defensive most of the time, and were so weak in the line that they constantly resorted to the forward pass or to punting to overcome the stubborn offensive of the Columbia line, which held remarkably well and stubbornly, thanks in great part rather to its excess in weight than superior skill. Donoho kept the Columbians wildly cheering with half a dozen spectacular runs, one of them for 51 yards, and he and Healy starred in the two forward passes which the Columbians carried through successively and spectacularly. These contributed to touchdowns which almost immediately followed.

Touchdown in Three Minutes.

Columbia was first on the field, to the tune of "Good Old Blue and White Will Fix You," in which singers and band joined, and three minutes after play was called Littauer had made the first touchdown. Columbia's hopes than ran high, but wilted a bit at the end of the first period, for that solitary 6 to 0 was the only evidence of the superiority of their team. But before the half was over touchdown began to follow touchdown with monotonus regularity, until at the end of the half the score stood 31 to 0 in favor of the Morningside boys, and the team from the Adirondack region was plainly winded.

It was only in the latter half that the St. Lawrence boys had anything like a chance to score, and then their chance was killed by the fact that Chilton, after a pretty run of two-thirds the length of the field, went out of bounds on the 20-yard line by about a foot in dodging Healy, and his touchdown failed to count. When the ball was put into play an unlucky fumble gave the ball to Columbia, Miller punted it out of danger; and all chance for the mountaineers to escape a whitewash vanished. They had little spirit left after that and were unable to prevent Columbia from scoring almost at will before they left the field with that awful 57 to 0 staring them in the face from the score board, the worst defeat they have had this season. The line-up:

Columbia.	Position.	St. Lawrence.
Healey	Left tackle	Earley
Kennedy	Left guard	Scribner
Brown	Centre	Osgood
Cleveland	Right guard	Haten
Wilbur	Right tackle	Morgan
Buermeyer	Right end	Corcoran
Miller	Quarter back	Hayden
Wadleton	Left half back	Noble
Mansbach	Right half back	Reynolds
Littauer	Full back	Gardner

Touchdowns—Littauer (5,) Donoho (2,) Miller, Wilbur. Goals—Miller (3.)

Substitutions—Columbia, Donaldson for Cleveland; Donoho for Mansbach; Van de Water for Kennedy, Noble for Brown, Reeder for Buermeyer, Fairfield for Calder, Brown for Noble, Elmer for Fairfield, McCreery for Healey, Rosen for Littauer, Bale for Reeder; St. Lawrence, Ford for Hayden; Stone for Osgood.

Referee—Mr. Crowley of Bowdoin. Umpire—Mr. Farrier of Dartmouth. Head linesman—Mr. Hennessy of Brown.

WOULD O. K. SUMMER BALL.

Yale May Lead Movement for Making Rules Less Stringent.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 23.—It is predicted here among those close to the athletic authorities that, before next Spring, Yale may suggest some action among the larger colleges regarding the Summer baseball question. The student body, as a whole, is not in favor of rules which make possible a condition such as the one which has just barred some of the Blues' best players. According to the understanding between the colleges, however, this was the only course to take. This is admitted.

The movement which may be started before another baseball season will result, it is hoped, in an understanding among the colleges meaning nothing more or less than sanctioning Summer ball. That many collegians play every Summer is generally admitted. Even if many of them do not violate the letter of the present rule, they violate the spirit.

The present rule is not popular, and it is believed here that many colleges would sanction Summer ball if some one would take the initiative in the movement. Much opposition is sure to come from the National Collegiate Athletic Association, an organization which has vigorously opposed Summer ball. Yale, however, is one of the few institutions which does not belong to this organization.

If this radical action is started the response will be general, it is expected for many universities approve Summer baseball, but have been silent on the question. It is also sure to receive stubborn opposition from many quarters.

VICTORY FOR AMHERST.

Touchdown in Last Period Seals Wesleyan's Fate.

Special to The New York Times.

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 23.—A touchdown in the fourth quarter of an uphill game gave Amherst a 10 to 6 victory over Wesleyan on Pratt Field today. A drop kick by Tow of Amherst started the scoring, but Wesleyan then made a touchdown and six points. There was no more scoring until the last period, when Goodrich picked up Harmon's fumble and with a clear field ran twenty yards for a touchdown. Goodrich and Deetjen, opposing half backs, were the backfield stars, both making several long runs. Wesleyan excelled in interference while the Amherst line held like a wall.

Although marred by several costly fumbles, the game was fast and well played. Amherst scored after the first kick-off without surrendering the ball. A thirty-yard run by Goodrich, followed by shorter gains brought the ball to Wesleyan's 14-yard line. Three tosses made another first down impossible. Tow tried a drop kick and the ball went through between the posts. After the kick-off and an exchange of kicks Tow tried another field goal from the 35-yard line, but failed.

In the second quarter Wesleyan scored their six points. With the ball on Amherst's 25-yard line, twelve yards by Deetjen and shorter gains gave Wesleyan two first downs, and Deetjen went over the line for a touchdown. The try for goal failed. In the same period an attempted drop kick by Eustis from the 35-yard line failed.

In the final period Knowlton recovered a fumble for Amherst on Wesleyan's forty-yard line. A forward pass was intercepted by Deetjen twenty yards from his goal line, but on the next play Goodrich picked up a fumble by Harmon and, with a clear field, ran twenty yards for a touchdown. Rider kicked the goal.

Tow tried another drop kick but failed and after three first downs the game ended with Amherst in possession of the ball on Wesleyan's forty-yard line. The lineup:

Amherst.	Position.	Wesleyan.
Goodridge	Left end	Hallock
Knowlton	Left tackle	Gordon
Hobart	Left guard	Talbot
Widmayer	Centre	Eustis
Downer	Right guard	Young
Ashley	Right tackle	Wilkinson
Marks	Right end	Boswell
Tow	Quarter back	Peck
Taber	Right half back	Harmon
Rider	Full back	Crafts

Touchdowns—Goodrich, Deetjen. Goal from touchdown—Rider. Goal from field—Tow. Substitutions: Amherst—Matthews for Marks; Wesleyan—Hughes for Gordon, Wooley for Wilkinson, Slocum for Peck, Peck for Slocum, Hookey for Crafts, Crafts for Hookey. Referee—Tom Thorpe, Columbia. Umpire—Mr. Luring, Princeton. Head linesman—Mr. Jones, Haverford. Time—Four quarters of fifteen minutes each.

De Witt Clinton Leads at Soccer.

De Witt Clinton jumped into the lead in the High School Soccer League series by defeating Boys' High by 2 goals to 1 yesterday at Crotona Athletic Field. De Witt Clinton took the lead with 7 points. Curtis and Erasmus are tied for second place, with 6 points each. At half time De Witt Clinton led by 2 goals to 0, as a result of two successful shots by Parotti and Fitzpatrick. Lipschuetz, the Boys' High captain, scored from penalty in the second period. A high wind interfered with good combination work.

White Autos Win Amateur Game.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—Eight runs on eight hits in the seventh inning won the second game of the world's amateur baseball series today for the White Autos of Cleveland, Ohio, from the South Tacoma (Wash.) Tigers. The score was 8 to 0.

GEORGETOWN LOSES; SHOWS ROWDY SPIRIT

One Player Bites West Point Cadet, Another Is a Slugger—Both Banished.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 23.—In a game which was marred by unnecessary roughness and frequent penalties for infractions of the rules, the Army beat Georgetown today by a score of 10 to 0. The Cadets showed a decided improvement over their playing of a week ago, the linemen doing especially fine work. Although the Army was handicapped by the loss of several star players, Ford and Coffin of the backfield and Meacham and Parker of the line being on the side lines on account of injuries, they outplayed the collegians from start to finish. Mitchell of the Army and Gormley and Leighty of Georgetown were ruled off the field for rough play.

Georgetown was twice penalized half the distance to its goal line for rough playing. In the last quarter Gormley bit McEwan's arm, and just as the whistle sounded ending the fray Wall of Georgetown slugged Goodman, the Army's substitute centre.

The Cadets got a touchdown in the second quarter on a magnificent drive from midfield, Oliphant, Walker, and Hoge carrying the leather fifty yards without losing it, Oliphant finally being shoved over the line from the five-yard mark for the score. The doughty Westerner kicked a goal, and again toward the end of the last period booted a goal from placement, with Murrill holding the ball on the thirty-five-yard mark. Gilroy, Georgetown's star halfback, was hurt early in the second period. While he was in the game he distinguished himself by several good gains on long runs. The Army lost forty yards on penalties, while Georgetown was penalized six times for a total of eighty-five yards. McEwan, until his injury, played his usual stellar game, being all over the field and making some spectacular tackles. Captain Weyand, Neyland, and Jones all did splendid work for the Army. The victory today pleased followers of the Army team, especially when it is remembered that Georgetown beat the Navy a fortnight ago. Georgetown's ends were good, the Cadets being balked in their attempts to get around Cusack and Corcoran. The Army tried the forward pass three times without success. Georgetown's one pass was completed, but it followed a penalty on the last down and failed to make up the required distance. Lineup:

Army.	Position.	Georgetown.
Jones	Left tackle	Weed
O'Hare	Left guard	Mahlum
McEwan	Centre	Fitzgerald
Holmes	Right guard	Barron, Capt.
Weyand, Capt.	Right tackle	Gormley
Britton	Right end	Corcoran
Murrill	Quarter back	Maloney
Mitchell	Left half back	Gilroy
Oliphant	Right half back	Wall
Hoge	Full back	Leighty

Touchdown—Oliphant. Goal from touchdown—Oliphant. Goal from placement—Oliphant. Time of quarters—Ten minutes each. Referee—W. F. Okeson of Lehigh. Umpire—E. S. Land of Navy. Head linesman—H. R. Hennage of Dartmouth. Substitutions. Army—Goodman for McEwan, Walker for Mitchell. Georgetown—O'Connor for Gormley, Hanlon for Gilroy, Supple for Hanlon, Dewhurst for Leighty.

DARTMOUTH MAKES POOR SHOWING AGAINST PRINCETON—FORDHAM WINS FROM HOLY CROSS

PRINCETON CRUSHES DARTMOUTH, 30 TO 7

Tigers Shatter Hanoverians' Attack Quickly—Substitutes Finish the Game.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 23.—Jungletown may sing with more confidence tonight its song of "Old Nassau," for the Tiger has stretched his limbs, sharpened his claws and struck one blow that makes him seem a mighty contender in football, no matter who may be his next opponent. But as Princeton sings Dartmouth is enveloped in gloom. It was the Hanover men who this afternoon braved the New Jersey eleven and felt the sting of those repeated blows which the Tiger rained upon them. Baffled in the attack and which was shattered against the Tigers, Dartmouth was crushed under a score of 30 to 7, which, on Princeton's side, is next to the largest that was ever made against the team from Hanover.

What the score might have been had Coach Rush kept all of his regulars in the game is one of the things that finds no solution, but certainly after the first half the Tigers were not trying to roll up a big score. Substitutes were rushed on the field until in the final quarter it was almost another eleven that was representing Princeton. It was in this last period that there came the slight consolation which Dartmouth men can glean from the defeat. With second string men opposed to them the Hanover players made their one struggle that counted and even then the touchdown which resulted had all of the elements of an accident. This fact, however, does not rob Dartmouth of the credit of the performance.

For years it has been the custom to measure Princeton's ability by her showing against the Hanover team, and nearly all of the battles of the past have furnished stirring contests that brought out every bit of reserve force that the Tiger eleven possessed. Even though there was the report that Dartmouth was not so strong this year, still at was believed that Princeton would be pressed to win. But how different were the actual conditions. The test still was there. No one may say that Dartmouth has not a good eleven, but as for drawing out Princeton's reserve, it added little to previous games. There was ever the impression that the Tigers were holding back whatever they might have of new plays, and the type of game was not one designed to run up big totals.

What won for Princeton was, as in the past, better generalship, and tonight Princeton pays homage to no individual player on the team more than to Captain Glick. He drove the men, directed their attack, and the others executed his orders faithfully. Princeton resorted to a punting game, and Driggs far outshone Gerrish. He displayed by far the better judgment and his kicks shot out for a distance that was uniformly excellent.

When the game started a strong wind was blowing from the north that swept a chill blast across Palmer Stadium. Princeton won the toss, and for the first quarter punted with the wind, and on every exchange, of which there were many, the ball went further into Dartmouth territory, so that Tibbott was able to drive in over the crossbar for two goals from the field that scored the first of the points that were to humble Dartmouth. But Gerrish of Dartmouth was not wise. He punted well, but drove his kicks high against the wind, and they were whipped back for loss of distance that proved fatal. On the other hand, Driggs had learned something by the errors of his opponents. When the quarters changed he profited by this knowledge learned through the failure of Gerrish, and sent his punts sailing low over the field, some of them out of bounds, and some so that they just stayed inside the lines. In this way Driggs gave his teammates assistance.

It was the defense of Princeton, however, that turned back Dartmouth, bruised and broken, and the men seemed almost discouraged after the first quarter had been played. Gerrish, Thielscher, and Duhamel hurled themselves at the Tigers with desperate resolve, but it was to little avail. Princeton would not give way. The Tiger line was playing with a wonderful confidence, and repeatedly the men broke through, smothering plays before they were fairly started. In all of the first half Dartmouth, fighting, as she began to realize, against an irresistible force, was able to make only first downs.

But Princeton was having no ease in the attack against her opponent. The Tigers' offense was set back often, but the men were alert, agile followers of the ball, and that counted against the Hanover men, who played a strange game at times. One feature which caused astonishment was the manner of receiving punts. It was seldom that the kick was caught, it being allowed to follow its own course as it bounded down the gridiron, and, of necessity, cost Dartmouth many yards of territory, and several times dangerously imperiled Dartmouth's goal.

If it is fair to pick out one man from a team that was fighting so as one unit as Princeton, Dave Tibbott stands out alone. He buffeted the Dartmouth line more successfully than any other of the Princeton backs. He struck with a ferocity that gained many yards, but the attack could not consistently be maintained. But more than anything else he gained fame for his drop kicking. Perhaps Princeton has discovered another Brickley to wear this time the Orange and Black. Tibbott's two field goals in the first period were beautiful. Both were attempted from nearly the same point on the field, about the 43-yard line, and each sailed as true as if it had been guided by some invisible force. If there had been fear in the hearts of any of the Princeton students before the game these two goals, coming in quick succession, dispelled it forever, for the Tiger fans feasted on the anticipation of victory in a contest which has come to rank second to those with Yale and Harvard, which are rated about equal. And those points undeniably must have had a dampening influence on the ardor of Dartmouth. Touchdowns a team can stand better than the field goals which come unforeseen many times, as they did today, striking with defeat a team that until the moment of the kick had been in no particular danger.

To the spectators it looked as if one legitimate touchdown had been taken from Princeton. At the opening of the third quarter, Driggs had just sent one of his long punts sailing down into Dartmouth territory and following the plan of handling punts, there was no effort made to catch the ball. The Dartmouth men followed along after it as it rolled to their thirteen-yard line, and then one of them fell on it. It slipped out from under his arm, shot across the line and in an instant Hogg had fallen on the ball. But the referee had not seen that a Dartmouth man touched the leather, and the score was not allowed. But Princeton was not to be denied her touchdown. A penalty of ten yards was inflicted against Dartmouth, and the ball was then on her three-yard line. Gerrish punted out and Dave Tibbott caught the leather. He tucked it beneath his arm and then made the one thrilling run that the game furnished.

The ball had come to him on Dartmouth's thirty-seven-yard line and he dashed across the field, pursued by two Dartmouth men, with the other members of the team following. Driggs had given him his first interference, but he was quickly left behind, and Tibbott sped on alone. One of the Hanover men hurled himself at Tibbott, and a straight arm dropped him to the ground. The same was true of the second man who attempted a tackle a moment later, and Tibbott crossed the goal line and kicked the goal, so that it made the score 20 to 0.

Aside from this one instance the spectacular was entirely absent from the game, barring one or two forward passes, and there was no profusion in this style of play. Dartmouth had been heralded as a team that would play open football, but it did just the opposite. During the last minutes of the contest the forward pass was brought into play, but it was not a perfected method of attack. Most of the passes were short and failed of completion. However, the only Dartmouth tally started with a forward pass.

In the final quarter the Hanover men rushed the ball more than 100 yards. Two drives toward Princeton's goal were stopped and the third also had been halted when Dartmouth tried one more pass. Gerrish shot the leather to one of his teammates, but it bounded off the hands of a Princetonian who attempted to intercept the ball, and Glie of Dartmouth secured it. He crossed the few remaining yards for Dartmouth's touchdown, being tackled just too late to stop the tally.

Princeton made the first touchdown in the second quarter and this time it was a forward pass by Princeton that brought the tally. When the quarter started the ball was in midfield. Driggs booted a beatiful kick against the wind that went out of bounds on Dartmouth's eight-yard line. Gerrish punted, but the ball was called back and then a fake kick formation was tried, but Highley broke through and downed Gerrish on Dartmouth's one-yard line. Gerrish then punted to Tibbott, who ran the ball back to Dartmouth's twenty-seven yard line. Plunges gained some distance and then Driggs shot a forward pass to Highley, the best of the game, and the latter went over the line for the tally.

Tibbott's run gave the first touchdown in the next quarter, and near the close another was added, this due to the carelessness of Dartmouth men in handling punts. Two forward passes by Princeton failed on Dartmouth's forty-three-yard line, and Driggs punted. The ball touched Holbrook and then bounced over the line, Hogg falling on it for Princeton's final touchdown.

The last points of the game were added by Law, who went in for Driggs in the final quarter. Gerrish punted from near his own goal line, and Blake, one of Princeton's substitutes, signaled a fair catch on Dartmouth's thirty-eight-yard line. Law kicked the goal from placement. The line-up:

NAVY IN 20 TO 0 VICTORY.

Weight of Sailors Crushes Eleven of Virginia Polytechnic.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 23. — The weight of the eleven of the Naval Academy permitted the Sailors to crush Virginia Polytechnic in a 20 to 0 defeat here today. Until the second half the Navy had not approached its opponent's goal line. They had to fight hard to prevent the Virginia eleven from scoring.

It was after Powell, half back and punter, had been retired that the visitors began to weaken. The Sailors then made one score. This was followed in the second period of the last half by two more, partly due to costly fumbles by the Virginia backs. The line-ups:

Naval Academy.	Position.	Va. Polytechnic.
Kenworthy	Left end	Gregory
Ward	Left tackle	Benedick
Goodstein	Centre	Henderson
Smith	Right guard	Parrish
Gilman	Right tackle	Caffee
Harrison	Right end	Hall
Miles	Quarter back	Dixon
Westphal	Left half back	Funkhouser

Wisconsin Downs Ohio.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 23.—Wisconsin defeated Ohio State on the gridiron this afternoon by the score of 21 to 0. Ohio's open attack was slightly effective, but Wisconsin's was even better. Wisconsin's first touchdown was made in the third quarter, when Byers circled end. Simpson kicked the goal. Two additional touchdowns were scored by Wisconsin in the final period. The first was made when Byers ran through the Ohio team, and the second when Stavrum pulled down a pretty pass from Byers and carried it over the line. Simpson kicking the goal.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH OUR ATHLETES?

What Has Made "Amateur Standing" a Mere Myth of the Rule Books?

This Autumn cleaning in the amateur athletic household comes at an opportune time. Friends of James E. Sullivan, for so many years Secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, are now arranging for a memorial to his lifelong work of making amateur sport clean, and keeping it clean. It was for the suppression of that which Kiviat and Smith have been found guilty and for which Yale athletics has recently dropped five of its athletes that "Jim" Sullivan worked ceaselessly. He was always on the trail of any athlete who violated the spirit as well as the letter of the law which properly separates the professional from the amateur. Consequently any punishment meted out to violators of that law he held to be so sacred is, in a way, at least, a tribute to the work of his life. It was so regarded yesterday by some of those who were his most active assistants and supporters in the work he made his own because of his love of clean sport. Concerted effort to make American amateur sport records spotless and to keep them spotless would be the most fitting memorial American amateurs could give him, and probably the one he would choose were he able to express a preference.

There has been a good beginning, but there is much more to be done before the housecleaning is complete. The taint of the semi-professional attachés, rightfully or wrongfully, to several golfers, tennis players, and—in lesser degree—to followers of field and track athletics. Whether there perpetual "mug hunters" who travel from ocean to ocean, from mountain resorts in the North to balmy climes in the South, from one year's end to the other, apparently with nothing to do but participate in a year's round of tournaments, are observers of the spirit of the law governing the status of an amateur in sport is a problem that finds no satisfactory solution. John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie could unquestionably afford to play golf at any time and place and for twelve months in the year without violating their amateur standing. Harry Payne Whitney could play polo, drive hydroaeroplanes, play golf or tennis, or sail boats to his full bent, and no one would question the fact that he is an amateur, for an amateur, says the Standard Dictionary, is one "practicing an art or occupation for the love of it, but not as a profession." There are a thousand other persons expert at some sport who could devote their whole time to that sport. They could travel from pole to pole and never be asked for an expense account to prove amateur standing. But persons of such means and sporting spirit are not in the class of perpetual "mug hunters." Tournament fields see them only as spectators.

When Is an Amateur Not an Amateur?

How many of these "mug hunters" who have figured during the last season in countless tournaments at golf, tennis, or athletic competitions could retain amateur standing under the provision of the law defining an amateur in the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, for instance, which reads that an amteur is one "who rows for pleasure and recreation only, and during his leisure hours; who does not abandon or neglect his usual business or occupation for the purpose of training." How many could show, as amateur oarsmen must, that they have received from their clubs when participating in competitions at other clubs, only "transportation expenses to and from such places" and "hotel and board bills for a reasonable time before and after such race"? How many would be willing to file "an itemized and properly vouched account" for their ocean to ocean, all year campaign?

It is doubtful if one could use up the fingers of one hand in counting off such amateurs in the whole country. Yet all others would be insulted if their amateur standing was impugned. The whole world of sport knows they are amateurs in name only; professionals in spirit and practice, although one could not prove it legally. Many of these persistent "mug hunters" are amateurs only because there is, as yet, no place for the admitted professional in golf, tennis, or athletics—solely as a competitive player—which he may occupy without losing social caste. Their subterfuge is therefore employment with sporting goods houses, acceptance of agencies for the exploitation of athletic implements, or possibly as writers on topics connected with sports. Many of this last class are competent writers, good sportsmen, and experts at their favorite sport. But the sport about which they write is distinctly a means of livelihood. They are as constantly at the game as a professional would be and thus have an advantage of the amateur who makes his sport a pleasure instead of a vocation.

See My Agent, Say Amateurs.

Amateur sports is perhaps cleaner today than it has been for years. There are few of the men of the Kiviat and Smith type who make bald demands for compensation. That there are some, however, was discovered by a sports lover who tried recently to arrange a set of games. He invited prominent amateur specialists in certain sports to participate, promising to pay them for all expenses incurred, to feed them, thus giving them an opportunity to compete for the liberal and useful prizes offered. The project was not a money-making affair; it was merely an attempt to foster the sports spirit in a small settlement. It is said that the so-called amateurs referred the amateur promoter to an agent. That agent demanded—but did not receive—stipulated sums for each of the amateurs invited to compete. These sums were much in excess of anything the A. A. U. rules permitted or countenanced. And he wanted cash—no checks taken!

The manager of a certain Summer hotel which makes its baseball team one of its attractions told a TIMES man that he engaged college baseball players as "entertainers" at his hotel, their ostensible duties being to dance attendance on the Summer girls in the daytime and dance with them at the hops in the evening. Incidentally, they were to play baseball twice a week. It was to play baseball that they were primarily engaged, and their compensation as "entertainers" was based solely on their ability as baseball players. They received salaries for two months, and won the baseball championship for the hotel incidentally. The boys all knew why they were engaged, but because of that "entertainer" provision insisted they had not forfeited their amateur standing. They did sing and dance occasionally, and are, therefore, able to retain an amateur standing even now.

Yale has only uncovered a scandal, petty compared with most of them that has existed in many colleges every Summer for years, as writers familiar with sports have known. Proof of payment of players has been impossible to obtain, as compensation has been given in sly and clever ways, such as by leaving cash in an envelope in the office letter box of the player, by placing it in an envelope in his bedroom, by leaving it in a book in his room, or by paying wagers of the most trivial and transparent sort. It is reported that on the books of one New England hotel the team of college ball players appeared on the payroll as bellboys and on another as porters.

Secret Practices Degrade Sport.

It is the absurd atmosphere of secrecy as to the speed trials of boat crews, secret practice of football and baseball teams, try-outs of speed of athletes "in the dark," and the other tricks of the professional sporting man, which has dulled the clean amateur spirit which should exist at colleges. Sport for sport's sake has too often been made secondary to sport for the sake of winning at any cost, not only in colleges, but in athletic clubs. The athlete developed on these lines is bound to be looking for "a shade the best of it." He is not only susceptible to temptation, but often invites the temptation, thinking of the money value of his proficiency in a sport rather than of the joy of winning purely for the love of that sport. Unfortunately too, members of some clubs, hoping to win by "backing" the lad, actually foster that sort of thing and are thus accessory to the making of a pro-amateur out of a boy who goes into sport solely for the love of his game. Thus the amateur spirit in the lad is killed and the professional spirit fostered until the youngster begins to boast of how he has "put it over" by racing under a false name at some picnic or county fair, for "easy money." Then he becomes eager for pay for his services at any athletic meet. Then comes exposure, disqualification as an amateur, and disgrace. There is, perhaps, more of this disgraceful use of amateurs by professional gamblers than is even suspected by athletic authorities.

FORDHAM, 10; HOLY CROSS, 0

Bronx Team Defeats Old Rivals and Students Hold Snake Dance.

With its light line completely outplaying the heavier Holy Cross forwards, and with the back field bewildering the visitors by the speed and intricacy of its plays, the Fordham football team yesterday whitewashed its old Massachusetts rivals by a score of 10 to 0. When the struggle was finished over 1,000 shouting Fordham rooters held a snake dance over the campus. The procession was led by the old ram, the mascot of the Bronx collegians.

Holy Cross was far below Fordham in every branch of the game. Fordham uncovered a series of new plays and never let the visitors get within forty yards of the goal line. Holy Cross had a fine chance to score in the last period, when, with no one to interfere, McCarthy received a 40-yard forward pass as he stood behind his own goal mark. The visiting end was overanxious, however, and the ball slipped through his arms. All Yale, in the third quarter, kicked a field goal from his own 30-yard mark.

The feature of the game came in the last ten minutes of play, when, after an exchange of punts, Butler took Devlin's spiral and, throwing off two tacklers, raced sixty yards through the opposition to return the first quarter ended with Holy Cross on the offense at midfield. In the second period Holy Cross started by punting to Butler at the 20-yard line. The Maroon backs then started on a march down the field. A fumble stopped Fordham but the teams resorted to punting. Dunn proved Devlin's master at this game and Fordham gained in the exchange. It was in the second half that Yule dropped back and put over a field goal from the 30-yard line.

At the start of the closing quarter Holy Cross tried what should have been its scoring forward pass, but Devlin's passes were always blocked by Fordham players. At this point Golden went into Fordham's back field and brought the play to the 25-yard line. Downs made Dunn punt and it was on Devlin's return that Butler made his almost impossible run. The game ended five minutes later with the Bronxites again on the advance and only fifteen yards to go. Treanor, Benson, and Conklin all played a star game against much heavier opponents. The line-up:

Fordham.	Position.	Holy Cross.
Kendrick	Left guard	Leech
Treanor	Centre	Brawley
Benson	Right guard	O'Connor
May	Right tackle	Zimmerman
Corriden	Right end	Anderson
Dunn	Quarter back	Devlin
Cantwell	Left half back	Foley
Butler	Right half back	Donnellon
Yule	Full back	Bradley

Referee—Mr. Hann, Harvard. Umpire—Mr. Kington, Columbia. Linesman—Mr. Bannon, Princeton. Time of periods—Fifteen minutes. Touchdown—Butler. Goal from touchdown—Yule. Field goal—Yule.

SYRACUSE BEATS BROWN.

Score Close and Play in Visitors' Territory Most of the Time.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 23.—In a game that was full of hard, fast football Syracuse today defeated Brown, 6 to 0. During a large part of the time the Brownies had a shade on the visitors. Three times Brown had the ball almost in the shadow of the Syracuse goal, but lacked the power to go the last few yards for the score. During three periods the play was mostly in the visitors' territory.

Wilkinson, Syracuse's right half, was the bright star for his team, carrying the ball four times out of five and gaining most of the ground for the visitors. The only score of the game was due to his work. In the second period he intercepted a forward pass near midfield and carried the ball to Brown's 25-yard line before he was downed. The Syracuse team then fought hard, and with Wilkinson butting the line like a catapult for small but sure gains the visitors slowly forced the Brownies back until at the one-yard line it became necessary to measure to see whether Syracuse had made the inches necessary for the first down.

When it was demonstrated that it was still Syracuse's ball, though only by a hair, Wilkinson went over for the score. The lineup:

Brown.	Position.	Syracuse.
Butner	Left end	Dumoe
Ward	Left tackle	Cobb
Wade	Left guard	Schlacher
Staff	Centre	McDonough
Maxwell	Right guard	White
Farnum	Right tackle	Johnson
Weeks	Right end	Burns
Purdy	Quarter back	Wilkinson
Andrews	Right half back	Rose
Pollard	Left half back	Full back
Brace	Full back	O'Connell

The score: Syracuse, 6; Brown, 0. Touchdown—Wilkinson. Substitutes—Brown, Sexton for Brace, Fraser for Andrews, Andrews for Fraser, Huggenvig for Wade, Wade for Huggenvig, Murphy for Purdy. Syracuse—Newberry for O'Connell, Brown for Newberry, Trigg for Schlacher, O'Connell for Brown. Officials—Referee, Mr. Morice of Penn. Umpire—Mr. Burleigh of Exeter. Field Judge—Mr. Leary of Harvard. Head linesman—Mr. Noble of Amherst. Time—Four fifteen-minute periods.

EARL COOPER BEST OF RACING DRIVERS

On Road and Speedway the Stutz Cars Have Led All Competitors.

Earl Cooper is the 1915 all-around champion of the automobile race drivers and the Stutz car is the undisputed leader of the racing cars for the last season, according to the selection made by The Horseless Age in its annual review of the racing performances of 1915. This review, which covers the twenty-two road and speedway contests of the year, brings to light the fact that the open competition season which closed with the running of the Astor Cup race at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway has been the most interesting in the history of motor car racing. Throughout the year previous records have been constantly shattered, the total average speed of the twenty-two races run being close to twenty miles an hour higher than that made in all the road and speedway contests of two years ago. The number of starters in the various events have been greater, and the general interest in this class of sport has shown a marked increase through the erection of specially constructed speedways throughout the country.

During the season Cooper, the road champion of 1913, participated in eleven events, of which he won three, was second three times, fourth twice, and was eliminated three times. Under the Mason point system of scoring, which allows ten points for a first, six for a second, four for third, three for fourth, two for fifth, one for sixth and seven-eighths for seventh, three-quarters for eighth, five-eighths for ninth and one-half for tenth, Cooper scored fifty-one points during the year, as against thirty-eight for Gil Anderson and Eddie O'Donnell, his nearest competitors. Of Cooper's points, twenty-four were earned on the roads through his winning two races, finishing second in another and being eliminated in two others, while twenty-seven is his total for one victory, two seconds, two fourths, and one elimination on the speedways.

Cooper won the Point Loma race at San Diego, Cal., on Jan. 9, and the Chicago Automobile Trophy event at Elgin, Ill., on Aug. 20, these being his two victories on the roads. His only speedway victory was at Minneapolis on Sept. 4, when he lead his team-mate, Anderson, in a 500-mile race, with an advantage of only twenty-one seconds, the closest finish ever recorded in a long-distance contest. In the road races Dario Resta, who made such an auspicious début to American race followers in winning the Vanderbilt Cup and Grand Prize races at San Francisco, finished second to Cooper, the twenty points scored at these events giving him this position. Eddie Rickenbacker, with thirty-two points, leads the drivers in the speedway standing, though in winning the Sioux City, Omaha, and Providence races he did not have the same class of competition as Cooper and Anderson met in their races.

In the fight for second honors in the all-around championship ranking of drivers Anderson and O'Donnell are tied, each having thirty-eight points, but in this thirteen starts the latter won only one race, the Glendale road contest, while Anderson won the Elgin National and the Astor Cup race, the latter at a world's record pace. The Horseless Age has ranked the season's winning drivers in the following order: Cooper, Anderson, O'Donnell, Resta, Rickenbacker, Oldfield, De Palma, Ruckstell, Burman, Pullen, and Mulford.

Under the same system of scoring the Stutz car earned a total of 121⅞ points in its thirty-eight starts of the season, sixty-four of which were won on the roads and 57⅞ on the speedways. Maxwell cars won second place, through scoring 70½ points; Duesenberg, third, with 65⅞; Peugeot fourth, 49¾, and Mercer fifth, with twenty-three points.

In winning chief honors the Stutz has established a remarkable record for consistency, scoring four firsts on the roads and two on the speedways, five seconds each in the road and speedway contests it entered, and one third and three fourths in its speedway races. In its thirty-eight starts it was unplaced only fifteen times. A striking feature of the Stutz performances was its double-decked victories, this brand of car being the first and second to finish in both the Elgin road races, the Minneapolis "500," and the Astor Cup Race. The Maxwell won two road races, Venice and Tucson, and three speedway contests, those at Sioux City, Omaha, and Providence. It was second in three road races, the San Diego, Venice, and Tucson. In the Venice and Tucson events Maxwells scored first and second honors. Rickenbacker won third prize for Maxwells in the Chicago Derby and Orr drove a Maxwell to third place at Omaha. The Peugeot, the fleetest of the foreign racing cars, won three road races, the Vanderbilt, Grand Prize, and Oklahoma City contests, and one speedway race, the Chicago Derby. It scored two seconds.

According to the compilations the twenty-two events of 1915 showed a total average speed of 74.868 miles an hour, as compared with 65.206 for the seventeen events of 1914, and 55.753 for the eighteen contests of 1913.

EXPECT WORLD'S RECORDS.

Six Drivers for 100-Mile Election Day Race at Sheepshead Bay.

Followers of automobile racing are looking forward to seeing fast time on Election Day at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway. Drivers are eager to establish new world's records not only at 50 and 100 miles, but at all sprinting distances from a kilometer to two miles as well.

In the 100-mile invitation race for the Harkness Gold Cup there will be a sextette of famous speed kings, any one of whom is more than likely to make a record. There will be Dario Resta, who in the Astor Cup race led at 100 miles in 57:26, which beats his own previous American record of 58:54, made at Chicago. It is the Brookland's world's figures of 56:29:93, however, that the Harkness Cup contenders are after, and less than a minute faster going will do it.

In the Astor Cup Race Burman did 58:57, and Aitken's hundred-mile time was 59:37. So both these Peugeot pilots were also within striking distance of the Brookland's figures, and all these Astor Cup contenders had to calculate on 250 more miles yet to go. Ralph Mulford has shown 110 miles an hour speed on the Sheepshead course, and Eddie Rickenbacker 100 miles in 1:00:09.

Ralph De Palma has strong hopes of getting into shape the Mercedes in which he won the Indianapolis race, and Manager Thompson is looking for a fast car for Earl Cooper.

The possibility is that New Yorkers will see the prophesied 120 miles an hour on the speedway, with no less famous a speed creation than the Blitzen Benz, maker of the world's straightaway records on Ormond Beach. Bob Burman, its pilot on that occasion, who will again be at its wheel on Election Day, is at work overhauling and tuning up the flyer. It is his belief that the smooth banked speedway at Sheepshead Bay is not much slower than the Florida Beach.

ENGLEWOOD FAILS TO SCORE

Crescent A. C. Soccer Players Win Easy Match, 4 Goals to 0.

In a one-sided contest in the Field Club League championship soccer match play at Englewood, N. J., yesterday the eleven of the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn defeated the team of the Englewood Field Club by the score of 4 to 0. In the first half the home team gave every indication of stubborn resistance, but was assisted materially by a strong wind. It took half an hour for the Crescents to notch their first tally and this they accomplished with a hard shot by Taylor from a pass from the centre. The lineup:

Crescent A. C.	Position.	Englewood.
De Baum	Goal	Edgerton
Dodwell	Right back	Stockman
Humphreys	Left back	Coe
O'Rourke	Right half	Elliott
Perseneo	Centre half	Park
Hamilton	Left half	Hamilton
Fert	Outside right	O'Brien
Taylor	Inside right	Cookman
Maclennan	Centre	Blache

Referee — A. Laurie. Linesmen — Messrs. Roberts and Taylor. Goals—Taylor, Perseneo, Maclennan (2). Bensonhurst Field Club. Time—Halves of forty-five minutes.

Leaders in the Field Club Soccer League of New York and New Jersey, the elevens of the Staten Island Cricket and Tennis Club, and the Montclair Athletic Club clashed for the first time on the grounds of the former at Livingston, S. I., yesterday, when the Staten Islanders tallied twice in each half and won by the score of 4 goals to 4.

Commercial High School had a battle royal at soccer with Manual Training at Commercial Field yesterday afternoon. The result was a tie at one goal for each team.

The first defeat administered to the Curtis High soccer team in the high school soccer championship series this season was scored by Erasmus Hall at the Prospect Park Parade Grounds in Brooklyn yesterday. The Brooklyn lads took the game after a hard fight by 1 goal to 0.

Richmond County, playing a plucky uphill game, cut down Bensonhurst's lead in the first half and won the championship soccer match yesterday at West New Brighton by the score of 2 goals to 1.

Commerce High School defeated the soccer eleven of Yonkers High School by the one-sided score of 3 goals to 0 yesterday afternoon on the Commerce Field. Molehan for Commerce scored in the first half, when, as a result of two successful shots by Weinstein, the centre forward, Commerce took a 3-to-0 score.

Lafayette Swamps Albright.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Oct. 23.—Lafayette swamped Albright this afternoon on March Field by the score of 46 to 0. Thirty-nine of Lafayette's points were made in the first half, when the Varsity men were in the game. In the second half Coach Ballin, who was in charge this afternoon, sent in an entire scrub team, and they scored 7 points. During the second half Coach Reichner of Albright used his star, Benfer, in the game, but the Lafayette scrubs kept him well in hand.

It was not all the weakness of Albright that enabled Lafayette to roll up such a large total. The Lafayette team played far better ball than they have at any time this season. The line, which has been the source of Lafayette's greatest weakness, was far stronger both on the offense and the defense than it has been at any time this season. The coaching of Harold Ballin has been very beneficial. The offense of Lafayette made many long runs. On one of the Albright kick-offs Egan for Albright threw Lafayette for eight-three yards.

Hill, who made two of the touchdowns, excelled in this form of play. The Lafayette forward passes succeeded to a remarkable degree. Touchdowns were made on plays of this sort to men standing behind the Albright goal line. Line-up:

Lafayette.	Position.	Albright.
Livezey	Left tackle	Hartline
Luhr	Centre	Yost
Ryon	Right guard	Kaufman
Mummerl	Right tackle	Springer
Hartman	Right end	Gamber
Taylor	Quarter back	Hoffman
Hill	Left half back	Hartzler
Weldon	Right half back	Eyster
Lake	Full back	Beamy

Touchdowns—Hill, (2,) Weldon, (2,) Blackburn, Diamond, (2.) Goals from touchdowns—Weldon, (2,) Blackburn. (2.)

Substitutes—Lafayette, Martin for Lake, Overton for Ryon, Gayner for Gulick, Harris for Luhr, Diamond for Weldon, Williams for Gilck, Harris for Luhr, Diamond for Weldon, Williams for Hill, Loch for Taylor, Segman for Livezey, Smith for Martin, Hackett for Hartman, Maloney for Harris, Freeman for Gayner, Graham for Hackett, Brown for Diamond, Woodruff for Blackburn. Albright—Refer for Hartzler, Church for Beamy, J. Shambaugh for Hartline, Trauteman for Gamber.

Referee—Mr. Whiting, Cornell. Umpire—Mr. McElroy, Cornell. Linesman—H. M. Thorne, Haverford. Time of periods—Fifteen minutes each.

Dartmouth Freshmen Beat Andover

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 23.—Scoring a touchdown in each period, the Dartmouth Freshmen easily defeated Andover here this afternoon with a score of 28 to 0. The visiting team was clearly outplayed in every department of the game, failing to gain by rushing, and holding the freshmen for downs only twice.

Captain of the freshman quarter back, was easily the star of the game. He gained distances of from ten to thirty yards constantly on the ends, and ran the team well. Shelburne, the full back, was a consistent ground gainer through the line. Forward passes and open formations figured considerably in the result. The line-up:

Dartmouth '19.	Position.	Andover.
Cross	Left tackle	Talmadge
Neely	Left guard	Russell
Cunningham	Centre	Atwater
Sheeler	Right guard	Russell
Palmer	Right tackle	Keith
Fahnestock	Right end	Thurlow
Cannell	Quarter back	Davis

Score: Dartmouth Freshmen, 28; Andover, 0. Touchdowns—Whalen, Cannell, (2,) Cogswell. Goals from touchdowns—Whalen, (2.) Substitutions: Dartmouth Freshmen—Peddle for Palmer, Brooks for Peddle, Austin for Cogswell, Gray for Whalen. Andover—Horton for Waters, Wilson for Talmadge, Dresser for Keith, Keith for Dresser, Crane for Davis, Davis for Dyer, Jones for Horton. Officials: Referee—I. P. Courtney. Umpire—P. H. West. Head linesman—C. A. Pudrith. Time of periods—Twelve minutes.

Purdue Strong Against Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Purdue's great defense centring about Captain Blocker nearly upset traditions today, but Captain Russell's fifty-yard run on the kickoff in the third period turned the scale, and Chicago won, 7 to 0, after a bitter battle. If Purdue's defense was a marvel, its attack, however, was slow, and except for Pults outpunting Russell the Maroons showed much the better offense. Line-up:

Purdue.	Position.	Chicago.
Hake	Left end	Whiting
Berns	Left tackle	Shull
Proud	Left guard	Fisher
Blocker	Centre	Redmon
Mason	Right guard	Brodie
Buechner	Right tackle	Jackson
Vanaken	Right end	Breiza
Finn	Quarter back	Russell
Dixon	Left half back	Agar
Pults	Right half back	Gordon
Bishop	Full back	Flood

Referee—Mr. Masters, Northwestern. Umpire—Mr. Redden, Michigan. Linesman—Mr. Smith, Harvard. Field judge—Mr. Whyte, Cornell. Chicago scoring: Touchdown—Gordon. Goal from touchdown—Shull.

Substitutions—Purdue, Walter for Dixon, Oxer for Bishop, Eldridge for Vanaken, Stinchfield for Hake, McIntoch for Buechner, Allison for Pults; Chicago, Pershing for Gordon, Dobson for Flood, Foster for Whiting, Paterson for Foster, Scanlon for Brodie, Norgren for Pershing.

GOULDING MAKES WORLD'S RECORD IN 7 MILE WALK AND KOLEHMAINEN WINS 10 MILE RUN

WORLD'S RECORD SET BY GOULDING

Sensational Canadian Walker Surpasses Records for Four, Five, Six, and Seven Miles.

All great amateur walking performances for more than two score years were surpassed by the victory of George Goulding of the Toronto Central Walkers' Club in the seven-mile national championship of the Amateur Athletic Union, under the auspices of the Johnson and Johnson A. A., at New Brunswick, N. J., yesterday, when he created a new world's record for the distance and beat the best American marks for four, five, six, as well as seven miles.

The Canadian journeyed the route in 50 minutes 40 4-5 seconds. This mark cut ten seconds off the world's record, made in 1905 by the English policeman, G. E. Larner, at Brighton, England, and is minutes better than the American figures of 54:07, created in 1880 by E. E. Merrill in Boston.

More than three thousand persons, the largest crowd that ever paid to see the seven-mile walk and ten-mile run championships, were dumfounded when Goulding, competing for the first time in this event, made Eddie Renz of the Mohawk A. C., last year's champion, look like a novice.

Every weather condition was against the Olympic champion. Most of the way he walked against a gale of wind. At the finish he was fresh and apparently able to go miles further. There was nothing the matter with Renz's walking, for he beat the American record, covering the seven miles in 53:58 4-5.

The wonderful exhibition by Goulding overshadowed the triumph of Hannes Kolehmainen of the Irish-American A. C. in the ten-mile championship. Kolehmainen had to run one of his hardest races to defeat Nick Gianakopulos of the Millrose A. A., who was beaten in the home stretch sprint by less than ten yards. Kolehmainen's time was 53 minutes 32 1-5 seconds. The Finn ran to his limit at the finish and did not attempt to make a new American record for fifteen miles, as he had planned. The wind on the back stretch took much of his stamina, but did not bother the sturdier Gianakopulos, who might have been the victor had he reserved his last effort until 100 yards from the finish instead of endeavoring to sprint the entire last quarter mile.

Twelve walkers were in the field with Goulding. Even Renz could have accepted a lap start, for he finished at least a lap and an eighth behind the Olympic champion. Goulding did not get going at his best shape until after the third mile, and at four miles his first American record was established when he was timed in 28:58 2-5, displacing Tom Anderson's mark of 29:40 4-5. From this stage Goulding surpassed many intermediate records, but it is hardly likely that he will receive recognition for those marks. The first of his high class figures came at five miles, stepped in 36:10, only two seconds behind the world's record, but surpassing the American mark of 38:00%, made in 1880 by Billy Purdy. The next record to go was Merrill's six mile mark. Goulding turned this in 43:28 2-5, against Merrill's 45:28.

Billy Parry, an old walking champion of the Williamsburgh Athletic Club, and Justice Bartow S. Weeks, who have seen most all of our good walkers for thirty-five years, stated after the race that they had never seen any performance like that recorded by Goulding and wondered that he accomplished it under such adverse conditions.

Bill Plant of the Long Island A. C. was one of the surprises of the race, finishing third, only a short distance behind Renz, in the good time of 54:22. At almost every stage he was close to the deposed title holder. E. C. Freeman, Goulding's club mate, was a prominent contender for three miles, but was put out of the going on the fourth mile when he lost his right shoe and dropped more than half a lap back of Plant.

Goulding went out from the gun and at a mile led Renz by twenty-five yards. At this point it was evident that the Mohawk star, easily the best heel and toe artist in this country, was to be defeated. With every mile Goulding increased this lead. At four miles Plant was a lap behind, and at four and five-eighth miles Renz was passed by the Canadian. From this stage on it was simply a question of whether Goulding would get the world's record.

Kolehmainen's keen knowledge of cinder path running saved him from defeat. The Finn, until the last furlong, did not make an endeavor to go into the lead, and therefore at most of the mile posts his colors trailed either the Millrose runner, Gaston Strobino of the New York A. C., or Russell Springsteen of the Yonkers Y. M. C. A. On the last lap Charley Pores, a clubmate of Gianakopulos, who kept up with the leaders throughout, jumped from the field and gained a lead of ten yards before he was headed off by his Greek clubmate. Glanakopulos then made the mistake of trying to run away from Kolehmainen. He did succeed in opening up a gap, but he ran himself into the ground, and Kolehmainen's usual strong sprint at the finish carried the victory.

Two world's record holders, Pat Ryan and Pat McDonald, were successful in the handicap field events, which were held on Neilson Field as side shows to the championships. Ryan won the 16-pound hammer throw with a toss of 169 feet 11 inches, and Ryan the shot put with 6 feet 6 inches. The summary:

Union Elects Track Captain.

Philip Mallen, '16, of Chicago, Ill., has been elected Captain of the Union College track team for next season. Mallen was the highest point winner on the Union track team last year and was national amateur champion swimmer for 50 and 100 yards in 1912.

UNION DEFEATS STEVENS.

Schenectady Boys Score Three Touchdowns and Goals.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Union College's eleven defeated Stevens Tech here this afternoon by a score of 21 to 0. Three touchdowns by Goff, Girling, and Rosecrans, one in each of the second, third, and fourth periods, and three goals were responsible for the victory.

After Todd of Stevens intercepted a forward pass early in the second period, a fumble gave Union possession of the ball on Stevens's twenty-yard line. Stoller plowed through for four yards. Girling carried the pigskin on a wide end run to the three-yard line, and Goff took it over for the first touchdown. Rosecrans kicked the goal.

A consistent display of brilliant running and forward passing in the third quarter brought the ball from Union's twenty-yard line across Stevens's goal. Rosecrans ran Webb's punt back fifteen yards to Union's thirty-five-yard line. Girling made ten yards on a sweeping end run. Roof received a forward pass from Goff that put the ball on Stevens's thirty-three-yard line, and immediately Girling gathered in another that brought the pigskin to the five-yard line. This was a fine run through a broken field. A moment later he dodged around left end for a touchdown. Rosecrans kicked the goal.

In the final period, with only two minutes more to play, Rosecrans intercepted a forward pass from Todd and ran fifty yards for the third touchdown. Rosecrans picked the ball out of the air far above his head and evaded the entire Stevens team in his swift dash to the goal line. He also kicked the goal. The line-up:

Union.	Position.	Stevens.
Moynihan	Left end	Hopkins
Hay	Left tackle	Gennert
Gardner	Left guard	Oldis
Jackson	Centre	Middleton
Dubois	Right guard	Moller
Jenkins	Right tackle	Grymes
Avila	Right end	Hoinkis
Goff	Quarter back	Todd
Girling	Left half back	Marshall
Rosecrans	Right half back	Deghue
Stoller	Full back	Wood

Touchdowns—Goff, Girling, Rosecrans. Goals from touchdowns—Rosecrans. (3.) Substitutions—Stevens: Nevius for Middleton, Musk for Hoinkis, Peters for Marshall, Ford for Gennert. Union: Moore for Moynihan, Roof for Stoller, Anderson for Roof, Bowman for Hay. Officials—Referee, Dr. MacDonald, Brown; Umpire, Mr. Draper, Williams; Head Linesman, Mr. Carter. Time of periods—12 minutes each.

SCHOOL CONTESTS SOON.

2,500 Boys Expected to Compete at Madison Square Garden.

The banner attraction of scholastic athletic activity will be the thirteenth annual Indoor Elementary Schools Track and Field Championships at Madison Square Garden on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 18. The meet held last year proved to be the greatest athletic event ever conducted by school athletic organizations, and there were 2,080 boys in actual competition in the sixteen events, which were divided into four weight classes.

This year the scholastic athletic authorities are planning for an entry of 2,500 boys. The Elementary Schools Games Committee has decided that each school in the city shall be permitted to enter four relay teams, and two boys in each individual running and field event, making a maximum entry of forty boys from each school. There are 896 schools in the city, and if each school were to send its full quota of athletes there would be an entry of 15,840, but, of course, many of the smaller schools will not send the maximum number.

State and city officials have been asked to attend the schoolboy meet, and prominent army officers will be present to review the Olympic parade. Preceding the athletic events, the athletes will form in line, and, headed by a schoolboy band and a color guard, will march, eight abreast, past the reviewing stand.

Most of the elementary schools of the city have already started their young athletes in training for the big meet, and it is expected that strong teams will be entered by each school.

ICE SKATING THIS WEEK.

St. Nicholas Rink Will Open Saturday—Many Innovations.

The St. Nicholas Ice Skating Rink will open Saturday. Owing to the interest which has been aroused in skating, largely due to the sensational success of the foreign skaters imported from Berlin for the Hippodrome spectacle, the St. Nicholas Ice Skating Rink anticipates the biggest season it has ever had.

The Monday Afternoon Skating Club, an organization of society women, under the direction of Mrs. Philip Golden Bartlett, has been formed. The first meeting will be held next Monday. Every Monday afternoon during the ice skating season the Rink will be closed to the public. The Monday Afternoon Skating Club will take the place of the exclusive organization which Mrs. Barger Wallach directed four years ago.

Because of the unusual interest among young people in skating this year, and the opportunity it gives for new fashion modes, there will be six fashion show afternoons, when the most elegant and expensive furs, gowns, and hats will be on display.

It will be possible to learn dancing on skates under the expert direction of Fanny Davidson, the celebrated international fancy skater, and John Daly. Once a month a subscription Masquerade Carnival will be given under the direction of one of the foreign professional skaters now in New York.

YALE VICTOR AT TRAPS.

Princeton and Dartmouth Beaten in Intercollegiate Shoot.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 23.—The intercollegiate trap shooting match held at Princeton today was won by Yale with a score of 366 out of a possible 500. Princeton and Dartmouth followed in the order named. Levin and Chisholm of Yale were individual high scores, each making 83 out of 100 targets. High wind held the scores down.

Matthews Wins at Billiards.

Charles H. Matthews easily defeated Charles Worcester last night in the amateur handicap 18.2 balk-line billiard tournament at the Knickerbocker Billiard Academy in Brooklyn, by the score of 200 to 93. Matthews was in excellent form and, although he was handicapped at the start of the contest in having to concede fifteen points to his opponent, he played consistently from the beginning of the game and maintained the lead until the finish. He ran out his string of 200 points in thirty-three innings, making high runs of 31 twice, with an average of 6 2-33. Worcester, who had only to score 185 points to win, had high runs of 19, 11, and 10, with an average of 2 29-32. Tomorrow night Dr. H. D. Jennings will attempt to score 215 points before Claude R. Lewis can tally 185.

Callahan Wins Central Park Run.

Boys' High School triumphed over the High School of Commerce in the dual run over the Central Park course yesterday afternoon by the score of 22 to 36. R. Green of Boys' and H. Callahan of Commerce were at the front from the start of the race, and there were spirited sprints between the two students for the lead. Callahan going ahead near the finish and completing the distance in 14:06. Green was second in 14:13.

WORLD'S GREATEST WRESTLERS MATCHED

Champion Aberg trying to throw Lurich the Russian Champion

Zbyszko.

ABERG AND ZBYSZKO ARE READY FOR BOUT

These Two Giants Will Try Again Tomorrow to Decide Wrestling Championship.

Even a critical inspection of two such perfect types of physical manhood as Alex Aberg and Waldek Zbyszko would fail to convince one that either man could wrestle to a state of complete exhaustion without a fall. Yet that was what happened in the final round of the international contest at the Manhattan Opera House last June. For three hours and forty minutes these two had grappled and struggled on the mat. In the end it was declared a draw. Referee Bothner made that decision upon the demands of the spectators, after physicians had warned him that continuance of the match might be fatal to the contestants.

Both men then declared they would wrestle to a finish in a second bout. It was at first decided to have this match in July. Zbyszko, who is only a boy of 22 years, was persuaded to wait until Fall. He consented reluctantly. He had had two heart-breaking bouts on successive nights. The night before he wrestled Aberg he had wrestled Dr. B. F. Roller, the American champion, to exhaustion in an hour and twenty minutes. Aberg, who admitted that Zbyszko was more near his master than any of the 3,200 other wrestlers he had met, consented to a postponement of the second match. The meeting at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night is the practical conclusion of the bout at the Manhattan Opera House.

Forty pounds heavier than when he left here in June, Zbyszko came back to New York on Wednesday from a three-months outing at Old Orchard Beach in Maine. He has spent his leisure hours hunting and fishing with his friend Adamo Didur, basso of the Metropolitan Opera Company, whose singing as Boris Godonow has made him as famous as wrestling has made Zbyszko. Both are Poles from Galicia; both love music; both are lovers of all sports.

An Intellectual Wrestler.

Besides his native Polish, Zbyszko speaks Russian, German, French, and Spanish fluently, Italian and English with readiness, and he can jabber a little in Turkish. A graduate of the Gymnasia at Cracow, he was an undergraduate at the University of Vienna, when he became a champion wrestler. He expects to return to Vienna "at the end of the war" to finish three years of study for the degree of doctor of laws. With Zbyszko wrestling is purely a sport. He loves the rough game, and takes its batterings and bumpings as one takes his salad and demi-tasse with dinner. Chat with him and you know that nature did not cast him for the life of a professional wrestler. He prefers to talk of the music of Tschaikowsky or Moussorgsky, of the masterpieces of Sienkiewicz or Turgenieff, of the works of writers on international law, than of his mat victories in Germany, France, England and Russia. Wrestling is a means of getting the wherewithal to pursue his beloved studies.

Zbyszko's brother Stanislaus was one of the most famous wrestlers in Europe for years. Waldek went to Brighton, England, where his brother Stanislaus was to wrestle for championship honors. There the 16-year-old boy wrestler met Dr. Roller, one of the contestants, and had a few friendly bouts with him. Upon Roller's advice Waldek decided to train to be a professional wrestler. Roller made no mistake in giving this advice, and that Zbyszko did not err in accepting it was attested by the fact that at the catch-as-catch-can wrestling tourney in Paris in 1913 Waldek won the title "the champion of the champions."

Aberg of Different Type.

Aberg is of entirely different type physically just such a figure as one would imagine a wrestler would be. He has the great breadth of shoulder, the chest development, the gripping hands, and the arms and thighs of an abnormally developed man. He has been a professional wrestler for fourteen years. Although thirty-two years old, Aberg has never tasted an alcoholic drink, nor even smoked. He shuns even tea and coffee.

Whatever he lacks in other branches of knowledge he makes up for in knowledge of wrestling. As he stumbles over his English words, making a lingual sandwich of his efforts by mixing it up with German and Finn, he says: "Make it more plain than I can that I will wrestle any man in America, Graeco-Roman style, for $5,000 a side. I waited six months to get a match with Hackenschmidt in London and he would not wrestle me. I would like to try Frank Gotch. I train and swim, and swim and train for three months every day until the water gets so cold they will not let me swim more, and I am ready. I have not been thrown for ten years by 3,200 wrestlers who have tried it."

"Will you be able to put Zbyszko to the mat?"

"I do not say. That boy is wonderful. His brother was a champion, and I threw him five times at Graeco-Roman. But Stanislaus was never so good a wrestler as his brother, nor so strong, nor so quick. We tired each other out when we met last June. He is bigger, better now. The greatest wrestler I ever met, but I hope to throw him tomorrow night. Whatever happens, be sure to say that I will wrestle any man in the world for $5,000 a side. That is my answer. Say it sure in the papers."

MATTY'S GOLF RECORD.

Giants' Pitcher Gets 235-Yard Distance with a Putter.

Now that Christy Mathewson's best days as a baseball player are over, he is beginning to take golf more seriously. As a golfer, it is doubtful if he will ever attain the heights he reached as a pitcher, but Matty is at all times a dangerous player. He hits a long low ball off the tee, but his direction is a little uncertain, and he still flubs his shot occasionally.

In his desire to get distance with his wooden clubs, he pulls himself up when at the top of his swing with a motion that is entirely "out of order," but his good eye saves him from the fate that usually follows this fault. Most players who do this either hit the turf behind the ball, or hit the ball on the upstroke and spoil the shot. With the cleek and the mid-iron, Matty gets a long high ball, and takes the turf nicely, but the supreme test of a golfer lies within fifty yards of the green, and here he falls down. From this distance the champions hole out with almost mechanical precision in two strokes, or three at the most, whereas the average golfer is well satisfied with a three and often takes four strokes. Matty is no exception to this rule, and loses more strokes either on or just off the green than in any other part of his game. His putting is only average, but this can be improved by his taking more care in surveying the contour of the green and more time in making his putt.

Matty plays regularly at Van Cortlandt Park and has two remarkable shots to his credit. Playing in the Championship of Greater New York recently, he took his mid-iron for a 200-yard shot over a rise to the tenth green. After vainly searching the rough some one suggested that they look in the cup and there they found the ball. In a friendly match a few days later, his opponent suggested that both drive with putters off the eighteenth tee. It is a down-hill hole and with a powerful sweep of the club Matty drove his ball within twenty yards of the corner of the green, a distance of about 235 yards.

TOY DOGS TO BE BENCHED.

Many Trophies Offered for First Show of the Season.

Two dog clubs will hold shows at the Hotel McAlpin this week, the Pomeranian Club on Wednesday and the Toy Dog Club on Friday. The judges for the latter event are: Miss Clarise Litthaur, English toy spaniels and Japanese; Miss Ellen Laflin, Pomeranians; Mrs. A. McClure Halley, Pekingese; H. L. Hoffman, French bulls; A. B. Webb, Boston terriers and English bulls; A. B. Rosenberg, all other breeds and unclassified specials. As an innovation this season, litter classes for puppies under three months will be added at each show. An admission fee of 25 cents is charged, which includes entry for one class. Judging will start promptly at 3 o'clock.

Ribbons for first, second and third will be awarded in all classes, and the following specials are offered for competition: Mrs. H. L. Heyward offers the champion Fan Tan of Esterro Trophy for the best female Pekingese under eight pounds, owned and shown by exhibitor, to be won three times but not necessarily with the same dog. Miss Ellen Laflin offers a trophy for the best Pomeranian in the show, to be won outright. Miss Litthaur offers a trophy for the best English toy spaniel, one for the best English toy puppy, and a third for the best Japanese. Champion Fosco's Pansy offers a trophy for the best Boston terrier, female, not exceeding sixteen pounds, to be won outright. The Hotel McAlpin offers a silver cup for the best dog in the show, to be won three times. The New York Hippodrome offers a silver cup for the best American bred dog of any breed.

West Virginia Forfeits Game.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Oct. 23.—The football game between Washington and Lee and the University of West Virginia was forfeited to the former, 1 to 0, here today. With the score 8 to 6 in favor of West Virginia, one-half minute to play, and the ball on their three-yard line, Coach Metzger, after a conference with Acting President Trotter of the university, withdrew the players from the field because of alleged unfairness of the officials of the game.

NEW SPORTSMEN'S CLUB.

John Kean Estate in Morris County N. J., Leased for Ten Years.

As the first steps in the organization of a sportsmen's club which will possess a fish and game preserve that will surpass anything of a like nature in this country, Charles T. Champion of Newark, N. J., has secured a ten-year lease on the estate of the late United States Senator John Kean, situated in Morris County, N. J.

The property consists of 5,000 acres in Longwood Valley, one of the most picturesque sections of the State. It comprises several farms, much other lowland and a large acreage of timbered mountain land. For many years just prior to his death Senator Kean had been buying up farm and forest land and adding it to his original estate, until at the time of his death he had what was considered one of the largest and best stocked game preserves in the Middle East.

In addition to the vast acreage of land, the preserve takes in Longwood Lake, a beautiful sheet of water about a mile and a half long, which was formed by damming the Rockaway River. Besides the lake and the river there are trout streams on the property.

The general territory in which the preserve is located is well known to many sportsmen of this and neighboring States, because of the excellent hunting and fishing it affords. Nearby are Green Pond, Lake Denmark—and the vast hunting grounds around it—and the lake, vainly sighed for by anglers, on the United States reservation at Picatinny.

Game of all kinds native to Jersey is said to abound in the preserve—deer, rabbits, squirrels, pheasant, partridges, quail, and duck. In the lake are large and small mouth bass and pickerel and the trout streams have been stocked with native brook and rainbow trout.

Plans for the club, as outlined by Mr. Champion, provide for a membership limited to 100, not necessarily residents of that State. It will be known as the Longwood Valley Club. Besides the various farm buildings there is a large ten-room dwelling on the property. This, however, probably will be used but temporarily, if at all, as it is proposed to build a clubhouse in true camp style—a long, rustic log cabin, with open fireplace and all the other accessories of such a building. Bungalows and Summer houses are also under contemplation. In every respect the effort will be to follow the lines of the Maine or Adirondack Club.

The laying out of tennis courts and even a golf course is under consideration. Ground suitable for this purpose, Mr. Champion declared, would be easy to find. Whether, however, the idea would be carried out would depend, he said, more or less upon the opinions of the members.

At stated times it is purposed to have coon hunts, fox hunts and other events of this nature as special features of the season's activities.

May Give Boxing Decisions.

Boxing decisions may be rendered under sanction from the New York State Athletic Commission. Chairman Fred A. Wenck, Chairman of the commission, has promised to take up the question at the meeting of the commission tomorrow, and, in the event of favorable action, the third man in the ring in the bout between Johny Dundee and Willie Ritchie on Tuesday night will announce from the ring the winner of the bout. Chairman Wenck is reported to be in favor of giving decisions, in which event Major Dixon, the only other member of the commission, will have the deciding vote. It is assured now that Ritchie and Dundee will not violate the rule preventing lightweights and men of the lighter classes from weighing in where there is a difference of more than ten pounds in the weights. Ritchie stated at his training quarters yesterday that he would not be over 133 pounds Tuesday night, and might possibly be a pound or two less, while Dundee's lowest notch will be 130. Joe Mooney will box Paul Freda in the ten-round semi-final.

Would Unite Aquatic Boards.

The Committee on Water Sports of the National Collegiate A. A. has suggested to the Intercollegiate Swimming Association the advisability of having its graduate advisers become members of the Governing Board. The plan would establish a community of purpose and prove to the advantage of college aquatics.

Some objection has been raised already, because, when the National Committee undertook about a year ago to revise existing rules, it failed even to consult the Intercollegiate League authorities, and they now hesitate to join forces and practically obligate themselves to accept laws they had no voice in formulating. They feel that, having built up and successfully conducted the oldest and strongest swimming organization in the country, they do not want to lose their independence and submit to the dictates of others.

The intercollegiate graduate advisers are to hold their annual Fall meeting this week at the New York A. C., and they will then discuss the proposed plan and take action on it.

SCHOOLBOYS BEGIN GOLF TOURNAMENT

Thirty-two Young Players Compete on Van Cortlandt Park Course.

Schoolboy golfers began their championship tournament on the public links of Van Cortlandt Park yesterday. Additional entries were received, so that the championship division was expanded to thirty-two, instead of keeping within the originally planned sixteen. One of the surprises of the day was the defeat of Clarence Brieger of Townsend Harris by Hubert Guley of Yonkers, the margin being 7 and 5.

The summary:

Championship Division.—First Round—Harold Saxon, De Witt Clinton, beat Richard Goldman, De Witt Clinton, 3 up and 2 to play; Harold Richless, Clinton, beat James Smith, Jamaica, 2 up; Herbert Oberndoerfer, Commercial, beat Samuel Philip, Townsend Harris, 10 up and 8 to play; Arthur Polsenski, De Witt Clinton, drew a bye; Morton Van Raalte, De Witt Clinton, drew a bye; Alfred Pflomar, De Witt Clinton, beat Arthur Brown, Evander Childs, 3 up and 2 to play; Clarence Wolf, Townsend Harris, beat Harry Caplin, Morris, 1 up; Arthur Heatherington, Fordham, beat Morris Edwin, Yonkers, 7 up and 6 to play; Earle McMillin, Morris, beat A. Foster, Townsend Harris, 4 up and 3 to play; Hubert Guley, Yonkers, beat Clarence Brieger, Townsend Harris, 7 up and 5 to play; Arthur Noyce, De Witt Clinton, drew a bye; Harry Nedley, Erasmus, drew a bye; B. Brady, De Witt Clinton, beat Arthur Frick, Flushing, 2 up; Clarence Felter, Boys' High, drew a bye; C. Weeks, Jamaica, beat Norton Stonehill, De Witt Clinton, 4 up and 2 to play; Edward Fitzgibbon, Yonkers, beat G. Morrison, Richmond Hill, by default; Clarence Hicks, Stuyvesant, beat Arthur Parish, Stuyvesant, 3 up and 1 to play; D. H. Hewletts, De Witt Clinton, beat Harry Aderer, Townsend Harris, 2 up.

A four-ball competition against bogey was the attraction at the Richmond County Country Club yesterday, and it resulted in a tie. W. C. Van Clief and Courtlandt Van Clief finished 3 down, the same as Norman S. Walker and Edward W. Gould. Following the day on the links, more than a hundred members of the club attended the annual golf dinner in the clubhouse. The results follow:

W. C. Van Clief and Courtlandt Van Clief, 3 down; Norman S. Walker and Edward W. Gould, 3 down; Arthur Man and Otis L. Williams, 5 down; Edward Towers and Philip C. Peck, 5 down; John D. Ellilman and William L. Davidson, 5 down; W. F. Belknap and W. S. Van Clief, 5 down; A. S. King and M. P. Pitou, 6 down; Walter W. King and Sidney G. Wilcox, 6 down; J. F. Leggett and F. F. A special prize was offered for those members of the Scarsdale Golf and Country Club who had not won prizes during the season of 1913, 1914 and 1915 yesterday. E. C. Holston was the winner, with a card of 91, 10—81. There also was a sweepstakes in two classes, the first winner being F. W. Cobb, with 90, 10—80, and the second R. B. Marchant, with 109, 17—92.

Members of the Forest Hill Field Club were divided into two teams yesterday under the leadership of J. Barton Garfield and A. H. Gussman. It was agreed that the losers should pay for dinner for the winners in the clubhouse last night, and it fell to Gussman's combination to pay. Garfield's team won by 13 points to 10. There were eighty-four at the dinner.

Finishing all square, S. O. Miller won the bogey handicap on the links of the Englewood Country Club yesterday. Only a few players took part because of the chilly wind.

In addition to the first round in three sixteenths for the Manhattan, Richmond, and Brooklyn Cups at the Fox Hills Golf Club yesterday, the usual weekly handicap was in order. W. E. Truesdell won in the first set with 82, 9—73, while in the second C. Just, Jr., led the field. Results for the borough trophies follow:

First Sixteen.—First Round—Richard R. Mamlok beat De Courcey Cleveland, 1 up; H. H. Lloyd beat W. S. Kimball, 2 up and 1 to play; E. D. Waterbury beat W. R. Jocklin, 3 up and 2 to play; H. W. Fall Tennis at Trinity.

The tennis singles in the annual Fall tournament of the Trinity School last week brought the players up to the finals in the junior class and to the semi-finals in the intermediate and senior divisions. The work of Raymond and G. Zabriskie, in the senior class, was especially interesting, and a hard battle is certain if they reach the finals. Hanson and Palmenburg, in the intermediate class, also furnished an exhibition of good tennis. Patterson and Rockefeller will play the finals in the junior division tomorrow. The latter looks like a probable winner, since he defeated Moody in the semi-finals in two love sets. The scores:

Seniors.—First Round—Champion defeated Muxwall, 6—5, 6—0; Andredi defeated Eccles, 5—6, 6—4, 6—2; Raymond defeated Dymock by default; Mills defeated F. Lansing, 6—4, 6—0; G. Zabriskie defeated W. Brooks, 6—0, 6—1; Black defeated Stover by default; G. Zabriskie defeated F. Buechner, 6—2, 6—2; R. Foster defeated Lewis by default; M. Concert for War Relief.

A concert will be given in the Gold Room of the Holland House this afternoon, beginning at 3 o'clock, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the relief of children in the war zones and of Scottish soldiers and their dependents. The concert is given under the auspices of the Royal Scots Committee, founded by Lord Roseberry, and of the International Society of Friends of Childhood.

HEAVY BUYING OF COPPER.

Increased Output, However, Holds Price Around 18 Cents.

Notwithstanding an increased demand for copper from foreign sources last week and continued heavy buying from domestic manufacturers, the price for electrolytic did not get away from the 18-cent level. A report in the trade had it that British agents had taken 2,500,000 pounds in one contract at slightly better than this price, but the broader tendency was more toward easement than firmness. A reason advanced for the stability of quotations in the face of huge consumption at home and abroad was the rapid increase in the output of mines and refineries. Commenting on the market situation Copper Gossip says:

"The movement of copper into consumption continues at a record rate in this country, and the present domestic demand is a powerful factor as a market influence. If it were not for the other well-established fact that production of copper has greatly broadened since the beginning of the year the market would probably be the scene of some excitement. But with the big expansion at mining centres a healthy equilibrium between supply and demand is maintained, and there is no immediate danger of a shortage of the red metal.

"There is a fairly steady tone to the market, and electrolytic grades quote 18@18¼. Although recent dealings were not on as broad a scale as some months ago there was nevertheless quite important buying during the last thirty days. Estimated requirements of consumers for the next six months are very heavy, and if the present rate of industrial activity is maintained the brass and copper mills of the United States will absorb copper in very large quantities. If there is a continuance of recent demand, without serious impairment, there will be a tangible basis for a reasonably stable market. But if a too rapid expansion of activity occurs at producing sources by ill-considered outputting there is a difficult matter to maintain confidence in values.

"The market must have fundamentally sound conditions to rest on if wide price fluctuations are to be avoided. From the point of view of the manufacturer stability of prices and satisfactory trade are intimately linked. The copper market of recent months presents a pronounced contrast to that of one year ago, when the price of electrolytic copper was 11¾@11½c per pound. Underlying conditions have changed radically during the past twelve months, and many industries were never as busy as today, but with a 50 per cent. advance in copper since last October it is of practical interest to know that the whole situation rests on a solid foundation. On the basis of present operations at both producing and consuming centres there is reason to believe there is nothing to justify further marking up of prices.

"As we go to press the market is less firm, and sellers more ready to consider propositions from buyers. Electrolytic quotes 17¾@18c. A material increase in market activity is looked for when prices settle at a satisfactory level. New inquiry will appear when requirements compel buyers to replenish supplies, but meanwhile quotations now ruling are not attractive enough to meet the views of would-be purchasers."

STERLING EXCHANGE LOWER

Sight Bills Fall to $4.62½, a Loss of 7 Cents Since Monday.

Increased offerings of bills of exchange without an adequate demand yesterday caused another sharp decline of sterling rates with a weak tone in evidence in the exchange of France, Italy, and Switzerland. Sterling sight bills dropped a full 2 cents to the pound from Friday's closing figure, the bottom quotation being $4.62½. The quotation was the lowest since the first week of September and 7 cents under the best price last Monday. The close was at $4.62¾ bid.

Dealers in exchange reported heavy offerings of commercial bills, resultant chiefly from the phenomenal exports from this port during the week. Custom House figures showed that vessels sailing from New York from Monday morning to Friday night carried away $57,000,000 worth of merchandise, a total never before surpassed in the records of the port.

STEEL CONTRACTS CANNOT BE FILLED

Mills Have No Hope of Catching Up with Present Orders—Interest Is in 1916 Deliveries.

SIX MORE SHIPS ORDERED

Vessels for Atlantic Coast Trade Will Require Big Amount of Steel—Rumania in Market.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 24.—Placing of contracts for delivery during the remainder of 1915 is about at an end. All interests are centred on what can be obtained during 1916. The question of price has been eliminated. The sole consideration is delivery. Steel is selling for whatever price the maker asks if he can deliver the goods. Material for war munitions is getting into the same class.

Six additional ships have been contracted for for Atlantic Coast service. They include two steamers and four large schooners. Two more schooners will be contracted for as soon as plans are completed. These will require about 12,900 tons of steel. The Munson Line has contracted with the Newport News Dry Dock Company for another steamer to be delivered in 1917. The Coastwise Transportation Company will have the New York Ship Building Company build a 12,000-ton vessel. This is the seventh vessel contracted for by this company in the last six months. The A. H. Bull Company is figuring with the Maryland Steel Company for two 5,000-ton ships. The Matson Navigation Company has placed a vessel with the Union Iron Works, San Francisco.

Large contracts for plates have been placed by the steel car companies. The Reading Railroad has ordered about 30,000 tons of plates from the Carnegie Steel Company for cars. Railroads are inquiring for shop plates. Mills are operating to capacity.

Bar Makers are Overwhelmed.

The steel bar market is in an interminable mess. All contracts which can possibly be canceled have been marked off the books. Yet most of the mills cannot hope to catch up with existing orders until next March. In the meantime a whirlwind of inquiries has swept through the offices of steel bar makers for next year's delivery. Every effort is being put forth to restrain buyers and to keep them in line at the ticket office, but without avail.

David A. Thomas, representing the British War Office, is quoted to the effect that his Government alone had contracted for $250,000,000 in shells, and that much larger orders were on the way. He said that it was the intention to give Canada the preference, but that to date they had been tardy in deliveries and had a tendency to charge too high prices. The greater orders for shells and shrapnel have been subdivided in the United States. The latest European country to inquire for American-made projectiles is Rumania, which is in the market for 5,000 tons of shrapnel shapes.

While steel bars are quoted at 1.45c. Pittsburgh, which is the price fixed by the Carnegie Steel Company, large rounds are quoted from 3 to 3.25c. Most of the steel mills are six months behind in deliveries. Steelmakers are baffling every effort of consumers and brokers to place contracts for long-time delivery throughout next year.

Inquiries for rails for export have assumed large proportions. The Russian railways are the market for 85,000 tons, to be shipped via the Trans-Siberian Railroad. The Lackawanna Steel Company has accepted contracts to date for Russian delivery for 185,000 tons of rails, and other mills in this country bring the total up to 330,000 tons. The French railways are inquiring for 70,000 tons of 100-pound rails. The Illinois Central and Missouri Pacific each have contracted for 15,000 tons with the Illinois Steel Company. The Norfolk and Western has ordered 4,000 tons from the Pennsylvania Steel Company. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has not completed its budget for rail requirements for 1916.

Car orders and inquiries run into the thousands. Most of these orders run from 1,000 down to 50. The French State Railways require 1,500 box cars. Billets and bars are the active demand as steel bars. From abroad and all sections of the country inquiries come for billets. Sales have been small as there are no large tonnages to be had. Pittsburgh, the largest producer of billets in the world, is importing them from Western mills to be rolled into finished steel. All sorts of fancy prices are being paid for forging billets. As high as $36 a ton was secured by an eastern Pennsylvania company for 2,000 tons. A Chester, Penn., company is in the market for 60,000 tons of 10-inch steel, sheared. Pittsburgh and outside furnaces are out of the running. Bessemer billets are nominally quoted at $26 a ton, Pittsburgh and Youngstown. Forging billets at $40. A sale of 8,000 tons of open hearth ingots was made at Youngstown for export.

Higher Prices for Steel Shapes.

Higher prices rule for steel shapes. Fabricators are advancing quotations on bids. Material is quoted at Pittsburgh mill at 1.45c. to 1.50c. Bids are in for 25,000 tons for an elevated line in Philadelphia. Owing to the higher cost of structural steel many projects for which inquiries had been put out have been withdrawn. In spite of this higher prices are anticipated. Domestic building will be stunted in growth as a result of the exorbitant demands.

Steel pipe is due for an advance. The National Tube Company will double the capacity of the Shelby Tube Company at Ellwood City, Penn. This plant is operating night and day on shrapnel orders. Iron pipe, tubes, and other tubular goods are in active demand, with an upward tendency in prices.

Large inquiries have come from abroad for blue annealed sheets. J. P. Morgan & Co., acting for the British Government, are said to have placed an order for 3,000 tons of sheets and other brokers have issued inquiries to sheet makers for 10,000 tons or any part of the amount. Black sheets are up $2 a ton, being quoted at 2.10c. for No. 28 gauge.

Contracts are being freely placed for pig iron for delivery during the first quarter of 1916. The West Penn Steel Company has purchased 10,000 tons of basic steel from the Kittanning Iron and Steel Company, at $15, furnace. Owing to the vast tonnage sold in and around Cleveland, basic, which has been selling at $13, valleys, will probably be advanced to $15.50. Lots of 10,000, 20,000, and as high as 45,000 tons have been ordered. Several furnace owners have withdrawn quotations entirely and will hold their iron for higher prices. Most of the furnaces are behind in delivery. Every available furnace that can be placed in working condition will be operating by the first of the year. The total output will be the greatest in the history of the country and will probably approximate 40,000,000 tons a year.

The Inland Steel Company, Youngstown, Ohio, will erect two additional open-hearth furnaces.

Wide Fluctuations in Stocks in an Active Session—Demand Slumps Again.

The fact that it was but a two-hour session with a Sunday following did not serve to keep down activity in yesterday's stock market, which went ahead with apparently unabated enthusiasm. Stocks of the popular industrial companies are now on such a level that it takes but the hint of a piece of good news to bring about a violent advance, or a denial to produce a sudden reaction. How sensitive some of the higher price issues had become was well illustrated by the wide range over which Baldwin fluctuated in the final few minutes of yesterday's market. On the growing belief that the Midvale Company is going to take over Baldwin and that efforts have been under way to buy control in the open market Baldwin forged ahead to 154½, and a new high record yesterday morning. Publication a little later of what was taken to be an official denial of any such plan on the part of the Midvale promoters caused a slump of 12½ points in the issue. In the two hours more than 30,000 shares of Baldwin changed hands. The motor issues continued their gains, Maxwell going to a new high record at 76 for the common and 56½ for the second preferred. General Motors sold up to 381, but closed 8 points below with a net gain of 3 points. Studebaker was in little demand yesterday and after fluctuating over a range of 7½ points closed with a small net loss.

A great deal of interest, for a Saturday, centred on the foreign exchange market, which developed further weakness. Demand sterling sold yesterday morning at $4.62½. This compares with a price of $4.69½ at the beginning of the week. The market for exchange is without a leader and there has been no effort made in the last few days to support it. New York has taken its tone from the rates in London and there is a feeling among foreign exchange dealers that until the English banks get together for purposes of stabilizing rates there is no reason to look for any improvement. The rate at which the balance of trade in this country's favor is piling up shows clearly that had it been feasible to grant a loan of the size originally asked for by the Anglo-French Commission, a billion dollars would not have been in excess of the needs already in sight.

The feature of the bank statement yesterday was a large increase in reserve, which resulted from the receipt of big gold imports. While cash in the bank's own vaults decreased $5,755,000 there was a gain of $18,211,000 in reserves with the Federal Reserve Bank and with other depositories.

Railroad earnings, except for the South and Southwest, are showing most gratifying increases both in their gross and net. Much favorable comment resulted yesterday on the publication of the Southern Pacific's September statement, which showed an increase of $1,340,000 in gross operating revenues, of which $828,000 was carried ahead to net. For the three months this company has benefited to the extent of $4,206,000 in gross earnings, with an addition of only $812,000 to its total operating costs, so that net after taxes, which was $10,545,000 a year ago, was $13,127,000 at the end of last month.

General Baking Co. Preferred

The General Baking Co. is a consolidation of twenty different concerns engaged in making bread and other baking products, the combined output of about $9,000,000.

In the consolidation, the cumulative preferred stock sold at 887 per share, when 7% was paid. Since Dec. 31, 1912, 4% per annum has been paid. On Oct. 1, 1915, accumulated dividends due preferred stockholders amounted to 12½%.

The Company's net profits for 1914 were sufficient to pay full 7% on the preferred, leaving a surplus on the common, while at the close of the year would have enabled the Company to pay off all accumulated dividends on the preferred and leave about 8% for the common. This showing resulted after liberal allowance for depreciation of plants, additions, betterments, etc., in October, 1914, the preferred stock sold at 838 per share, since which time the price has steadily improved.

An unprecedented wheat yield has reduced the cost of flour and the Company's warnings are that high materials increases. It is not unreasonable to anticipate provision for the payment of 12½% accrued on the preferred stock, and a resumption of the 12½% dividends. Since 1912, 4% has been paid semi-annually on the preferred.

Price $58 per Share. Yielding 7%

Anglo-French 5% Loan

nets approximately 5½%

The NEW YORK TIMES, in a leading editorial on Sept. 30, says:

"A loan preferentially guaranteed principal and interest by Great Britain and France * * * is absolutely safe."

Orders executed for cash at the usual rate of commission, or you may purchase Anglo-French Bonds, or any N. Y. Stock Exchange security, through us on the

Periodical Payment Plan

(WHICH WE ORIGINATED IN 1907.)

Under this plan, long since a standard method of investment, we offer you facilities for small savings to invest profitably by an easy and convenient kind of payment—a method, moreover, which was originated by us eight years ago and has stood the test of time.

VARIED PHASES OF THE COUNTRY'S BUSINESS LIFE

THE MERCHANT'S POINT OF VIEW

Taken by itself, there would not be much significance in the fact that for the week ended Oct. 16 the exports footed up the amazing total of $73,694,600, the greatest in the country's history. But this is only a single circumstance among many showing the prosperous trend of conditions. In many lines of manufacturing nowise connected with the making of war materials orders for goods are declined because producing capacity has been reached. The transportation facilities are being overtaxed in the movement of freight. Wages in many kinds of occupation are being raised, and, in quite a number, the jobs are beginning to seek the men. The abundance of the harvests has been demonstrated, and has led to the enlargement of purchasing to such an extent that hurry orders have come to the central markets from retailers in nearly every section. Those who foresaw the quickening of activity and provided for it in advance will be large gainers because of their foresight.

Time Is of Advantage.

Last week, in this column, mention was made of the fact that manufacturers and merchants are now able to make safe calculations for quite a period to come because of the great probability of a fairly long continuance of existing conditions. What has happened during the week affords added corroboration. In the contracts for cloth and munitions that have just been entered into, provision is made as far ahead as the Spring of 1917, the expectation apparently being that the war will be prolonged at least until then. So long a period will give the industries of this country the opportunity to become strongly intrenched in neutral foreign fields, and thus enable them to maintain their advantage after the war is over. Most of the former German dominance in many of the foreign markets has been due to the cheapness of the wares furnished. Hereafter, in all cases where adequate experience has been had with American products, whether of the metals or textiles, goods will be judged by the standard of quality or service—which means ultimate instead of immediate cheapness—and in this direction those from the United States will more than hold their own. A couple of years will give ample time for South American and other peoples to become familiar with the merits of the wares which this country produces, as well as for the arrangement of satisfactory credit or banking arrangements. The longer the war lasts the more difficult will it be for the European Continental nations to recover their foreign trade. Similarly, with each month's prolonging of hostilities and consequent restriction of imports to this country, the newly established industries here will attain a stronger footing and be less likely to be injured by competition when peace comes. Time works to the advantage of this country in both directions.

Cotton and Cotton Goods.

So far as the textiles are concerned, the past week has shown little change. The price of raw cotton has shown no tendency toward reduction, and, in consequence, there is continued firmness in the prices of all kinds of cotton goods. Dealings in gray goods were not as active as they were the week before, but this has no significance beyond showing that the immediate needs of converters and printers have been met. Mills are not disposed to contract far ahead because there are no signs of cheaper raw material in the future, and the chances are good of obtaining higher prices for fabrics later on. Fancy cottons continue to sell well. Colored goods are much in demand, but lines have had to be withdrawn because of scarcity of dyes and others have been put at value. The knit goods makers are having an especially busy season, and some of the mills have been obliged to refuse orders because they have not machines enough to turn out the required amount of product. A gratifying feature of this line is the increasing exports of both underwear and hosiery.

***

Woolen Mills Busy.

Wool is getting into a stronger position, it having been discovered that prices here are comparatively lower than in the foreign countries of production. This would mean that the material cannot be replaced at the prices which have been prevailing. The prices at the Australian sales have been quite high, and in South America advances have been noted. It is not expected that any bargains will be had at the London colonial auctions, which begin on Tuesday, or at the New Zealand sales next month. With the enormous demand for military purposes, price recessions of the article are not likely to occur. The woolen and worsted mills of this country will use up an enormous quantity within the next six months. One recent army order calling for 5,000,000 yards will keep 1,700 looms going until next April. Other foreign orders which are expected will furnish still more work. While some of this kind of business comes at a very opportune time, because it will keep mills busy during certain otherwise dull months, it will also have the effect of making the mills more independent and not so responsive to the beck and call of domestic buyers. It has already caused the withdrawal of certain lines of goods for Spring. Prices of goods have been steadily advancing in the face of an increasing demand due to the general belief among clothing manufacturers that a brisk business is in sight for next year. For women's wear Fall dress goods are becoming scarcer, some having been placed at value and others altogether withdrawn. The demand for plushes and corduroys has been such as to tax the capacity of the mills.

Carpet Buyers Here.

Carpet and rug buyers from all over the country will be in the city during the present week. Some of them have been here for several days looking over the offerings. The principal factor in the trade will offer 97,500 bales of rugs and over 3,000 rolls of carpets. This is largely in excess of the amount offered by the same concern last Spring. The value of the goods to be disposed of is something of a guess, but it will probably exceed $3,500,000. Outside of this offering there will be those of the other large carpet and rug making establishments, whose prices will not be made until after something is known of the auction results. Despite the difficulties for a while of obtaining supplies of carpet wool and of the scarcity and high price of dyes, it is not expected that the prices at the sales will show any great advances. The mills are more interested in a larger distribution than in securing the highest profits on smaller quantities. The interest thus far shown indicates that buyers are ready to purchase in quantity if the prices suit.

Imports and Exports.

An increase of imports during August has caused the drawing of some erroneous deductions. The increase, which was over $12,000,000, has led some to believe that there has come a great stimulation of inbound trade. It must be remembered, however, that August, 1914, which was the first month of the war, was the one in which all foreign trade was most interfered with and things were little better in September. No comparisons have much value which are made of periods before the German commerce destroyers were put out of the way. The foreign trade figures for September, made public yesterday, showed that the imports were nearly $20,000,000 below those of the corresponding month of 1913, although nearly $12,000,000 above those of the same month last year. The imports for the nine months ended with September were valued at $1,302,281,591, against $1,410,071,874 and $1,327,385,071 for the similar periods in 1914 and 1913, respectively. Exports for the same months this year totaled $2,529,575,095 compared with $1,467,401,989 last year and $1,733,422,158 two years ago. A larger percentage is shown among the imports of factory materials. Among the exports a great increase is shown in manufactured goods, especially in cotton wearing apparel, boots and shoes, commercial automobiles, wire, firearms and explosives, refined sugar, harness and saddles, aeroplanes, and woolen goods.

Some Advantages Here.

While much is said about the phenomenal increase in the exports of this country under the conditions created by the war, there is at the same time manifested a fear that with the termination of hostilities the domestic industries will be in rather worse shape than in the ante-bellum days. Those who really and honestly feel that way, as distinguished from the insincere ones who are trying to use apprehensions as a basis for getting higher tariffs, leave out of their calculations certain undoubted advantages that have accrued. Some of these advantages are already apparent. The principal of them are in the lessons in efficiency which the industries of the country are getting by their novel experiences and the utilization of waste or hitherto unused materials which have always been at hand and which only needed the spur of necessity to be made use of. In the machine shops, metal-working establishments, and textile mills as they are now run may be found examples of standardizing that are new, but that have come to stay and to be fruitful in reducing production costs and improving the quality of products for all time to come. Of greater moment is the using of things heretofore not availed of. The reclaiming of benzol and toluol for dyes and other purposes has been referred to, and so have also the efforts to obtain potash from Pacific kelp, the alunite of Utah, and feldspar. But there has been further progress made in the manufacture of chemicals of divers kinds, including those derived from the destructive distillation of wood, for which the tree stumps afford an exhaustless supply of raw material, and in employing the native ores of baryta. The fact is, it seems to have needed only the deprivation of many things that have usually been imported to set in motion successful efforts for making them here.

Federal Trade Commission.

Nothing has been heard recently from the Federal Trade Commission, and it is taken for granted that this body is trying to formulate suggestions in the matter of combinations for export trade. As is well known, a number of hearings were had on this subject in different parts of the country with a view of getting a consensus of opinion from business interests. Not all the opinions obtained were alike. Since the time when the hearings were closed the commission has been hearing from different interests. Various trade organizations, such as the canners, hardware manufacturers, and the like, have endeavored to canvass their own memberships in order to discover how the matter appeals to them. It is conceded that the establishment of joint selling agencies abroad will not be in conflict with the anti-trust laws, and there are some even who contend that no form of combination in export trade would be so, the laws having been devised solely for the protection of the domestic consumers. When it comes to imports, however, it is regarded as certain that the commission will urge the enactment of stringent anti-dumping provisions unless this matter is taken in charge by the Department of Commerce.

FOREIGN GOODS BY PARCEL POST

Shipments Coming So in Large Quantity from Germany and Austria-Hungary.

One of the marked commercial transformations wrought by the European war is the almost complete change in the character of merchandise being brought into this country through the medium of the foreign parcel post service. This service is now effective between the United States and some fourteen foreign countries. Up to the time of the outbreak of the war the parcel post was used to a large extent by persons for the exchange of gifts, and, of course, for more or less limited commercial transactions.

During the first few months of the conflict abroad, except for temporary interference with steamship service when war was declared, the general character of imports sent here remained unchanged. This situation, however, began to undergo a transformation shortly after the announcement early this year of Great Britain's embargo on non-contraband merchandise of German and Austro-Hungarian origin. The kinds of things formerly sent over by parcel post began to fall off, and in their place German and Austro-Hungarian shippers started in to use this service to make commercial deliveries of merchandise which, on account of the enemy embargo, could no longer be shipped in the regular way as freight.

As time has gone on, the parcel post has been utilized more and more for commercial delivery of goods until at the present time the imports entered in this manner have assumed the largest proportions in the history of the service. Parcel post mails now being received at this port are taxing the capacity of the Post Office and Appraiser's Stores forces. Besides the phenomenal imports coming to New York are proportionately large consignments for Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, San Francisco and many other leading cities of the country. Nathaniel G. Schlamm, Assistant Appraiser of the Second Division of Appraiser Sague's office, who has the actual examination of the parcel post entries, said yesterday that, notwithstanding the rush of merchandise imports, the packages were handled expeditiously by the postal and customs men with the result that deliveries are made to merchants much more promptly than would be the case were the goods shipped as freight.

Mr. Schlamm said that the parcel post is unloaded in most ocean steamers on to the Post Office tender as the vessels arrive at Quarantine, or as the liner proceeds up the bay to her pier. Frequently, he said, the shipments are in the Appraiser's Stores before the vessel bringing the consignment across the ocean reaches her pier. As soon as the packages arrive at the stores they are turned over to John McKenna, representing the Post Office Deparement, and Stephen Williams of the Customs Service.

Mr. Williams said yesterday that, in cases where parcel post packages do not exceed $100 in value, they are passed by the force in his department. If valued at a larger sum, they are sent to the regular Customs Examiners, according to their respective lines. Thus, fur imported by parcel post goes to the regular examiner of furs, similar procedure being followed all along the line. After the contents of the packages have been ascertained and duties fixed, the importer is notified that delivery will be made upon payment of the rates fixed by the Appraiser.

"At the present time," said Mr. Williams, "we are receiving very heavy importations of furs, skins, gloves, wearing apparel, musical instruments, beaded articles and other goods by parcel post. Contrary to general impression, dyestuffs are not coming through the parcel post in anything like the quantities imagined by some persons. There were actually more imports of this kind before the war than at present. Just now we are getting something like 200 packages per month of dyestuffs, 90 per cent. of which are shipped from Germany. These packages, as in the case of all parcel post shipments, do not exceed eleven pounds, the universal weight limit under the international postal agreement.

"Foreign shippers shut off by the British embargo from making their shipments by freight hit upon the parcel post as a safe medium for continuing their business relations with American firms, their theory being that the Allies would hesitate to hold up Uncle Sam's mails. So far their judgment has been vindicated. Thus encouraged they are sending heavier shipments weekly by the parcel post. In fact, individual firms in this city are now receiving by single steamers as parcel post matter as many as 700 packages from German houses.

"These heavy consignments are chiefly furs, laces, and gloves. These three lines are making a new record as parcel post matter. During September, for instance, parcel post packages received at this port numbered 19,527, against 5,773 the same month last year. From Jan. 1 to Oct. 1 this office passed 162,859 packages. As parcel post packages for five States are examined and appraised here it will be seen that the merchandise reaches many firms in other cities. The States covered by the local inspection are New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Vermont. In addition heavy parcel post mails are passing through this port for Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, San Francisco, and other points where examinations are made."

While it was not possible to obtain a statement giving the value of parcel post matter examined at this port to date for the year, it is believed to be greatly in excess of the same period last year, owing to the very pronounced commercial character now attaching to such imports. The figures when compiled will, it is said, run well into the millions. Individual packages of gold leaf, gold heads for fountain pens, laces, furs, and gloves are now commonly ranging from $3,000 to $5,000 each in value, while not a few run still higher.

As indicative of the change that has come over the character of parcel post matter, an official cited the fact that Italian imports by parcel post have materially declined of late, due to the war. Whereas formerly this medium of transportation was used on a large scale by Italians to send cheese, macaroni, olive oil, bologna, and other articles to this country as gifts to friends, this movement is at a complete standstill. The same thing, it was said, has been observed in shipments from all other European countries.

According to Appraiser Sague, the foreign countries using the parcel post mail most extensively are, in their order, Germany, England, Denmark, Sweden, and Norway. One thing in connection with the entry of parcel post packages Foreman Williams is proud of is that, during the six years he has represented the Appraiser's office in the examination of parcel post packages, not one has been lost.

How the parcel post came to the relief of business houses here after the British embargo became effective was told by an importer having German connections. This man said:

"As soon as the British started in to make regular importations practically impossible, our firm instructed shippers in Germany to try the parcel post. We figured out that this method could be depended upon to be safe as well as expeditious. Our expectations have been more than fulfilled. In fact, the plan has resulted in our getting merchandise quicker than by ordinary freight. Goods have actually reached our store from a week to ten days earlier than would have been the case had they come by freight.

"The parcel post packages are passed rapidly by the Post Office and Customs men, while the postal charges cut no figure when goods are as badly wanted as is the case at present. These charges for an eleven-pound package from Germany are only a little over three marks, while from England the rate is 3 shillings 6 pence. Our firm, as well as others, intend to import merchandise by parcel post after the war, since this method has proved so satisfactory in the present emergency."

BRITISH TAKING TO READY-TO-WEAR

Custom Tailors Lose Ground—Little Probability of the Clothing Coming Here.

The great development of the ready-made clothing trade in England was recently made the subject of a lecture to the classes in the south of Scotland Technical College, Galashiels, by Dr. Thomas Oliver, the President, and is reported in substance by Consul Rufus Fleming, stationed at Edinburgh.

Manufacturing clothiers in this market who were acquainted with the details of the ready-to-wear industry in England and the progress made, agreed that if the British manufacturers improve their product and set themselves earnestly to the task of supplying this country with the cheaper grades of clothing they might offer serious competition.

The new conditions in clothing manufacture in Scotland were thus described by Dr. Oliver:

"Thirty years ago, Glasgow was a very important centre of distribution of wool cloths for the tailoring trade, but the merchant trade of Glasgow has largely disappeared, owing to so many of the firms taking up the ready-made line. The rise of the ready-to-wear branch of the industry has been a strong temptation to the economical buyer. If he can buy a satisfactory suit at 25s ($5.08) to 30s ($7.30,) there is little likelihood that he will invest £3 ($14.60) to £4 ($19.46) in a suit. So a tailoring business which at one time employed about forty hands is now reduced to, say, three men, while the clothier is everywhere in evidence, offering the ready-to-wear garments. Some of these are marvelous productions. Last year, before the war, a firm in Leith was offering suits made to measure at 15s ($3.65) from cloth on view in the shop. The cloth was not the old-fashioned article, with cotton warp and weft, but consisted of a twist made up of woolen and cotton threads in both warp and weft, and was a good imitation of a fancy woolen cloth.

"Last month another city I saw that one tailor was offering a very fair production at 16s 11d, ($4.11), made to measure. I handled the cloth and, even allowing that the price was a special offer during the cheap sale period, I cannot figure out where the profits came in to the various firms concerned. Division of labor is now in greater evidence than in the manufacture of clothing. In the recent boom in army requirements clothing firms have been constrained to sublet part of their contracts. They have allowed subcontractors 5s 6d, ($1.34), per overcoat, and about the same price for a suit, for the making, with material supplied. Before the war lower prices were obtained.

"A method which is gaining ground in the provincial towns is for tailors, instead of ordering cloth from the merchants, to send the measurements of their customers to the clothing manufacturers, who in a few days send back to the tailor the finished garment. The tailor may make any slight alteration required, and the customer is under the impression that the suit is made on the tailor's premises. The system has the advantage that the garments are well made and allow a tailor with a small knowledge of the business to get along without engaging an experienced cutter, and he is not burdened with keeping a number of tailors who would be only irregularly employed according as the fluctuations of the season imposed. The same system has also been introduced in some departments of furs, leather apparel, musical instruments, beaded articles and other goods by parcel post. Contrary to general impression, dyestuffs are not coming through the parcel post in anything like the quantities imagined by some persons. There are actually more imports of this kind before the war than at present. Just now we are getting something like 200 packages per month of dyestuffs, 90 per cent. of which are shipped from Germany. LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Swivels, Wash Blue, and Other Articles Are Classified.

The Oppenheimer Brussel Importing Company was sustained yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in the claim that imitation jet jewelry in the form of brooches was properly dutiable under the Tariff act of 1909 at 45 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for manufactures of paste. The Collector was reversed in taking duty at 60 per cent. ad valorem as "jewelry."

Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher lost in a contention that metal swivels are dutiable at the rate of 20 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for manufactures of metal not specially provided for. It was claimed by the Collector that the swivels were suitable for use in the manufacture of chains valued under 20 cents per dozen pieces. Duty was accordingly taken at the rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem. The board's decision said that the testimony of the customs examiner convinced the tribunal that the proper rate had been taken by the Collector, since the articles were without question parts of chains.

The Acker, Merrall & Condit Company was sustained in the claim that ultramarine blue put up in the form of balls about three-quarters of an inch in diameter was dutiable at 15 per cent. ad valorem under the specific provision for "ultramarine blue and wash blue containing ultramarine." On account of the form in which the merchandise was put up, the Collector held the goods to be "similar" to pills and tablets, and exacted duty at 25 per cent. ad valorem. A reliquidation was ordered.

Adverse action was taken by the board on protests by the Mexican Hardwood Lumber Company, Los Angeles, relating to the wood known as juanacosta. Part of the importation was assessed for duty at the rate of 15 per cent. ad valorem, under the tariff act of 1909, and the rest, under the tariff act of 1913, at the rate of 10 per cent., under the present tariff as cabinet wood. The importer claimed that the rate under the old tariff should have been $1.25 per 1,000 feet board measure, while that brought in under the present law was free of duty as rough lumber. Judge McClelland said in his decision for the board that the testimony showed the wood in question was used for making doors, office furniture, buffets, bookcases, railings, and largely for trim. On this account, the Collector was affirmed.

The board sustained the claim of importers that certain scouring bricks are dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem as earthy or mineral substances. The Collector was reversed in taking duty at 25 per cent. on manufactures of pumice stone. The importers included R. J. Waddell & Co., Gallagher & Ascher, and J. W. Hampton, Jr., & Co.

AT FALL RIVER MILLS.

Both Buyers and Sellers Indifferent During the Week.

FALL RIVER, Oct. 23.—The indifferent attitude of both buyers and manufacturers assisted in making conditions quiet in the cotton cloth market this week. Reports from the South were to the effect that business was fairly active and a fair volume of goods was sold. Invariably prices are lower in the South than in the North and, on this account, Northern manufacturers are some times placed at a disadvantage. It is reported that some styles were sold in the South during the week at an eighth of a cent per yard lower than would be accepted by the mills of New England.

There was no disposition on the part of Fall River millmen to shade prices and, unless a decided weakness is manifested in the near future, there will be no reduction. Some of the mills were not provided with a sufficient supply of cotton when the commodity went up, and the increase in the demand for cotton cloth made it necessary for them to come into the market and buy for their requirements. Most are still opposed to doing business beyond the end of the current year because millmen do not know just what changes will occur in the market between now and then.

Buyers confined their attention for the most part this week to purchasing cloth in 36 and 38½-inch widths and some of the individual orders were fairly large. The week closed with the demand moderate and prices well maintained. The total sales for the week are estimated at 120,000 pieces, of which about 50,000 pieces are spots.

RAW SILK MARKETS.

The General Tendency Is Upward, Especially at Yokohama.

The Yokohama raw silk market is very excited, and prices are advancing rapidly on account of a very large demand from both Europe and America. The visible stock is now estimated at 8,500 bales.

The Canton market is quieter, according to reports received here by A. P. Villa & Bros., but reelers are very firm in their pretensions, and will not come down one cent on their price. They take this independent stand on account of the crop shortage, as well as the increasing demand for Japanese silk. Shanghai also reports a quieter market for all grades of silk, but prices are holding their own.

The Italian market, on the other hand, has become more active, and reelers have increased prices on all kinds of silks. Late cables report that the tendency is still upward. In this city business continues active at stronger prices.

An Appeal to be Taken.

The Treasury Department has decided to carry the question of the classification of metal thread goods imported under the present tariff to the United States Court of Customs Appeals for final determination. Certain trimmings or ornaments composed in chief value of metal threads were held by the Board of General Appraisers in August not to be dutiable at 60 per cent. ad valorem as assessed by the Collector. According to the board, the preponderance of evidence in the case before the lower tribunal showed that some of the items were ribbons or beltings. It was therefore held that the importations were dutiable at only 40 per cent. Assistant Secretary Peters yesterday requested Assistant Attorney General Hanson to file an application for an appeal with the court.

Have a New Bagging Fibre.

Experiments are being carried on in Cuba, according to a commerce report, with a fibre of a plant locally known as "malva blanca," which is said to produce an ideal fabric for sugar bags. According to the Havana correspondent of Sugar, the fibre is soft and silky, possesses a tensile strength greater than hemp, is capable of close weaving, and is not susceptible to shrinkage if wet. No special machines are required for handling the fibre, those adapted for spinning and weaving hemp, jute, or henequen being suitable for malva blanca.

PATTERNS ARE NOW CAUSING BOTHER

Objections of Retailers to the Methods and Contracts They Must Stand For.

The long-standing opposition to certain features of the dress pattern business as it is now conducted has come to a head, and several retail organizations are investigating pattern contracts for the purpose of making desirable changes. The Indiana Retail Dry Goods Association has in its possession the contracts of 40 per cent. of its membership, and the Ohio Merchants' Association has also asked for the contracts made by its members with the pattern companies. The agitation for a more simplified form of contract and the elimination of the stringent conditions imposed by the companies has been taken up by the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Objection to the methods of the pattern makers is taken on three grounds by the retail stores. They are the form of the contracts, the mail-order advertising displayed in the fashion magazines supplied to the stores for free distribution, and the large stock of discarded patterns which a store must carry to live up to its contract.

While dress patterns continued to exercise a beneficial influence on the sale of dress goods and accessories, the conditions imposed by the pattern companies were not so strongly opposed. Now that sales of ready to wear have completely overshadowed the business in materials for home dressmaking, the retailers believe the change should bring more lenient terms from the pattern makers.

The average retailer will compare the pattern contract to a lease. There are two or three pages of finely printed matter written in the most complicated legal phraseology. The pattern salesman will tell the merchant that the many clauses, "wherebys" and "whereofs" are put in for the retailer's protection. There are several forms of contracts, it seems, and it depends altogether on how close the retailer scrutinizes the terms whether he makes a favorable bargain or not. If a lawyer is called in to examine the document, it may happen that the merchant in the end may be permitted to write his own contract. It is certain that the collection of contracts in the possession of the Indiana Retail Dry Goods Association is most diversified in nature. It is also understood that the salesman for the pattern house is furnished with three or four contracts, any one of which he may see fit to saddle on the unsuspecting retailer.

The advertising of mail order houses in the fashion publications, which the stores are called upon to distribute, has been the main point of contention raised by the store owners. The merchants themselves may be very broadminded, but they are not so altruistic as to help their competitors to do business. These fashion publications are taken with the understanding that the styles illustrated and described will bring business to the dress goods and accessory departments. In these publications are advertised the "leaders" of the mail-order houses. A dress or waist is shown at a very low price. If the mail-order house were to confine that garment to very large quantities it would lose considerable money. The plan, however, is to answer the customer's order for the "leader" with a letter setting forth the desire of the house that the catalogue "sent under separate cover," containing a larger collection of styles, be examined before final choice is made. It is sometimes very difficult to buy a "leader." The comparison, however, between the article advertised by the mail-order house in the fashion publication and a similar article carried by the store which distributes the publication is frequently very unfavorable to the store.

The fashion periodical is supposed to be sold to the store at cost, the pattern companies taking their profit on patterns alone and on the fashion magazines sold through an agency in the store. But, from an investigation of the cost of printing and workmanship, one retailer claims he has, where a pattern company makes a yearly profit of $60,000 on this item alone.

The subscriptions taken for the fashion magazines by the store agents amount to a good deal and, the retailers believe, should carry some weight with the pattern companies in the matter of relieving the merchants of burdensome contracts. Two stores in Indianapolis have turned in close to 1,000 subscriptions during a year's time. The argument of the pattern houses is, of course, that everything that tends to create a demand should be welcomed by the retailers. The answer given to this by the merchants is that the time when patterns were powerful stimulants to the demand has passed. A certain amount of benefit is derived from the pattern department now, but nowhere like that of former years. These changing conditions should also bring a change in the methods employed by the pattern companies. The stores claim they should not be compelled to carry large stocks of discarded patterns when there is seldom any call for the old designs. When the styles did not follow one upon another as they do at the present time there might have been some excuse for the pattern houses deciding that the retailer should carry an adequate stock of back numbers.

Men's Novelties Liked.

One of the features of the hosiery trade at the moment is the extent to which novelties for men are selling for the holiday season. A wide variety of striped and clocked hose, in black and white, and in colors, is offered. The retail prices of the most popular goods range from 50 cents to $1.50 a pair.

Methods Count, Not Location.

That many unsuccessful shoe retailers are wrong when they blame for their failures, instead of themselves, the neighborhood in which their stores are located is the opinion of one of the best-posted shoe men in the country. He calls attention to the fact that the biggest retail concern in the world is situated at the extreme end of the shopping district of the city in which it is situated. It is further pointed out that a certain merchant in this city is located off the main shopping "route," but that he is continuing to do business on a large scale. A third pointer is that an excellent business is being done by a local shoe man whose place of business is located in the district largely devoted to the sale of farm produce. Proper merchandising is the secret, he says, of these successes and all others.

PARIS DRESSMAKERS IN PROTECTIVE UNION

Eight Prominent Houses Form a Syndicate to Prevent the Pirating of Models.

MEAN TO COPYRIGHT THEM

Eighty Models Are to be Exhibited in a Comedy Here Written for the Purpose.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—The war has just brought about an offensive and defensive union of the great French cotourieres. Forgetting their previous rivalries, eight leaders of fashion have completed the formation of a "syndicate for the protection of French dressmaking," to enforce their rules on foreign buyers, and, in particular, to prevent the copying or pirating of their models by foreign houses. This they purpose to accomplish by copyrighting each model, the same as if it were a picture or book.

Under the Presidency of Paul Poiret and the Vice Presidency of Jacques Worth, with Philippe Ortiz as the American representative, the houses of Callot, Doucet, Lanvin, Jenny, Worth, Bianchini-Ferier, Bremet and Poiret will inaugurate a striking campaign with new methods in New York, which is the only great market comparatively unaffected by the war. They are sending a collection of eighty models (ten from each house) on the Rochambeau, leaving tomorrow, to be exhibited at the Ritz-Carlton on Nov. 22 in a half-hour, one-act comedy in English, written by Roger Boutet de Monvel, son of the famous artist, who also sails on the Rochambeau to superintend the mounting of the piece.

The comedy is entitled "Talking Rags," and is written around the return of a young American heiress from a visit to the Rue de la Paix with her chaperon. She describes her purchases to envious friends, thus creating the opportunity for the introduction of the names of the houses belonging to the syndicate and the various models which will be worn by American actresses. Mme. Raimonde Fernandez, described as the best-dressed woman in Parisian society, sails on the Rochambeau in charge of the dresses, which represent a high mark in French creative art. All the models are new, and represent the masterpieces of the eight houses.

Although the styles conform generally to those shown here in August, there are several striking new features, a further advance toward crinolines being one of the most notable. There is also a successful rehaulitation of the charmeuse frock by Bianchini-Ferier, the creator of this particular style.

All the receipts from the comedy, which will be given ten times, at five matinées and three soirées, will be given to the Orphelinat de la Couture for children of the employes of the dressmaking trade who have been killed in the war or died in poor circumstances during their employment. The eighty models will probably be sold at auction after the week's performances for the benefit of the Orphelinat. Some of these will be shown with hats by Poiret and Lanvin, others with cloaks, coats, &c.

In addition to eight dressmakers there will be three other members of the syndicate who are closely connected with the trade as manufacturers of materials, trimmings, &c., Messrs. Wormser & Boulanger, Rodier and Vogel.

The syndicate's trademark is the Rheims Cathedral in flames—a symbol of their fight against the Germans. Those counterfeits first brought discredit upon French dressmaking.

M. Poiret is the founder and originator of the scheme which is expected to cause a stir in the dressmaking trade, for the syndicate declines flatly to do business on any conditions with buyers representing houses who refuse to conform to the rule that henceforth all persons copying models must pay for the right of reproduction.

"For the first time," says M. Poiret, "Paris dressmakers take definite rank as genuine workers of art."

The houses interested think the scheme will be well received, as it will not only benefit private buyers, but also insure against unfair competition that bothers leading American houses who wish to do an honest business in selling exact copies of the real Paris models and have been forced to compete with a host of fictitious copies, masquerading under the names of Callot, Doucet, Jenny, &c.

Furthermore, the new scheme will reduce the cost to buyers, it is held. In cases where formerly all buyers, private or professional, paid, say a thousand francs ($200) for a gown, henceforth the private buyer will pay seven hundred francs ($140) and the professionals the same, plus three hundred francs ($60) for the right to copy the model. Thus the former makes an immediate saving, while the latter pays a duty on seven hundred instead of a thousand, naturally not paying any duty on the copyright.

The new system is thus fairer to the Paris houses and also saves the customers' money and protects them against firms who recopy models bought in Paris without having the expense of sending an expert across the ocean.

In addition to refusing to deal with any save those accepting their rules the syndicate intends to take vigorous action against all houses selling dresses as Paris models under the names of the various French houses, unless they have previously bought the copyright. Such a course will defend the syndicate's legitimate clients against home competition and will also, the projectors say, prevent price-cutting and the debasement of artistic work.

NEW BANKRUPTCY CHARGE.

Where the Leased Department of a Store Showed Profits.

That the owners of a department store in which departments are leased to outside interests are liable for damages in case of insolvency, in event of the leased departments showing profit, is the substance of a decision that has just been handed down by Judge Brown of the United States District Court in Milwaukee. The case which resulted in this decision was brought by the Dorsen Company of this city and Bridgeport, Conn., against Lefly's, a corporation operating a department store in Milwaukee.

In 1913 the Dorsen Company leased the cloak and suit and housefurnishing departments at Lefly's for five years, with an optional extension of five years more, and conducted these departments profitably until the store failed in 1914. Following the failure, the Dorsen Company sued for $250,000 damages in the cloak and suit department and for $63,000 in the housefurnishing department. As both of these departments had been conducted profitably by the lessees during the eleven months that the business continued after the departments were leased, Judge Brown ruled that damages of this nature were provable in bankruptcy and appointed Judge John F. Harper a Special Master to look further into the merits of the case. After complete examination of the books Judge Harper reported that the Dorsen Company was entitled to damages amounting to $76,000 for the cloak and suit business and $26,125 for the housefurnishing department.

So far as known, this is the first time that such a matter has been brought up in the courts, and the decision is expected to attract widespread attention. The Dorsen side of the case was presented by Glickman, Gold & Corrigan.

Germany's Wine Production.

According to Vice Consul General E. L. Ives, Cologne, official statistics show that the German wine crop of 1914 amounted to 24,335,327 gallons, against 26,647,735 gallons in 1913. The former is the second smallest vintage since 1893, the smallest, 22,352,494 gallons, being recorded in 1910. The average value per gallon, 41 cents, was the smallest since 1909, when it was 33 cents.

GAINED A CUSTOMER

But the Exporter Had First to Pay for Carelessness.

Writing in a commerce report, Special Agent Garrard Harris says in part: "Just a bit of bad judgment or a lack of information may turn a bargain in New York or New Orleans into a disastrous loss in one of the Central American republics. For instance, some time ago a dealer in one of these countries received from the United States a shipment of leaf tobacco packed in zinc-lined cases, instead of the customary bales. The difference in freight and duties amounted to $300. This was a total and unnecessary loss, and the Central American was much concerned over it, as it was his first order to the house and he did not know what would be done about the matter.

"The American Consul was consulted, and he took the subject up in a friendly and unofficial way, with the result that the firm shipping the tobacco acknowledged its fault in not ascertaining that the duty on tobacco was on the gross weight instead of ad valorem and that the packing cases had to be paid for the same as the tobacco. The American firm stood the loss. The outcome has been that many repeat orders have been obtained from the exercise of this sense of justice. The Central American is convinced of the entire "squareness" of his dealer, and the latter has found out how to do business profitably and eliminate all causes for complaint.

"Doubtless the firm shipping the tobacco was trying to do the right thing in the first instance and protect the tobacco from climatic changes or the like, but it was at fault in not ascertaining the tariff requirements of the country to which the shipment was destined."

Cranberry Crop Is Short.

Those who like cranberry sauce with their Thanksgiving turkey will probably have to pay more for this delicacy this year than last. Returns from a special inquiry made of cranberry growers in the three principal producing States by the Government Department of Agriculture on Aug. 15, supplemented by the regular reports of Sept. 1, give a probable production in Massachusetts of about 203,000 barrels, or 55 per cent. of last year's bumper crop of 475,000 barrels. The New Jersey crop will probably amount to 139,000 barrels, or a decrease of 7 per cent. from last year, while the crop in Wisconsin is estimated at 39,000 barrels, which is an increase of 25 per cent. over the 1914 total. The probable total for the three States is about 439,000 barrels, against 653,000 barrels last year.

SEES TRADE FIGHT AFTER BIG WAR ENDS

National City Bank Warns Americans to be Prepared for Commercial Contest.

IT SUGGESTS NEW TREATIES

Points Out That Tariff May Have to be Revised and Anti-Dumping Laws May Be Required.

What will be the status of international trade at the close of the war? To what extent must the new order of things be met in this country by new tariff measures, and by new commercial treaties? What particular conditions will face the world if Germany wins the war, and what will be the conditions if the Allies win?

These questions are being seriously considered by big American manufacturers and merchants and by the big mercantile and banking associations. There is no precedent for the situation facing this country, and it is probable that the adjusters of the coming new trade relations must solve some of the questions on mere theories. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is busy gathering information which will be useful when new commercial treaties are to be formulated, and the National Foreign Trade Council is getting first hand information.

The National City Bank is agitating a greater discussion of the solution of the expected trade war. In the current issue of The Americas, published by this bank, there appears an analysis of the conditions which, it is asserted, are likely to result in many changes in the tariff and commercial treaties of the world. Particular attention is given to the place of the United States in the coming trade war, and it is contended that this country must be wide awake to adjust itself to new conditions.

America Cannot Escape.

"The United States can probably no more keep out of the coming readjustment of tariffs than we could keep out of the financial and commercial turmoil of the war itself," says the publication of the National City Bank. "Many manufacturers are beginning to urge the necessity of some measure to protect our industries in case of a flood of dumping of cheap goods that they expect will mark the mobilization of a world-wide trade war to follow the military peace. Some say we must have a higher tariff. Others urge merely some effective emergency provision. This they desire for the protection of our home market. At the same time a strong agitation is now rising among business leaders interested in the development of foreign trade for the Government to begin the negotiation of commercial treaties in order to obtain for our exports a fair competitive field abroad, if not some favors. The negotiations of an up-to-date commercial treaty, such as Germany, France, Austria, Italy, Russia or Japan have found advantageous to their trade, might involve some changes in the form of our own tariff. It is not unlikely that we are entering an important public discussion both of tariff and of commercial diplomacy."

It is pointed out in the article that England's long-time policy of free trade may be overruled as a consequence of the big war. England has already made many changes in her tariff rules. Primarily, of course, duties are demanded in order to increase the war funds and reduce extravagance in luxuries. But these changes, supported by British manufacturers, may prove an opening wedge to a permanent change of policy. It is taken for granted in some quarters in England that the German industries which rely for existence on export trade are producing goods in enormous amounts, not for present consumption, but in order to dump cheap goods into the markets of the world after the war.

According to a recent statement of The London Morning Post, which is quoted in the article in The Americas, the German Government is subsidizing its export industries for the express purpose of accumulating reserves for the future dumping process. England, it is argued, can offset such a course by making favorable commercial treaties with the countries now fighting with her against Germany and Austria. An economic alliance for the permanent exclusion of German and Austrian trade with the Allies is not considered probable by the writer of the article, but he points out that the Allies will have closer relations after the war than they ever had before and that this condition will continue for years.

"In Germany," says the article, "the business interests expect that with a triumph of German arms the Government will not only force from the defeated Allies an enormous indemnity but will see to it that the 'economic alliance' that can injure German trade is possible. If she is in a position to do so Germany will obtain commercial treaties with all such as she obtained from Russia in 1905, with brusque persuasion.

"On the other hand those who are in a position to watch the development of the position among the Allies on this subject say that Germany's military and economic position when she seeks peace will make a great difference in the foreign commercial policies of all the nations. The angry threats and the economic alliance that will isolate Germany for all time have generally given way to cooler judgment in England, in Russia, and in France. The leaders who will probably have most to do with forming the new trade arrangements, in Russia and in France, realize the intelligent admission that their country's industries will handicap themselves greatly if certain lines of commercial intercourse between them and Germany are not resumed after the war. If sheer exhaustion should bring the war to an end with nobody satisfied, popular demand might force an economic isolation of Germany."

BANKING ON COLD WINTER.

This Is Indicated by the Orders Put In for "Fire Goods."

The sale of what are known as fire goods, that is stoves and furnishings, pokers, tongs, coal hods, stove boards, and the like, is always a gamble with the weather so far as the retail dealer is concerned. Both the wholesaler and the retailer must place their orders far in advance if they are to have the goods when needed. So they consult all the oracles from the Weather Bureau to the oldest inhabitants, learn whether the squirrels are burying more than the usual amount of nuts, if the husks on the corn are thicker or thinner than last year, then shut their eyes and order the goods, trusting to luck and to Providence to strike it right.

The volume of business depends largely upon two factors: the amount of goods carried over by the retailers from the previous season and the nature of the weather in November and early in December. An early cold snap, especially if severe and prolonged, means a great volume of buying by the householder. If, however, the cold weather be prolonged until after Christmas it apparently has no effect whatever upon business.

After Christmas, be the cold ever so pronounced, the consumer evidently makes up his mind to get along with such heating apparatus as he has for the remainder of the season rather than buy new ones. This year the whole body of the trade is banking on a cold Winter, judging from the volume of its buying. This judgment at least has the merit of consistency, since in general throughout the country the past three Winters have been rather mild and, in the general law of averages, a cold season is due.

SELL BLOOD TO EARN COLUMBIA DIPLOMA

Students Give Life Fluid for $30 an Ounce to Pay Way Through College.

CHARGE TO GO TO DANCES

Report Lists as "Work" Escorting Lonely Women to Theatre and Parties.

What a student will do to earn his way through college is shown in the report of student earnings at Columbia University made public yesterday by Paul C. Holder, Chairman of the appointment office. The students of the university last year reported earnings of $103,016.74, $40,000 less than earned the year before.

Some students who mastered the new dances turned their ability into teaching dancing classes and giving private lessons. Others of pleasing personality acted as dance escorts and called it work. Others who were skilled at tennis found that there were many people who would pay for lessons. There is no record of golf lessons being taught by the students.

Several students found that by tending furnaces they could earn their bread and butter, while others worked as waiters. Hospitals in the city found that many of the Columbia students were physically fitted to spare blood for transfusion. The price of the blood jumped from $4 an ounce to $30. There is a story that one student brought his sweetheart a Christmas present by selling some of his blood at the top-notch rate.

The outbreak of the war last year hit the students who were earning their way through college. They found it exceedingly difficult to get positions and many had to borrow money to go through and are having to work still harder this year to make up the deficit.

Several interesting conclusions are drawn by Mr. Holder in his report, based upon several years of experience in finding employment for the students as well as placing graduates in permanent positions. One conclusion is that too small a percentage of graduates receive commercial training. Many calls come from large companies asking for skilled stenographers at $1,500 to start and to fill other important commercial lines. Columbia is meeting this need this year by the establishing of business courses for the seniors in the college who intend to go into business.

Many pointers for the youth who is considering coming to New York to attend Columbia, or any other college, are contained in the report. Mr. Holder does not advocate any coming who cannot count upon $300 to see them through at least the first year.

"Each year hundreds of letters reach the office from every section of the country asking about possibilities for working one's way at Columbia," the report says. "These inquirers are usually informed that while there is a larger demand for temporary employment of every description in New York City than anywhere else, competition is also the keenest, no matter how menial the position. During the year prospective applicants have been warned about business conditions here in the Metropolis, and have been informed that they would very likely prove disappointing and continue so until matters assumed a decidedly different aspect, or until the war ended.

"Requests of all kinds come to the office. Some of the most striking during the past year have been those for life saving, moving picture actors, volunteers for blood transfusion, escort for dancing, dancing instructors, campaign speakers, tennis coaches, readers to the blind, as well as decorators of scenery. The most remunerative form has usually been found to be that of tutoring and companion.

"The total earnings reported for the entire year, including the Summer, amount to $103,016.74, as compared to $141,735.11, for 1913-14; $37,238.11 was earned through the aid of the office, $65,784.63 independently. Of the amount earned with the help of the office $14,419.02 was reported as earned during the Summer vacation of 1914, and $22,834.09 during the academic year. Both of these sums amount approximately to less than one-half of the earnings reported during the corresponding periods of the previous year, showing the intensity of the dull situation.

"These figures, when analyzed, seem to indicate that the average student of the college today is an older and more mature man than the one of former years, more so than most undergraduates whose homes are in New York City or within commuting distance. He can not or does not desire to look to his parents for the expense of his education."

In referring to the placing of women graduates the report states:

"An excellent aid in crystalizing and emphasizing the opportunities for women has been the Committee for Women Graduate Students, which was appointed last year. With the indorsement of the committee, a letter and announcement cards were sent out through the office to universities and colleges, as well as many other public and private institutions employing women in their staff, calling attention to the fact that each year finds an increasing number of graduate women available for permanent teaching, as well as secretarial positions. The number of replies received embodying expressions of interest clearly shows the value other attach to this phase of our work.

"Some of the largest and most important companies, both in and outside of the city, representing every line of business, have called upon the appointment office for men and women to fill important posts. The frequency with which this is being done reveals the fact that there is an ever-growing demand for the college-bred man and woman with brains and ability to apply them."

EXTENSION CLASSES GROW.

Columbia Registers 1,000 More Students Than Last Year.

Supplementary registration figures of the Extension Department of Columbia given out yesterday show 3,500, an increase of 1,000 students over the figures of last year. It is expected that the total for the year will exceed 6,000, against 5,000 last year.

A marked increase is noted in the extra mural centres at Trenton, N. J.; Scranton, Pa.; Jersey City, Freeport, Bridgeport, Conn., and East Orange. There are nearly 1,000 students registered in these centres.

A surprising number of students have registered for the course in spoken Russian, under the direction of Mr. Andreyevsky, and other students are taking courses in spoken Arabic, Chinese, English, French, German, Irish, Hebrew, Portuguese, Rumanian, and Spanish.

A new course has been offered in Income Tax Procedure, under which the Federal law will be analyzed.

ORDERS COTTON INQUIRY.

Southern Buyers Combine to Depress Prices, Trade Board Is Told.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The Federal Trade Commission today ordered an investigation of charges that combinations of cotton buyers exist in North and South Carolina and Georgia to depress the price of cotton.

"This investigation," the commission announced, "has been undertaken at the instance of Commissioner W. J. Harris, to whose attention complaints have come that such a combination does exist. This information is that for years past in the three States in question, and more particularly in the two Carolinas, there have been varying prices for cotton, often this difference amounting to one-half cent a pound in two points not more than twenty miles distant from each other.

"This difference in price, it is alleged, seems to be the sole result of the workings of this combination. For instance, it is cited, many cities and towns have practically no live market, due to the fact that divisions of territory for buying purposes are made, one territory belonging to one buyer, another territory to another. These alleged practices are said to be confined to certain places indicated in the complaint, to a greater extent, possibly, than to other points within the States specified."

COMMODITIES PRICES.

The largest number of changes in a long time was shown in Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices last week, ninety-nine of the 322 items listed having gone up or down. Another feature was the strength of the list generally, the advances outnumbering the declines by nearly three to one or, actually, by seventy-three to twenty-six.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on forty-three standard commodities last week in this city, unless otherwise specified. They are corrected to Oct. 22, and with them are given comparative prices for the previous week and the corresponding week last year:

*New crop.

From the viewpoint of the actual number of changes, the combined drug, chemical, dyestuffs, and oils markets headed the list. In these markets, which are unusually unsettled, there were thirty-eight changes, of which all but nine were upward. Most of them, however, were without interest.

The metals markets were also unsettled and firmer, thirteen of the fifteen changes being upward. In fact, the only items in this part of the list to ease off in price were lake and electrolytic coppers. In iron and steel the crude materials were firmly held at recent levels, while advances were recorded on such finished products as billets, rods, bars, tank plates, beams, angles, &c. All of the mills are reported well supplied with business, many of them refusing to book orders ahead at prevailing figures. Furnace coke, for prompt shipment, advanced still further, while in the minor metals advances were shown by Asiatic antimony, spelter, and tin.

While they contributed fewer changes than usual to the list, the foodstuffs markets made a strong showing for the week. In them the advances just doubled the declines. Under the influence of lower wheat, prices on new Spring and Winter patent flour declined, but the Spring and Winter clear grades showed no change either way. In the major provisions at Chicago live beef and mess pork were unchanged, while prime lard, live sheep, and short ribs advanced and live hogs declined. Bacon eased off somewhat here.

Quite liberal receipts, coupled with only a moderate demand, resulted in lower prices on the better grades of butter, but the other sorts were steady to higher. Cheese was firmly maintained at recent prices, while a good demand for all grades of eggs resulted in better quotations. The vegetable market showed signs of added firmness, while there was little weakness to complain of in the fresh or dried fruits. In the coffee market there were no changes shown, but low Japan tea advanced and fair Formosa dropped off. Both the principal grades of raw sugar were higher, as was fine granulated. Fine granulated, however, is still 75 cents a barrel cheaper than at this time a year ago.

In the grain markets the declines were contributed by wheat and oats and the advances by corn, rye, new malting barley, and prime timothy hay. In the hide market three declines were the feature, No. 1 Texas, No. 1 heavy cows, and No. 1 buff hides being the only ones to show change. Tannery run union backs and belting butts, were the only leathers to change, and they were both higher. The week's remaining changes were declines on lightweight burlap and crude rubber, and advances on jute, turpentine, and tallow.

WHEAT.

After a week of steadily declining prices, the wheat market on Saturday showed further weakness, and at the close of the day values were 1¾ to 2⅜c net lower. In the local cash market No. 1 Durum was quoted at 1.07¼ free on board New York; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 1.01¾, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, 1.03, cost, insurance and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

The market for corn seemed reluctant to follow the decline in wheat during the greater part of the day, but toward the close prices broke sharply and final quotations were ½c to 1¼c net lower. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 76½c.

OATS.

The oats market declined ¼c to ⅝c under scattered selling prompted by liberal receipts and the decline in wheat and corn, but on the whole, the undertone was steady owing to firmness abroad and rumors of further export business. The local cash market was quiet. No. 3 white quoted at 40¼c to 41¼c; No. 4 white, 39½c to 40½c; ordinary to fancy clipped, 39¼c to 43½c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was quiet and after showing firmness early in the day on scattered buying prompted by light receipts of hogs, values eased off late in sympathy with the decline in grain. Total receipts of hogs at Western points were only 22,000. Chicago received 4,500, est mated for Monday 24,000 and for next week 110,000; Kansas City received 1,000 and Omaha 1,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was steady early in the day with comparatively light offerings prompted by firmness in the crude position. There was a noticeable scarcity of buying orders, however, and toward the close of the day the late months were under pressure of liquidation and final quotations were net unchanged to nine points lower. COFFEE.

The coffee market was quiet, total sales for the day aggregating 7,500 bags, and after a steady opening, when prices were 1 to 5 points higher, the market became somewhat irregular, and at the close was 5 points net lower to 3 points higher. The local spot market was steady and unchanged, with Rio 7s quoted at 7⅜c. Range of prices:

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 5,166 cases. The market closed steady to firm, but with the same very wide range of values as recently reported. High qualities, showing a good to large proportion of newlaid, are scarce and firm. The average good and lower qualities are still urgently offered, and, while accumulations have been somewhat reduced, there are still many unsold. Storage eggs still quiet, but the cooler weather gives a little better tone to the market. Near-by whites of uniform quality very scarce and firm; mixed and irregular qualities show wide range in value. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 38@37c; extra firsts, 35@35c; firsts, 28@32c; seconds, 24@27c; thirds and poorer, 20@23c; dirties, No. 1, 21½@22½c; No. 2 and poorer, 18@21c; checks, good to choice, dry, 20@21c; culls and inferior, 15@18c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, 26c; firsts, 24½@25½c; seconds, 23@24c; thirds or poorer, 20@22½c; State, Pennsylvania, and near-by hennery whites, fine to fancy, 52@53c; ordinary to good, 35@50c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 35@52c; Western, gathered whites, 33@38c; State, Pennsylvania, and near-by hennery browns, 38@40c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 28@37c; near-by refrigerator whites, 27@30c.

DYES FROM ECUADOR.

Consul General Frederic W. Goding, stationed at Guayaquil, Ecuador, has prepared a special report at the request of the Department of Commerce dealing with the dyeing materials produced in Ecuador. This report was obtained for the purpose of directing attention of American manufacturers of dyes to these products, some of which have been used by dyers for many years.

One of the Ecuadoran sources of color is orchilla, a lichen from which the coloring substances archil and litmus are obtained. The orchilla plants are present in such quantities that Ecuador can furnish 3,000 tons annually. Prices, however, have steadily advanced, as orchilla sold free on board Guayaquil for $41.55 per ton in 1912, at $48 last year, and in September last at $73 per ton. Another coloring product is achiote, known to the trade as as annatto, roucou, and oleana. This product, however, is of most importance as a coloring material for butter and cheese, being employed for that purpose in all dairying countries.

Cascol is the local name of a tree growing in the coastal districts of Ecuador, the pods of which contain black seeds about the size of a pea. From the seeds is extracted a strong, permanent reddish brown dye much used by the Indians and in the smaller tanneries for curing and tanning hides and skins. A permanent black is obtained from the nut within the alligator pear, called locally aguacate and avocado, which grows abundantly in Ecuador. A very good black, according to the report, is obtained from the berries of shrub known as chanche.

Anil, known scientifically as Indigofera anil, is a very hardy shrub growing luxuriantly in the driest coastal lands; it yields the richest blue dye, much used by Indians, but produces less pulp than I.
